PROTECTED BY LAW, but not protected well enough was this baldheaded eagle being cared for today by local naturalist Dave Hancock. Someone shot it up-Island last week and a reward has been posted for the gunman. The bullet pierced the left wing. Now, despite penicillin, the six-year-old bird whose seven-foot wingspread should be soaring over mountains, is thought to be dying. Mr. Hancock, left, and Al Oeming, Alberta Game Farm director, are as mad as the eagle looks. (Bill Halkett photo)

Tanker Towed Into Sound For Surveys

The battered Liberian tanker Mandoil II was towed into Nootka Sound on the west coast of Vancouver Island today by three Victoria tugs.

"She is being towed to a sheltered part of the sound, and should reach there before dark," said an official of Island Tug and Barge in Victoria.

"A survey will then be made to determine what repairs are necessary, and these will ultimately be done in Victoria or Vancouver."

The 23,500-ton tanker was met at the mouth of Nootka Sound by a barge from Victoria loaded with salvage and repair equipment.

Officials of Island Tug and Barge flew to the scene this morning and inspectors of the federal transport department checked the tanker for oil seepage.

SEEPAGE STOPPED

They reported the seepage had stopped and gave permission for the tanker to be towed into the sound.

More than 500,000 gallons of oil have seeped from the tanker since she collided with the Japanese freighter Suwahara Maru in dense fog 350 miles off the Oregon coast Feb. 28.

The four ruptured oil tanks have now been washed clean and other tanks are showing no sign of leakage.

The Victoria tugs Sudbury II and Island Sovereign fought a desperate battle in boiling seas to get tow lines attached to the floundering vessel and were assisted by the tug Island Monarch.

They towed the tanker to Nootka Sound on instructions from the owners because it was the most accessible and offers shelter while surveys are carried out. It was shorter than coming to Victoria.

Fires which have flared intermittently in the tanker's

TIDE OF OIL BLOTS BEACHES IN BAHAMAS

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — A tide of thick, black oil washed onto the pink beaches of Eleuthera Island today from the hold of a tanker battered by seas up to 20 feet and grounded on a reef near Point James.

A tug stood by half a mile from the 555-foot Gen. Colocotronis, waiting for seas to diminish. The U.S. Coast Guard in Miami said there seemed little hope of saving the grounded vessel.

Detergents to emulsify the oil were being flown from Florida and New York in an effort to keep the slick from spreading to all of the 100-mile seaward beaches on one of the most scenic islands of the Bahamas chain.

The Greek tanker washed onto the rocks Thursday night with a dead engine when the ship's fuel line broke and the engine room flooded.

Tax Approved In First Round

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Liberal government appears to be secure in office, at least until after a new leader is chosen to succeed Prime Minister Pearson.

That assumption, of course, is valid only if Liberal members and cabinet ministers remain close to their Commons seats and avoid the error of relying naively on the limited goodwill of the opposition.

Friday Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's new tax measures cleared their first hurdle as the resolution was passed 124 to 101, quickly followed by first reading of the bill.

On Monday the Commons will carry on with second reading of the tax bill and the optimistic view is that third and final reading may come within a couple of days.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas have indicated they do not intend to prevent an early decision on the bill.

Few opposition speakers are scheduled and the government obviously is planning to keep its troops in Ottawa for the votes which inevitably will be called.

Three weeks ago Mr. Sharp's original income tax bill was defeated in the Commons, throwing Parliament Hill into near-chaos.

The new bill spreads tax increases between individuals and corporations and Mr. Sharp has added such inducements as a further cut in government spending and a wage-price review board as evidence of his desire to promote financial and economic stability.

OPPOSED

His bill is not satisfactory to the Conservatives, New Democrats or Creditistes, who all reject increased taxes as the answer to current economic problems.

They will all probably vote against it, but in the minority House the Liberals need only one additional body to tie a vote plus Liberal Speaker Lucien Lamoureux to ensure a bare victory.

Such tight conditions will

'Campaign Of Slander'

KIESINGER
... issues warning

STUTTGART (AP) — Chancellor Kurt George Kiesinger said today internal critics are waging a campaign of "permanent slander" against the West German state.

Kiesinger said it has become more necessary than ever before to counter the attacks, and he warned of what he said are attempts by utopians of the "new left" to make a "pseudo-religion" of democracy.

President Heinrich Luebke and Kiesinger have been under fire for his former membership in the Nazi party.

IN RHODESIA MONDAY

Six Negroes To Be Hanged

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Lawyers today worked on last-minute appeals for the lives of six Negroes, scheduled to be hanged Monday, as Rhodesian leaders prepared for new fury abroad at the prospect of more executions.

Reliable sources said the six men will mount the gallows, three at a time, shortly after 8 a.m. in the small execution room at the Salisbury central prison.

Two of the condemned men, Francisc Chimsoro Chiresa and Takauyare Heremiah, have lodged appeals for clemency against their sentences, imposed for the shotgun killing of an African tribal chief.

Appeals for the other four also are expected to be lodged during the weekend.

Observers said Prime Minister Ian Smith and his cabinet were clearly determined to press ahead with the executions —barring successful appeals— despite the new wave of condemnation they can expect from abroad.

All six men have been imprisoned for three years or more.

Three of them were sentenced for gasoline bomb attacks on houses, a charge which carries a mandatory death sentence.

In London, Bernard Sheridan, the lawyer who petitioned the Queen to reprieve three men hanged Wednesday, said he did not think a similar petition would be made to her for the six.

'HUMANITY IGNORED' SAYS POPE

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul today deplored the hanging of three Negroes in Rhodesia and voiced his "deepest hope" that Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime would avoid future executions.

The spiritual leader of the Roman Catholic Church expressed this sentiment in a letter to the Archbishop of Salisbury, Most Rev. Francis William Markall.

The Pope said he had received with "deep pain" the news of the three hangings Wednesday.

He contended "the reasons of humanity" were ignored.

The letter was released at the Vatican after the pontiff celebrated mass in his private chapel with seminary students from South African countries.

The Vatican said the purpose of the mass was "to pray to God for Christian peace, civil concord and prosperity for those peoples troubled by racial questions and afflicted by the sad events of recent days."

N. Viet Shells Rock Khe Sanh

Times News Services

KHE SANH—A heavy North Vietnamese artillery barrage rocked the U.S. fortress here today, blowing up a depot containing tear gas bombs and sending fumes through bunkers filled with U.S. Marines. The death toll was not announced.

The gas cannisters were to have been used by the U.S. against North Vietnamese troops tunnneling under a barbed wire fence surrounding the fort.

The explosion today sent the gas over Marines holed up in bunkers of sandbags and concrete, forcing them to don gas masks.

More than 300 shells and rockets were fired from North Vietnamese gun positions on the surrounding hills in the heaviest attack in over two weeks of sporadic fighting.

Meanwhile Viet Cong troops continued to harass Saigon during the night, shelling a slum area and four military posts.

TET AFTERMATH

The shelling came in the wake of a government announcement today that the "last remnants" of a guerrilla force that infiltrated the South Vietnamese capital and its Chinese-populated twin city of Cholon for the Viet Cong Tet offensive in February have been "eliminated."

A government spokesman said the cities were "free" of Viet Cong after a month-long search-and-destroy operation which ended Friday.

During the operations, government troops killed 713 guerrillas, captured 41 and held 1,585 suspects for questioning, he said. Government casualties were put at 67 men killed, 216 wounded and three missing.

SHELL HOUSING AREA

In renewed attacks during the night, the Viet Cong slammed three mortar rounds into a police dependents' housing area in the slums of southern Saigon. Four civilians were killed and 20 were wounded.

Viet Cong troops shelled four other South Vietnamese military posts on the outskirts of Saigon. Casualties at two of the installations were not reported. At the third, spokesmen said there were none, but a quantity of ammunition went up in flames. At the fourth post, casualties were said to be light.

Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky today urged the Vietnamese people to "fight to the last man" to prevent the country from falling into Communist hands.

He was addressing a Saigon ceremony to decorate soldiers.

U.S. troops in armored personnel carriers battled the Viet Cong in heavy fighting along the coastal lowlands below Da Nang today.

First reports said 85 Viet Cong were killed, with the fighting continuing nine miles northwest of the provincial capital of Tam Ky.

Heavy fighting also was reported for the second day in a row along the eastern section of the demilitarized zone near Dong Ha, a supply centre for other bases along the frontier.

South Vietnamese headquarters said government infantry killed 50 guerrillas Friday. Nine South Vietnamese soldiers were killed.

GUN-PACKING ELEPHANTS U.S. TARGET

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. planes today bombed an elephant carrying ammunition on the Ho Chi-minh supply trail in the central highlands of South Vietnam.

Pilots reported four large elephants loaded with guns were moving toward the American base at Dak To.

Rockets were fired and bombs were dropped but three elephants escaped into the bush.

Tibet Torn By Fighting

DHARMASALA, India (Reuters) — The exiled Dalai Lama of Tibet today told of new reports that "fierce fighting" between two factions in Tibet was causing heavy casualties and cutting communications.

He said the fighting was between the "cultural revolutionary rebels," supported by militant Chinese Red Guards, and the "great alliance" supported by the military.

STUDENTS TRAP U.K. DEFENCE MINISTER IN CAB

Egg, Tomato Barrage for Healey

CAMBRIDGE. England (AP) — Violence erupted Friday night when 1,000 students battled 200 police fighting to protect Defence Minister Denis Healey.

Healey was trapped in his cab as it was kicked, and pelted with eggs and tomatoes by a screaming mob of left-wing demonstrators.

Police and students clashed as demonstrators tore into the cab, battering the roof, sides and hood and ripping off wing mirrors. A window was shattered.

Bicycles were hurled in front of the cab and several parked autos were lifted off the roadway and dumped on the sidewalk.

Healey, who sat grim-faced in the cab during the seven-minute siege, had addressed the university's Democratic Labor Club.

When he left he was confronted by students waving placards denouncing the Vietnam war and the Greek military regime.

The protest was organized by the University Labor Club, the Radical Students' Alliance and the University United Nations Association.

Gorge Has Not Been Posted That's the Point to Criticize

By JIM HUME

Bully for Dr. Kenneth Thornton who said Thursday that Victoria the beautiful was sitting on the edge of a volcano.

Dr. Thornton wasn't saying anything new when he termed Victoria's record for infectious hepatitis disgraceful. But he was saying it a little more strongly than senior metro health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

Hume

For at least the past three years Dr. Whitbread has maintained detailed records of outbreaks of infectious hepatitis. His map, like the map kept by Dr. Thornton, tells a dismal story of civic apathy.

Dr. Whitbread has told his story so many times, issued his warning of the grave danger of an outbreak of disease much more serious than hepatitis, that civic authorities smile sedately and, behind the worthy doctor's back, accuse him of crying wolf when no wolf is in sight.

Possibly with Dr. Thornton now joining Dr. Whitbread on the firing line those often smug community leaders will listen.

One of the more incredible reactions to past warnings from Dr. Whitbread comes from that segment of the community who think he is striking a low blow when he advocates the placing of signs from Portage Inlet to the Inner Harbor to advise residents and visitors that the water is polluted and unsafe for swimming.

The signs, they sputter, their mouths full of the sand they bury their heads in, are bad for morale, bad for tourists and are just generally not nice.

●

Of course they're not nice. They're not supposed to be nice. They are supposed to be hefty lancets aimed at the conscience of the community.

As for the tourists, surely it is far better that they should know where they should not paddle in the water than that a gaggle of them should come down with some nice disease like typhoid.

Can't the people who whimper in protest understand what Dr. Thornton and Dr. Whitbread are saying?

"It seems quite certain that this (hepatitis) is a disease associated with water-borne feces," says Dr. Thornton.

If there is to be any criticism of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health and its senior health officer, let it not be a criticism aimed at what they're doing with signs, but rather the reverse.

●

The signs should have been posted a long time ago. More important the health board should start invoking its powers and hammering hard the owners of property on which faulty septic tanks are located.

Dr. Thornton says many of the tanks in the Portage Inlet-Gorge area are not just substandard, but nearly criminal. Dr. Whitbread and his health crews will agree.

Then why, in the name of reason, don't they slap a few charges against the offenders, close down a motel or so and order a couple of service stations to rectify the situation or get out of business?

Of course the people would scream, but they would also straighten-up and do something.

One thing the first charges would do for sure, they would end the apathy with which the vast majority view a shocking situation.

One of the more amazing aspects of the Gorge pollution problem is the "so who cares" attitude of the folks living on well-sewered streets in Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt.

The Gorge situation, to hear them talk, belongs to the Gorge people and is of no concern to anyone else.

Fantastic. Can this total community be so stupid as to believe that if a major epidemic is spawned in the Gorge area it will politely stay there?

●

Bacteria and disease, unfortunately, have never been known for readily recognizing municipal boundaries or any other boundaries.

If and when an epidemic strikes it will hit Greater Victoria, not just the people near the Gorge. And that includes little Johnny, ma'am, who just came in from playing and looks a little flushed.

You should be worried.

One thing about working in a hospital, if you get hurt you don't need an ambulance. But don't think for a moment that you can't get hurt.

Figures just released by Royal Jubilee show that 212 injuries were sustained by staff workers in the past 4½ months.

There were 116 cuts, 28 scalds, nine contusions and seven backstrains and 52 miscellaneous hurts suffered. Nurses and aides were hurt 59 times and housekeepers were next (45).

We asked why nurses and aides racked up 30 cuts. We were told that's a good question and the hospital will look into it.

We've just found out we've been holding up traffic in school zones and playgrounds. Wherever we've seen the signs during appropriate hours we've cut back to 20 despite the dirty looks from impatient drivers behind us. We were sure we were right and justice would triumph.

Alas both Victoria police and Motor Vehicles Superintendent Ray Hadfield have advised that it is not necessary to drive at 20 in such zones unless there is a "20 miles per hour" sign attached beneath the zone sign.

Where there is no such figure all that is required is that you drive through the school or playground zone with caution although there's nothing wrong with slowing down.

We'll wager we are not the only ones who didn't know about the relaxed regulations.

THREE VICTIMS

Insulin Murderer Gets Gas Chamber

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Dale Archerd, convicted of killing two of his seven wives and a teen-aged nephew with insulin injections, was sentenced to death Friday.

Superior Court Judge Adloph Alexander, who heard the first-degree murder case without a jury, decided the sentence after hearing penalty arguments and testimony about the former hospital attendant's health.

Dr. Joseph Marx testified that Archerd, 51, has chronic heart disease, arterio sclerosis and latent diabetes and has only a 50-50 chance of living another five years.

The prosecution called as a medical witness Dr. Irwin Hoffman, chief of cardiology at Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Centre.

Hoffman said Archerd has no apparent heart disease but may suffer from pulmonary emphysema and coronary artery disease.

"I disagree strongly with Dr. Marx on the physical findings," said Hoffman. He also disagreed with Marx's estimate of Archerd's life expectancy.

Archerd was convicted Wednesday, the first person in the United States found guilty of murder by injecting insulin. In excess, insulin, a natural hormone, burns up blood sugar and sends the victim into fatal shock.

Archerd was convicted of killing Zella Winders Archerd, 48, his fourth wife, in 1956; Mary Brinker Post Arden, 60, his seventh wife, in 1966; and Burney Kirk Archerd, 15, his nephew, in 1961.

Skeletons 'Publicity Stunt'

STAR CITY, Ark. (UPI) —A grand jury said Friday the unearthing of three broken human skeletons at the Cummins State Prison Farm Jan. 29 was a "publicity stunt" staged by Thomas Murton, who has been fired as Arkansas prison superintendent.

The county grand jury said Murton set up the digging "for the news media . . . for camera and crew operations."

"It is the unanimous decision of this grand jury that this whole episode was designed as a publicity stunt for the personal benefit of Mr. Murton, abetted and aided by Dr. Edwin Barron with the consent of Mr. Bob Scott at the expense of the state of Arkansas and the present administration," the jury said.

Barron is former prison physician and Scott is an official in Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's office.

The discovery of the skeletons came after widespread reports that a reign of murder and terror existed at Cummins for years before Rockefeller brought Murton in last year to clean up what the governor and penologists called the worst prison system in the country.

Rites Friday For Retired City Lawyer

Funeral services were held at Chaplin's Funeral Chapel Friday for Robert Laughlin McQuarrie, ED, KC, 2151 Haultain Street, well-known Victoria lawyer, who died here Tuesday. He was 72.

Born in Minnedosa, Man., he resided at Brandon, Man., before coming to Victoria 19 years ago. He was former partner in the law firm of R. H. Green.

A veteran of two world wars, he served as adjutant-general in the Second World War.

He was a member of the Kinsmen Club, a lieutenant-governor of the Northwest Kiwanis, a member of the Brandon Masons and a member of the Brandon Canadian Club.

He is survived by his wife, Norma, at home, and a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Arnold, of Victoria.

Rev. Douglas Kendall officiated at the service.

Church Seeks Art Works

Pictures and sculptures are wanted for an art exhibition to be held at First United Church March 27-30.

Theme of the exxhibition is The Search for Meaning.

"Art works may be on any subject but should deal with it in a way that portrays the search or the answer to the meaning of life," says Rev. Marvin Fowler.

Mr. Fowler can be contacted at the church.

Didn't Have Licence

Jan Peter Olson, 18, of 1449 Grant, was fined $150 in central court Friday for driving while his licence was under suspension.

Court was told he had been stopped the night of Jan. 27 on Beach Drive for having faulty taillights on his car.

not prevail as the four-man Social Credit group has already announced, albeit reluctantly, that it will support the government.

So much for the "numbers game" which, of course, will only work if the Liberals themselves break a very bad habit of spotty attendance in the Commons.

Under strict orders from Mr. Pearson another slip-up is unlikely, and on Friday observers were treated to a rare sight of the entire cabinet and all but seven Liberals on hand for the vote.

OTHER SIDE

On the other side there were several holes, mainly in the Conservative ranks.

Part of the reason for this is not lack of party discipline but the fact that several Tories privately admit they have no desire to form a government at this time.

They have no wish to inherit the current finacial difficulties which are keeping Mr. Sharp up half the night and forcing him to cancel active campaigning for the Liberal leadership.

They, and that includes Mr. Stanfield, are seemingly content to wait awhile until the new Liberal leader is chosen and possibly tarnished from the start by national problems already associated with the government.

SEVEN MONTHS

Then, when an election comes, Mr. Stanfield will be able to face the voters with the image of reason and durable caution which he has been trying to fashion for the past seven months.

Anothe consideration which cools Tory election fever is the view that it is not "cricket" to push the government to the limit at a time when it is changing leaders.

When the tax bill was defeated on Feb. 19 many members were surprised at the strong reaction from constituents who felt that the Liberals should be given the same opportunity for an orderly exchange of leadership as the Conservatives enjoyed last September.

And, on top of everything, the international pressure on the British pound, the American dollar and automatically the Canadian dollar has convinced most thinking politicians that further uncertainty can only harm the country.

COME FROM TOKYO

Meantime officials from as far distant as Tokyo flew to Victoria to inspect the battered, fire-scorched hull of the Japanese freighter Suwaharu Maru at Ogden Point.

Unloading of 3,000,000 board feet of logs from the decks of the battered ship began at 8 a.m. and will continue all today and Sunday.

The operation is being carried out by Empire Stevedoring Co. Ltd. of Victoria. Simultaneously, ship's surveyors are making a detailed examination of the freighter to determine what repairs are necessary.

"Many detailed calculations will have to be made before we invite tenders," said a representative of the ship's owners, Yamashita Shinnon Line of Japan.

Cong Execute 400 Civilians

SAIGON (Reuters)—The Viet Cong killed more than 400 civilians during their 26-day occupation of the city of Hue, the U.S. embassy announced here today.

An embassy spokesman said reports from the combined interrogation centre at Hue, the ancient imperial capital in the northern part of South Vietnam, substantiated eyewitness accounts adding up to that figure.

Those killed included local officials and their families.

The spokesman also said three more mass graves containing the bodies of more than 100 civilians, including women and children with their hands tied behind their backs, were uncovered in the Gia Hoi district, in northern Hue.

He said that for the last 10 days military intelligence officers questioned hundreds of Viet Cong prisoners and suspects at the interrogation centre.

The officers also received scores of reports from South Vietnamese who said they were eyewitnesses to Viet Cong executions, the spokesman added.

He said local families led government officials to the graves.

The spokesman said local officials estimated Viet Cong execution squads killed at least 300 persons in the Roman Catholic neighborhood of Phu Cam on the south side of Hue.

Two French priests who went into the area Feb. 25 to retrieve a sacred tabernacle were reported shot to death.

One officer of the combined interrogation centre in Hue was quoted as saying "the NVA (North Vietnamese Army) and the VC (Viet Cong)" had the names and addresses of the people they wanted to get, and they had their own order of priorities for the ones they wanted to kill.

"Their victims were mainly police, political leaders, government and local civil servants, anyone who worked for the Americans and anybody who was known for his active support of the government."

The spokesman also said 5,831 civilians were killed so far this year in Viet Cong terrorism across the country. He said the guerrillas abducted 2,783 civilians, and more than 3,000 others disappeared.

1ST CLASS DRINKERS TO PAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has come out in favor of a pay-as-you-drink policy.

The government regulatory body of airlines in the United States told the airlines Friday the cost of alcoholic beverages should be borne by those who drink them and not shared by non-drinkers.

This struck at the heart of a long-standing airline practice of offering drinks without charge to passengers in first class.

Those in the rear of the plane have always been charged for whatever they drink—usually at $1 a drink.

No Sex Hormones In Chicks Here

The law in Canada prohibits chickens being fed sex hormones to stimulate growth, Victoria pathologist Dr. Kenneth Thornton said Friday.

He was clarifying a statement he made during a lecture on pollution Thursday at the University of Victoria. He said then that sex hormones fed chickens have produced cancer in laboratory experiments. But he did not say where this practice occurs.

"It's illegal in Canada," he said Friday.

Four Fined For Failure To File Tax

Four persons pleaded guilty in central court Friday to charges of failing to file income tax return forms for 1966.

Magistrate William Ostler assessed the minimum penalty of $25 fine for each of them.

Fined were: Kenneth Mitchell, 2527 Chelsea, who said he did not receive a demand for his form by registered mail; Kenneth Jolley, 2023 Kendall; John Molyard, 2170 Newton, and Walter MacKay, 3246 Alder.

JACKET OFF, Liberal leadership candidate Robert Winters seems ready for shirtsleeves campaign. But he's really changing to heavy weather clothing at start of Maritime speech tour. With him are two Dalhousie U students in Halifax. (CP Wirephoto)

GRIT CANDIDATES ON MOVE

'Foreign Investment Keeps Us Fat'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Togged in a yellow south'wester and slicker, Trade Minister Robert Winters kicked off his Liberal leadership campaign Friday night at Halifax with a speech in which he said Canada cannot exclude foreign investment without a lower standard of living.

At a later news conference Mr. Winters said he was beginning his active campaign at Halifax because that was where he was brought up.

One of 12 candidates for the Liberal party leadership, he said he believed in economic nationalism but Canada cannot grow without foreign investment.

Another candidate, Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, said in London, Ont., he thinks Canada is doing the right thing in calling for a stop to the bombing in Vietnam.

'HELP OURSELVES'

But in supplying arms to the U.S. "we are doing it not to help the United States war effort, but doing it to help ourselves.". Under current economic conditions Canada could not change this policy.

If he bacame prime minister "I don't think the content of that policy would be greatly changed."

"We can't claim to decide for the U.S. what their foreign policy is. We must try to concentrate our efforts in areas where they can have the most influence."

External Affairs Minister Martin carried his campaign to Prince Edward Island, promising "pleasing" news about the airbase at Summerside, which had been rumored in the process of closing.

Mr. Martin was met at the airport by demonstrating students from Prince of Wales College and St. Dunstan's University. He described the demonstration as "rather unique" in that most of those involved favored Canada's policy in the war in Vietnam.

Candidate Eric Kierans told a Prince Albert, Sask., audience there seemed "to be a breakdown between Quebec and Ottawa which, I feel, can be resolved."

Referring to the Gabon incident, in which the West African country invited Quebec to take part in an international conference, Mr. Kierans said relations between provinces and other countries must be carried out in such a way it didn't humiliate the country.

Warsaw Students Clubbed

By VICTOR ZORZA
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON—Hundreds of militiamen, swinging truncheons, fought students in central Warsaw Friday after what had begun as a peaceful demonstration.

The Warsaw demonstration was the culmination of a protest movement against censorship which has spread from Poland's writers to the student masses.

The same kind of interaction between writers and students in Czechoslovakia contributed greatly to the basic change of political direction now taking place in Prague.

The other East European regimes have taken steps to restrict the flow of information on the developments in Czechoslovakia. But the news has been getting through unofficial channels, such as Western Broadcast, and stimulating further foment in the other countries.

The Warsaw demonstration suggests that the pressures for liberaliztion might again spread in much the same way as in 1956, when sparks struck during demonstrations in Poland lit the fire of revolt in Hungary.

PLAY BANNED

Friday's demonstration, according to reports from Warsaw, began when some 4,000 students marched through the grounds of the university chanting demands for the reinstatement of two colleagues, who had been victimized for taking part in an earlier demonstration. The demonstration was held in protest against the banning of a play which had given rise to anti-Russian demonstrations.

The play, called "Dziady" (forefathers), is a classic written in the last century by Poland's greatest poet, Adam Mickiewicz, who is revered by the Poles in much the same way as Shakespeare is by the English.

Friday the students chanted "We Want Dziady" and "Long Live the Writers." They marched to the administration buildings demanding to see the rector, and chanting "No Study Without Freedom." When they were told that the rector was not in, they agreed, after some good-natured jeering, to send a delegation to see him on Monday.

Up to that point there had been only some minor clashes with some of the 500 plainclothes auxiliary police brought in to control the demonstration.

POLICE ALARMED

However, the police evidently became alarmed at this stage, and more than 25 truckloads of armed militia (police) were rushed to the university. They sealed off the street approaches to the university, diverted traffic and rushed at the students with truncheons to the sound of angry shouts of "Gestapo" from the crowds.

The presence of large numbers of militia in the grounds, and the prompt arrival of reinforcements, suggest that the authorities were concerned lest the demonstratiion should spill out into the streets of the capital. They have managed to prevent this, but only at the cost of creating an incident which will add fuel to the smoldering intellectual discontent.

Careless Driver

William Taylor, 34, of 404 Moresby, was fined $35 in central court Friday for careless driving. He struck a youth on a bicycle on Head Street Jan. 31 at 7:40 p.m.

Democracy Back, Says Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — President Juan Carlos Ongania's government, outlining its goals for Argentina, declared Friday a return to democracy, with free enterprise and a free press to be among its policy aims.

A newly formulated internal policy would allow maximum freedom of expression and the use of news and broadcasting media "in a manner compatible with morals and public responsibility," the government said in a document circulated to senior government officials.

In the economic field the administration would clamp down on monopolistic activities and would promote competition and freedom of decision for producers and consumers.

The foundations would also be laid for a return to representative democracy and for an efficient federal system, the document said.

All legislative bodies were suppressed and elected representatives were replaced by government appointees when a bloodless military coup brought the current administration to power in June, 1966.

Habitual Criminals Can't Appeal Terms

B.C. should ask Justice Minister Trudeau to widen his proposed amendments to the Criminal Code to eliminate an anomoly that allows an habitual criminal to appeal everything but his sentence, the legislature was told Thursday.

Tom Berger (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision has resulted in the situation which is disturbing defence and prosecuting lawyers alike.

He said the consequence has been that a man who has been sentenced to indeterminate preventativ detention can launch an appeal against the declaration he is an habitual criminal on which the penalty is based.

Yet he is not allowed to appeal the sentence itself which is virtually for life.

Mr. Berger said it was an important matter in this province because the Vancouver prosecutor's office had sent 1 as habitual more men to jail as habitual criminals than any other jurisdiction in Canada.

He also said the law should be clarified so that homosexuality between consenting adults was not held, in itself, to be a psychopathetic sexual act which could result in preventative detention too. He said a recent court judgment had revealed this possibility.

Army Chiefs Bid to Oust Czech Leader

PRAGUE (AP)—Czechoslovakia's new reformist leaders appear on the verge of ousting old-line Communist President Antonin Novotny.

A party group in the army's general staff—in a move unprecedented in any Communist country—issued a public demand Friday for the resignation of Novotny and other top orthodox officials.

The army chiefs blame Novotny for covering up the alleged corruption case of Maj.-Gen. Jan Sejna, who defected to the United States Wednesday.

Western analysts said the Sejna case paved the way for reformist leaders under newly-elected party head Alexander Dubcek to speed up personnel changes they otherwise would have tackled more cautiously.

FLEES TO WEST

Sejna, a top fuctionary in the Czech defence department, is believed to be the highest military man from Eastern Europe ever to defect to the West. He was a key figure in the abortive attempt last January to thwart the removal of Novotny as party leader.

The general also is implicated in an illegal deal with a farming co-operative that netted $42,000 through the sale of grass seed to peasants.

In an interview with a Prague newspaper today, Novotny's son portrayed Gen. Sejna as a heavy-spending woman-chaser who had trouble making ends meet on his salary of $1,200 a month—five times that of the average industrial workers.

DEMAND CHANGES

The general staff officers' demands for a housecleaning were raised in two open letters Friday to party chief Dubcek.

The Prague correspondent of the Yugoslavian news agency Tanjug filed a report saying that it was open talk in Prague that "it's not possible for Novotny to be a member of the presidium of the central committee anymore."

The Yugoslavian reporter said Novotny's fate will be decided when the central committee meets in April—"unless it comes to a faster change."

Sejna's future is less imperiled. Czech authorities have asked the United States to send the general home on grounds that he is charged with "common crimes." Washington officials have said, however, that Sejna would appear to be a political refugee, despite other charges against him, and probably would not be extradited.

Province To Adopt Tire Code

The B.C. government is prepared to require adherence to a proposed new national code on automobile tires.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the legislature that B.C. is prepared to do so immediately or "not later than July 1" if other provinces join in to make it uniform.

He said among improvements in the new tire standards would be the obligatory inclusion of a "wear strip" by manufacturers which would enable a purchaser to determine accurately how much safe wear remained in the tire.

He also revealed he hopes to obtain authorization in the not too distant future to add to motor vehicle regulations the compulsory provision of shoulder harness, as an improvement on seat belts.

And Mr. Bonner said he has instructed his staff to let him know immediately there is general scientific acceptance of a device to reduce exhaust pollution by automobiles so it could be added in B.C. regulations.

He was commenting on suggestions by David Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam) that the province adopt a code of minimum safety devices that all manufacturers would have to meet before their vehicles could be sold in the province.

RELATIONS COOL

U.S. Calls Home Envoy to Sweden

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coolness in Swedish-American relations over the U.S. role in Vietnam has prompted Washington to recall its ambassador to Stockholm for discussions.

Ambassador William Heath, whose life was recently threatened, will fly home Monday for an indefinite stay to review "all aspects of U.S.-Swedish relations," the state department said Friday.

The state department said "he will return to Stockholm in due course."

One incident apparently leading up to the recall occurred Feb. 21, when Education Minister Olof Palme of Sweden marched with other demonstrators opposed to the U.S. military campaign in Vietnam. The demonstrators also included North Vietnam's embassador to Moscow.

The U.S. did not formally protest the Palme incident but the American Embassy in Stockholm made clear such behavior by a cabinet minister was considered highly inappropriate.

VIETNAM PROTESTS

Sweden has been the scene of steadily increasing violent incidents and demonstrations during the last year related to the Vietnam issue, culminating with receipt of a letter threatening Heath's life. Police assigned a bodyguard to the American diplomat.

In other Vietnam-related developments:

—A spokesman for Canada's justice department said in Ottawa an investigation is under way involving reports that pamphlets advocating the sabotage of U.S. selective service offices and harassment of draft-board officials throughout the U.S. originated in Canada. Selective service headquarters in Washington said earlier this week the pamphlets were printed in Toronto.

The pamphlets are reported being distributed to more than 300 anti-war groups in the U.S.

—The American students at Oxford University, including two Rhodes scholars and three Fulbright scholars, ended a five-day fast Friday which they undertook in protest against the war. They donated about $50 of their food money to the International Red Cross for aid to war victims in North and South Vietnam.

With Qualifications

AS THE LEGISLATURE PREpares to debate the details of the government's controversial new labor legislation, several aspects should be kept in mind. The concept of the mediation commission is a good one. As a continuing authority for investigation and research in labor problems and a compiler of statistical information it should be able to provide a very useful background for labor negotiations of all kinds in this province.

Its proposed function in arbitration of disputes is a necessary one, best performed by a quasi-judicial authority free of political influences. The provision of expert mediation officers would add a very desirable factor to the labor negotiations of this province. And the new measure appears to give recognition to the essential need for full protection of the public interest in labor disputes. The machinery proposed for achieving these ends is, in principle, adequate.

There are, however, some questionable aspects of the proposed mediation system. It will be necessary that the commissioners and the mediation officers, having been specially selected for their abilities, be able to carry out their duties without fear of removal except for reasons of morals or competence. The bill provides for appointments "not exceeding ten years," but this very flexible arrangement could be improved.

The independence of incumbents would be strengthened by giving them security of tenure for at least ten years with removal only through an act of the Legislature.

It is doubtful, too, if the government is wise to move ahead so rapidly on the critical issue of binding arbitration. It might be better to permit the new mediation arrangements to become operative and demonstrably successful before burdening them with the highly explosive question of binding decisions. This objective could then be approached on a basis of gradual implementation as the principle became acceptable to public opinion.

The power which the act would give the cabinet, to decide on an ad hoc basis which industries are essential, could have two unfavorable effects. One is that any labor dispute could thereby become a political matter rather than a question to be settled solely on a judicial basis. And, equally disturbing, the parties to a dispute would enter the negotiating process without knowing in advance what the exact terms of reference were, since the cabinet could interject the factor of "public interest and welfare" in the last stage of the proceedings.

These disadvantages could perhaps be overcome by empowering the commission to make the question of essentiality an integral part of the mediation process. Or all doubts could be settled in advance by specifying in law which industries or services are essential in the public interest, and adding to the list as experience and public acceptance made this feasible.

The proposed legislation is an attempt to meet one of the most difficult and demanding social and economic problems of our time. Under such conditions the government would be wise to keep open a receptive ear for further suggestions and advice. In the final analysis, the acceptance of labor, and of the public in general, must be won if legislation is to succeed.

A Decision To Be Made

IN ITS FEBRUARY 28 EDITION of "Facts on Fish" the Fisheries Association of B.C. draws attention to rigorous regulations imposed by the Argentine over foreign fishing in seas extending 200 miles from its coastline.

The publication notes that Argentina's action parallels earlier decisions by Ecuador, Chile and Peru to claim territorial jurisdiction extending 200 miles from their shores. A glance at the map shows that effective enforcement of this jurisdiction puts a fence around most of the western coast of South America, and a good deal of the eastern. Entering through the fence legally can be expensive for North American fishermen, but not so costly as entering it illegally if they are caught.

The implication in the fisheries publication is twofold. Reference to the action of South American nations on seaboard rights suggests an example for Canada. And it also suggests that as fishing becomes more difficult for Americans off South America, fishing may be more highly intensified off accessible North American coasts.

"For many years now," says Facts on Fish, "the Canadian government has been considering and promising measures to reserve Canadian fisheries for Canadians. But apart from a recent declaration of a straight baseline for the 12-mile fishing limit off Labrador and part of Newfoundland, it has done little more than deliberate and talk."

It is no secret, of course, that the co-ordinates Canada desires to anchor baselines for its declared 12-mile fisheries limits have not won approval from the United States. It seems doubtful that the decision of South American countries to set 200-mile limits did, either.

The Canadian fishing industry on the Pacific Coast has no alternative to exercising patience on the question, since only Canada can fix the baselines. But that patience is wearing very thin — as a Canadian government beset with a large net full of troubles should realize.

Seeds of Dissension

CZECH GENERAL JAN SEJNA, who fled his country one step ahead of an army shake-up which would likely have ended in his arrest, has placed the United States in an awkward position by his request for political asylum.

Defecting Communists, particularly if they have intelligence secrets to bargain with, are generally welcome in western countries. But General Sejna is not a defecting Communist; on the contrary he is a hard-line Communist who appears to have been implicated in a plot to over-turn a more liberal Czech regime and return power to the conservatives headed by President Novotny.

The affair has taken on rather ludicrous overtones since the Czech embassy in Washington demanded that General Sejna be extradited and returned home to face charges of swindling the government out of some $20,000 in a deal involving grass and clover seed. It seems odd that the chief of the Communist party committee of the Czech Ministry of National Defence, a member of the army's general staff and of the presidium of the National Assembly, would be dealing in these commodities. But since only criminal charges, not political, are valid ground for extradition, the $20,000 swindle story was evidently necessary.

Despite his background it would be uncharitable to return the general to Czechoslovakia, where even a liberal Communist regime might toss him into prison for his political activities. But what does the United States want with a Communist general of Stalinist leanings, beyond the secrets he may be willing to divulge? It is a difficult question because there could well be more men like General Sejna fleeing Communist countries as the political climate of Eastern Europe changes.

To Help Suffering Children

A recent CP dispatch concerns the Canadian member of the International Federation Terre des Hommes, founded in Switzerland in 1960 for the purpose of giving immediate aid to suffering children anywhere in the world.

A press conference was called recently to announce the granting of a federal charter to the Canadian section, so that donations can now be acknowledged by official receipts. Total money collected is used to bring to this country well-selected children in need of medical or surgical treatment not available in their homeland, to pay hospital per-diem costs and to return the young ones to their homes after cure. All professional services are donated free and all administrative expenses are borne personally by members of the committee.

DEEPER THAN GRASSROOTS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Gold of Truth in the Bed of Crocus Blooms

Hutchison

THE old gardener knelt on the soil of Vancouver Island today, not exactly in prayer but in a religious state of mind. He was kneeling among a swarm of golden and purple crocus blossoms to extract certain unwelcome weeds and his thoughts of Christian charity strayed to all the under-privileged Canadians east of the Pacific coast who have yet to see a single spring flower. Especially he remembered, with a compassion too deep for tears, the 265 members of Parliament who pray daily for divine guidance but seldom seem to get it.

Their anguish greatly moved the old gardener, though it does not often move the public. They were locked up, like convicted criminals, in a stone prison, oddly enough, by their own free choice. Mankind, he reflected is a queer species, the only one that ever imprisons itself voluntarily as the highest reward for national service.

Having fought their elections, the prisoners were now fighting a kind of endless civil war, just short of violence. And for what reason? Because, presumably, they thought that the whole future of the nation depended upon half a dozen parliamentary votes, or the passing whim of Real Caouette, who changed his mind regularly three times a day. But as the old gardener saw it, the nation, outside the walls of Ottawa, was doing pretty well, except in Hansard and the headlines.

The crocus blooms had appeared on schedule and went about their business as if they had never heard of Parliament. They looked even more colorful and glamorous than Pierre Elliott Trudeau and almost as relaxed and stately as Robert Stanfield without any help from the television interviewers and the cosmetic make-up experts.

The bees were buzzing noisily while they extracted the crocus nectar without any regard for points of order, and ignorant of the new economics, were making a balanced budget of honey as no finance minister was able to do nowadays. And from the swamp nearby the frog chorus was shouting a unanimous vote of confidence in its mysterious government without one voice of opposition.

Too Seriously

Perhaps, the old gardener suspected, the rulers of the nation took themselves too seriously when, in fact, their laws, for the most part, were ultra vires and impotent at this season, invalidated by a final court of appeal to which men gave various names.

Anyway, only a tiny minority of Canadian life, animal, insect and vegetable, a fraction too small to be written in figures, paid the slightest attention to Parliament. Even among the 20 million human inhabitants, a fraction of a fraction, interest was minimal and brief, most of them being far more concerned with private affairs untouched by any statute.

And yet the parliamentarians argued furiously, the commentators commented learnedly, the editors wrote solemn editorials and the Liberal party chose convention delegates in the pathetic belief that they were settling the fate of a world that hardly noticed them. The pity of it.

Very likely, the old gardener supposed, the politicians, the businessmen, the labor unions and their back-room advisers would twist the economic system into a knot difficult to unravel and might well devalue the currency before they were finished. But if they did, the real governing system and life apparatus would continue quite unchanged, beyond their control. The original machine of production would still work even if all men were idle or dead. The basic currency with which all but a few living creatures conducted their perpetual exchange would always be at par, the vast trade of root and bud and sap would remain in perfect equilibrium without loans from the International Monetary Fund.

Illusions Gone

His youthful illusions long gone after a lifetime in the outdoors, the old gardener knew, of course, that the struggle of the soil was just as fierce and ruthless as the struggle of politics in Ottawa. Only the thin surface wore a look of peace. Beneath it, the frail crocus fought desperately for life against the more powerful weeds, the gardener's shrubs contended with the roots of the mighty oaks and in a few days his first potato seeds must meet the market competition of destroying insects, spores and diseases innumerable. From Privy Council chamber to the remote wilderness the same process was under way in the springtime.

Well, at least the non-human contenders for leadership managed to conduct their warfare with some semblance of order as the humans evidently could not, and the result, a dependable cabinet solidarity, was never in doubt. The true leaders invariably emerged in the end, the incompetents were silently pushed aside and by the ultimate democratic method the majority prevailed without a division bell, a counting of votes or a weary witticism from T. C. Douglas.

Kneel Humbly

It might be a good thing, the gardener concluded, if Parliament could leave its self-chosen cell for an hour or two, kneel humbly amid the crocus blooms and realize that it didn't really amount to much in the general scheme. Unfortunately, in frigid Ottawa, the crocuses would bloom too late to solve the latest crisis as it was already solved on Vancouver Island. Queen Victoria had put the capital in the wrong place, far from reality.

Still, the gardener had not entirely lost his faith in man's fragile laws, and with a gesture of respect at the end of the day he partook of a cheap beverage, highly taxed to make it expensive. Though Parliament might fail everywere else, it rarely failed in that vital task. But happily, for all its power, it could not tax anything of importance. All the important things would be offered cheap at the spring bargain counter, so long as Parliament didn't hear about them. So he resolved to keep his secret as no cabinet ever can.

A Glimmer of Hope for Middle East Peace Talks

Frye

A FAINT glow of hope for peace in the Middle East has begun to appear here. It is so faint, and so evanescent, that people who are cultivating it scarcely dare to speak above a whisper. But it is there. This a welcome piece of news, indeed, in a world so plagued by conflict that one scarcely knows where violence will break out next. A UN mediator, Dr. Gunnar V. Jarring of Sweden, seems—at this writing—on the verge of bringing Israel and two of the Arab states, the United Arab Republic and Jordan, together for indirect peace talks.

No one equates conversations, if they occur, with an early peace settlement; but the mere fact of negotiations would be an achievement well beyond the expectations of many observers at the time the three-month-old Jarring mission was launched.

Its importance can be measured by estimating the world's reaction if a UN mediator seemed about to bring the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the National Liberation Front into an active exchange of views, through him, on a Vietnam settlement.

Eat Their Words

Peace talks are no easier to achieve in the Mideast than they would be for Vietnam. If anything, they are harder. Antagonisms and rigidities extending back for generations are having to be submerged.

Both the Arabs and Israel are having to eat their words.

The Arabs are having to swallow a pledge never to negotiate with Israel until after all occupied territory had been surrendered.

For many months, they tried to persuade themselves that diplomatic pressure in the UN, plus intermittent guerrilla terrorism and the threat implicit in a Soviet-backed re-armament program could lure or force Israeli troops back behind the prewar armistice lines.

That hope was always an illusion. The Arabs now appear to recognize this. They seem ready to talk about paying a political and military price to purchase an Israeli withdrawal.

If so, this is a major gain in the direction of realism.

In return, Israel has abandoned a demand that peace talks take place directly between the parties, without an intermediary.

She is also helping the Arabs save face by "accepting" a UN resolution which the Arabs say commits her to put all her conquered territory on the bargaining table.

The resolution, passed by the 15-natoin Security Council last Nov. 22, did not say Israel should withdraw from "all" occupied territory: it said ". . . from territories occupied in the recent conflict."

The word "all" was deliberately omitted, at Israel's insistence, in order to open the door to possible retention of East Jerusalem, Gaza and perhaps portions of the former Jordanian West Bank.

Israel still does not agree with the Arab contention that "all" was implicit in the resolution. But she apparently is willing once again to paper over and obscure the disagreement, just as the Security Council did last fall in order to get Jarring's mission authorized.

Exactly what territory will in fact be evacuated, and how high a price the Arabs will pay for the withdrawal, are still very much in doubt.

The Israeli asking price remains what it has always been: a binding peace treaty, establishing recognized borders and permitting free use of waterways in the area, including the Suez Canal.

There would also, as Israel sees it, be demilitarized zones along some or all of the frontiers; and the Arab states would resettle many or most of the refugees that fled from Israeli territory in 1948 and 1967.

The Arabs are far from ready to pay anything like this price. Nor do they want to buy back only part of their previous possessions.

No New Borders

The implication that borders should be redrawn, with Israel left holding territory not hers before the war, is especially objectionable to them—even though Jordan, too, might benefit from frontier changes by obtaining a land corridor to the Mediterranean.

Other elements of the negotiating picture seem less rigidly frozen than they were last November.

Demilitarized zones — except where they are most needed: namely, on the Syrian frontier—might not be an insuperable problem, UN people believe. Israeli use of the Gulf of Aquaba undoubtedly could be reaffirmed.

The Suez Canal is something else again. On occasion, Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser has seemed to hint that it might be made available, at least to Israeli cargoes, if there were to be a satisfactory refugee settlement.

But "satisfactory" in his eyes presumably would mean a massive repatriation of more than a million Arabs to Israel, and this does not seem to be in the cards.

Thus the gap between the two sides remains great. But it is not true that it is as wide as it was the day the war ended.

In seeking to arrange preconditions for a negotiation, Jarring has chipped away at the fringes of substantive differences separating the parties.

This much progress, UN people feel, is very much to be welcomed.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

As you drive over the Island Highway to Niagara Canyon for a hike up to the falls, you can note the wonderful colors along the route. The alders in some places are in full pollen as well as the hazel. They, mingled with the grey-white of the willows, provide a contrast to the background of the conifers.

As you clamber up to the falls, stop and look at the poly-pody ferns growing out of the rock face. Some of them are over 14 inches in length. They wave as the spray from the tumbling waters falls on them.

Stop and examine some of the beautiful mosses that cling to the rocks. See the rosette flower-like form of some and others with a hair-like stem tipped by a tiny spore capsule.

Along the way there is a small shelf. Growing there are a group of young maples. On every one of them, to a height of about a foot, are mosses. They are all even in the height of the moss growth. Perhaps this is the result of the constant mist from the falls.

As you turn around the bend, the falls come into view. They are spectacular, with the water breaking on the rocky ledges. As you watch, the pattern changes every second and the water is milky white as it picks up air.

The pool at the foot seems to boil, forming miniature waves that tumble over the rocky lip and rush down stream.

The bed of this stream is entirely comprised of rock of many forms, shapes and sizes. As the water pours over them it changes its pattern every few yards.

Since the stream bed is made up of many dykes and faults, a great deal of the water goes "underground". When it reaches the culvert the stream has only half the water that was seen to leave the pool.

Americans Have Lost Control Of Large Areas of S. Vietnam

By GAVIN YOUNG

SAIGON—I have never known Saigon like this. It is a city under siege.

It is not the only Vietnamese city under siege—today they all are in varying degrees—but it is the key to the war, and there are two Viet Cong divisions on its outskirts.

Last week a senior American officer on General Westmoreland's staff admitted that there are 15,000 Viet Cong troops a few kilometres away and that perhaps they can come in. It was an unusual admission, and refreshing to the experienced American correspondents here, who have been becoming more and more fed up with officially-pronounced "aggressive optimism."

All night and every night now, the Viet Cong rockets crash on government positions around the city. The city limits are lit by rings of flares. You can see streams of tracers going down from American gunships (armed helicopters), and sometimes they go up over the rooftops in Cholon and other areas of the city as well.

Fourth Time

A Vietnamese banker from the North, normally unflustered, goes out of his way to come up to me to ask anxiously if there is news of the war. He does not wait for an answer: "Look, let me tell you something. I have lost everything three times already—in 1945, 1948 and 1954. Now I think there's going to be a fourth time. I can tell you Saigon is ripe for it."

He is not frightened, only resigned.

Mr. Biaggi, the 70-year-old Corsican who has run a crumbling hotel and restaurant here since he left the French army in 1918, is unruffled as always but unusually grave. Pursing and unpursing his lips in a face as wrinkled as the Massif Central, he says, "They are all young people, the Viet Cong."

"Nostradamus, the great occulist, predicted tragedy this year, Monsieur," he says, dimly uncorking his bitter Algerian wine. "Fortunately I have only a few years more. I can live on a tomato and a piece of bread a day." Mr. Biaggi has no intention of abandoning his restaurant or his Vietnamese wife. "After all, even the Viet Cong have to eat."

Besieged Forts

This week I flew down to the delta to find the countryside not besieged but overrun. The provincial and district capitals, the strongholds of government, are like so many Fort Zindeneufs besieged by oncoming Tuaregs.

The Viet Cong surround them, and pour mortar and rocket fire into them nightly. The country is wholly out of government control and with it the majority of the peasant population of South Vietnam.

One of the South Vietnam cities under siege is the old capital of Hue in which an estimated 60 per cent of the buildings have been destroyed or severely damaged.

Arriving in My Tho, the helicopter dives down over a great section of the little provincial capital that looks as if an atomic bomb had hit it. Shells of houses stand among the blackened stubs of trees.

An American jet air strike is going on not far away, sending up columns of thick, black smoke. The helicopter waits a few minutes on the strip. A humorous American boarding it says, "Welcome to My Tho, sleep well."

As elsewhere the Viet Cong penetrated deep into My Tho. The bus station is littered with charred corpses of Chevrolet buses. For blocks around houses are flattened by shells or as punctured as Gruyere cheese. People move about the wreckage salvaging what they can.

Outside a bullet-scarred house a youngish Vietnamese pilot with a wispy beard says: "My father was killed in the Tet attack. Do you know what my friends say? 'We want peace. Let those people on both sides who want their war go and fight it far away somewhere. The strongest will win and the people will go with whoever wins, whoever it is. Let them only leave the people out of it.' "

Large Bunker

The Americans and Vietnamese army were caught completely by surprise here. Yet the Viet Cong had built a large concrete bunker just inside the town limits. It had been there a month. How many Vietnamese must have known about it? — But nobody spoke.

Another humiliation for Allied intelligence: just before the Tet holiday, two well-dressed Vietnamese called on the manager of one of the major Vietnamese hotels in My Tho. They had a party of friends coming from Saigon for Tet, they said, and booked rooms.

The party duly arrived, then locked up the manager and unpacked their weapons. They were Viet Cong, and when the fighting began the hotel became their operational headquarters.

The South Vietnamese Army's method of fighting in the towns: Dig in. Never advance. Wait a few hours to pin-point the enemy. Hope the civilians are out of the way. Then blast the area with mortars, artillery rockets and anything else to hand.

A government official working in a refugee centre in My Tho that was once a high school — all schools have been closed until further notice — has had time to prepare the inevitable charts that plague Vietnamese bureacuracy. He thinks there are 185 civilians killed here, 1,000 wounded, 5,000 homeless.

Another official produces other figures: 5,120 families homeless, 35,000 people in all. My Tho is said to have a population of about 85,000.

An old woman crouches in a schoolroom, with a tiny child scooping up rice from a bowl. She says, "My house was destroyed by bombing. I am afraid to go back there. If the Viet Cong come back the artillery will start again."

Lights Work

In the modern American Civilian Operations Centre there is relief that the electric light is working. The Viet Cong failed to knock out the power station, but the South Vietnamese Army did its best by shelling it. Half the town spends the night in darkness. They also succeeded in severing the transmission wires at the local radio, which the Americans had spent painful months setting up.

The senior American information man is a live-wire who has taken the trouble to learn fluent Vietnamese. He has three colleagues staying in his house. One or two of them had been obliged to lie under their beds during the Tet attack while Viet Cong soldiers used their houses as strong points.

They are all nervous. They have been mortared almost nightly since Tet. They think the Viet Cong could come back. There are jet strikes and gunfire all round My Tho until evening darkness and silence falls.

Not Positive

We eat dinner by candlelight. "You know, I've sure lost that positive attitude I had two weeks ago," an American says, as we wait for the Viet Cong to open up.

Every American — except some officers who adopt a boys-will-be-boys attitude is bitter about the indiscriminate Vietnamese Army looting. It happened in Saigon. It has happened on a grand scale in the delta — where the major effort to win Vietnamese hearts and minds has lasted three years.

Vietnamese civilians' homes are bombed and then ransacked. One senior American adviser in My Tho was told to evacuate his house during the fighting. The army moved in. Everything was taken. He got back just in time to find the second shift of soldiers removing two refrigerators.

"We're just taking them to the police station for safe custody," they said, grinning widely. Naturally, nothing was returned.

There is no redress, no protest. Too strongly urged, it might not be good for — American-Vietnamese Army relations, which are none too solid at this moment. There is a ludicrous rumor going around the Vietnamese units that the Viet Cong and the Americans have some sort of secret agreement.

American Armed Forces Radio announces: "Did you know that one of the best ways to travel in Vietnam is by air? If, for any reason, you can't show, please notify your nearest terminal." Is this a joke for the troops? Not at all.

Insecure

Two years ago I took a Vietnamese bus from Saigon into the delta: it would be most unwise today. Every road is insecure in this heavily-populated area.

"Insucure" means this: that if you stick your nose outside almost any delta town without a massive army escort you will almost certainly get a bullet through the head. Today you may well get a bullet through the head in the delta towns too.

The small, one-engined plane taking me to the delta capital, Can To, revs up and takes off almost vertically to avoid possible Viet Cong snipers. On the edge of My Tho, an American helicopter was shot down not long ago. The bodies of the crew were so mutilated — they were disembowelled among other things — that nobody could identify them. We fly over the familiar chessboard countryside, like the landscape in Alice Through The Looking Glass."

At the hospital, the administrator is outraged because at this time of crisis, with civilian casualties mounting, the government has ordered that his three Vietnamese anaesthetists are to be redrafted into the army. Once drafted, likelier than not, they will not serve as medical officers but as ordinary line troops.

No Reply

"I have asked three times that their draftings should be delayed to have time to find replacements. But, anyway, no reply," said the Vietnamese doctor in charge.

American agricultural advisers hang around towns like Can To and My Tho, now unable to work. Pathetic charts demonstrating the pig distribution program remain pinned to government office walls, but no pigs can be distributed.

The Vietnamese peasant hearts and minds have been left to follow their whim. Northing matters much except the defence of Saigon and the towns.

In a back-street coffee shop in Can To, a Vietnamese youth in the revolutionary development cadre force said: "Some of the people in the hamlet we were working in, before we were withdrawn here, wept when we left. They were very frightened because the Viet Cong would come in. But we must stay here, as security for Can To, so the whole basis of pacification—continuity of security for villagers who embraced the government—is shattered."

"Let me tell you what one Vietnamese citizen feels," said an official before I left for Saigon. "The government and the Viet Cong both want to win the people. But the Viet Cong hit the people indirectly, we hit directly. That's the difference.

"The Vietnamese people want peace — at any price, I should say. But I don't think we can have peace very soon because both sides, you see, think they are winning. But nobody can win. It's a very particular war. Nobody can win."

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

Rhodesia has been a thorn in the side of Britain's Harold Wilson for the last three years and this week he felt the sting more than ever. Wilson gambled and lost in a political chess game with Premier Ian Smith in which three African convicts were the pawns.

The three Negroes were among 100 sentenced to death for crimes of murder and terrorism in Rhodesia.

After months of dithering with ineffectual economic measures which he hoped would bring Smith to his knees, Wilson decided to take a stand on a somewhat shaky constitutional issue.

When a date for hanging the trio was set, Queen Elizabeth, acting on Wilson's advice, issued a decree ordering that the sentences be commuted.

Since Smith led the white settlers' rebellion in 1965 his government has professed continuing allegiance to the Crown despite the political break, and Wilson apparently believed the decree would be obeyed.

But Smith obviously decided the time had come to make a final gesture of defiance against Britain.

After a four-day delay the executions were carried out at 9 a.m. Wednesday in the central prison in Salisbury while relatives of the doomed men wailed outside the walls.

By his action Smith showed up the weakness of the British government as well as eroding even more the symbolic power of the monarchy.

It was forecast that Smith's next move will be to declare Rhodesia an independent republic.

The question was, what will Wilson do now? There was talk in London of laying murder charges against the Rhodesian officials for ordering and carrying out the executions, but that would be little more than a gesture.

Short of an invasion, there seemed little further action that would be effective against the Smith regime. Wilson has steadfastly rejected the idea of using force, but he came under increasing pressure after the executions from the Black African nations to use troops.

●

While there was general condemnation of Smith for carrying out the hangings, much of the criticism was aimed at Britain for her vacillation. Government spokesmen in Zambia, Kenya and Ethiopia all had harsh words for the British and demanded the use of military force.

There was no official reaction to the hangings in Washington but the U.S. government let its feelings be known during the week when it refused a visa for Smith to visit the country.

He had been invited by a group of students to speak at the University of Virginia. The state department said merely the application was turned down because the U.S. does not recognize the present Rhodesian government.

●

There was another African country in the news this week, the tiny equatorial state of Gabon.

A former French colony which still retains close ties with Paris, Gabon ruffled the feathers of the Canadian government by sending an invitation for an international education conference directly to Quebec, bypassing Ottawa.

The federal government saw the fine hand of Charles de Gaulle behind the move and dashed off an angry protest. Diplomatic relations with Gabon were also suspended.

Predictably the affair touched off a new row between Ottawa and Quebec, which is all President de Gaulle could have desired in the first place, if indeed he was involved.

●

Canada took more steps this week to buttress her dollar.

After earlier withdrawing reserves from the International Monetary Fund the government now has been granted standby credits from the U.S. Export-Import Bank and the Bank for International Settlements to create a total of $4.5 billion to put behind the dollar if necessary.

The action was taken after another hectic week on the international money markets in which there was heavy pressure on the dollar and the pound sterling. Continued heavy gold buying touched off more rumors that the U.S. is preparing to raise the price of gold, which would in effect devalue the dollar.

●

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp also brought down a new tax measure this week to replace the 5 per cent income tax surcharge defeated in the Commons. The new plan includes a 3 per cent surcharge which hits hardest at the upper income tax brackets as well as a new surcharge on corporation taxes.

Restless Youth of Russia Undergoing Crisis of Change

By ANATOLE SHUB

(This is the second of two articles on what has happened in the Soviet Union since the death of Stalin 15 years ago this week.)

MOSCOW—How much has Russia really changed since Stalin's death in 1953, and what may be expected of the future?

Opinions vary, as always. Yet, among the many foreigners who come to Russia, to visit or to serve several years, there is a curious but revealing difference in perspective between two distinct groups.

Those visitors coming back after an absence of three, four or five years are all impressed with how the Soviet Union has changed for the better: there is more food and better clothing, there are handsome modern buildings under construction, the new generation is "Western" and refreshing.

One might imagine that visitors returning after 10 or 20 years — particularly those who knew Stalin's time — would be even more impressed. Quite the contrary, Almost without exception, such visitors are depressed by their return.

Suspicion

"Fundamentally," they said, "nothing has changed." They cite the official suspicion of foreigners, the censorship and propaganda, the inscrutability of the bureaucracy, the continuing psychological gulf among Russians between "us" and "them" (ruled and rulers), the oppressive ambiguity introduced into all human relations by the ubiquitous activities of the police.

Pressed closely, such pessimists will admit that, for the overwhelming majority of the Soviet population, life is indeed much less difficult than in Stalin's time.

There can be simply no comparison with those days of famine, mass deportations and bloody purges. And yet, it is argued, Russia has changed far less in these years than the West, or even than Yugoslavia or Hungary.

Moreover, it has changed considerably less than many Russians, and their Western friends, had hoped in the wake of Stalin's death.

Just Shrug

One Western observer who has known Russia intimately over three decades recently put it this way: "When I was here in 1955, all my Russian friends thought this country was really on its way at last — the sky was the limit. Even in 1959, lots of people still thought Russia would make it after all. Now, the same people just shrug their shoulders."

Such observers are as right, and as wrong, as those impressed by mini-skirts and glass skyscrapers. For Russia has always been the land where diametrically opposite statements are simultaneously true; and the interplay between the Stalinist heritage, older Russian traditions, the influence of the West and the dynamic of modern technology has been all the more subtle and complex because it is largely taking place below the surface of "great events," in the minds of a people accustomed to keeping their innermost thoughts to themselves.

It is, therefore, foolhardy to risk striking a balance, for one is immediately trapped by impossible value judgments — such as whether it is more important that millions now have their own small apartments, or that Russian readers continue to be deprived of major writings by Alexander Solzhenitsyn and the late Boris Pasternak.

Yet, if one must sum up the post-Stalin years in some fashion, one may say that:

—The most positive achievements, largely material, have affected tens of millions of ordinary Soviet citizens.

—The greatest problems for Russia's future arise from the condition of its political institutions and ruling caste.

—The most disturbing aspects of current Soviet society are reflected in the troubled emotions of young writers, artists, scientists and students.

End of Terror

In the realm of individual freedoms, the major accomplishment was surely the end of wholesale, indiscriminate terror and the dismantling of most forced-labor camps. Foreign tourists were welcomed, the jamming of foreign broadcasts ended.

Cultural horizons widened sufficiently to permit the revival of many long-suppressed works (mostly by writers safely dead, like Dostoyevsky and Bulgakov). The door was opened for Stravinsky, though not for Chagall or Nabokov. Still, Russia today has yet to regain the relative cultural freedom of the 1920s, just as the piecemeal economic reforms of the present brook no comparison with Lenin's truly radical New Economic Policy (1921-28).

The most problematic aspect of today's Russia is the state of its ruling establishment, which can be described as unusually "stable" or "sclerotic," depending on one's viewpoint.

The old institutions shaped by Stalin have shown a remarkable impermeability to change. There remain the confusing duplications of party and government and trade unions, central and local authorities, collective and state farms, politburo and secretariat at the very centre of party power.

Not only institutions but individuals have shown great staying power. Despite the "conflict of generations," seniority remains firmly entrenched in many spheres of life.

Old People

At the theatre, one still sees fat fifty-year-olds playing young girls. At Pravda, one meets gloomy old editors and commentators who performed as dutifully for Stalin as they do now for Brezhnev. The Soviet armed forces contain more "active" marshals, admirals and generals between the ages of 55 and 70 than any military establishment in history.

In the ruling party central committee, 35 members — a fifth of the total — date back to 1952. Premier Kosygin and chief ideologist Mikhail Suslov joined the "top 400" in 1939. Even the "youth" of the current politburo, Alexander Shelepin, who is 50, headed the young Communist league under Stalin.

The durability of pre-1953 Soviet institutions and officials evoke different reactions among thinking Russians. Some welcome the slow diffusion of power, the painful processes of compromise, the absence of a single "firm hand," the political inertia which means "they leave us alone."

Others yearn for organic liberalization on Yugoslav or even Western lines. Still others dream of a bold, creative, westernizing new despot, "a second Peter the Great," to shatter the crust of custom, rout the vested interests, and open Russia to Europe once more.

Serious Concern

It is the youth who are most restless, and have been the most serious long-range concern of the leadership throughout the 1960s. As in the West, some of the young people have become political rebels; many more have simply become apathetic to anything smacking of "politics." Still others have found outlets for their idealism as pioneers in Siberia and Central Asia. Many, of course, conform to the accepted standards.

Yet, among Soviet youth as a whole, the desire for personal fulfillment — for a rewarding individual life, for new frontiers of experience in science, the arts, the professions and (not least) personal travel — is clearly far, far stronger than devotion to the political "cause," however that cause may be defined.

The writers and poets of the younger generation may, therefore, offer the clearest clues to the Russian future. Inadequately described as "liberals," they bear a far closer resemblance to their contemporaries in the West than to the young Communists who denounced their parents under Stalin.

Considering Soviet conditions, it is remarkable how few of them have ever been enlisted in the service of anti-western propaganda — and how many of them have risked name and status to help defend those of their number under attack, like the imprisoned writers Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuli Daniel. In the Russian tradition, they feel obliged to speak for their people, and they are admired for it among the scientists of Novosibirsk as among the pioneers at Bratsk.

It is precisely these young writers who now appear to be undergoing a kind of moral crisis, a conflict with the old guard (in literature and politics), stemming from their own disappointed expectations that things should and would be vastly different after 1956.

Broader Mood

Yevtushenko, normally the most adaptable of the lot, nevertheless appears to have expressed the broader mood in a new poem, ostensibly the monologue of an Alaskan fox:

" . . . He who was born in a cage, misses the cage.
With horror I understood that I love
The cage that hides me behind net
And the animal farm—my motherland. . . .
True, on the animal farm, there've been changes.
Before they simply strangled us in sacks.
Now they kill us by modern means—
By electricity. It's clean, at least! . . . .
I'd like to be as naive as my ancestor,
But I was born in captivity.
I'm not like him.
"He who feeds me will betray me.
He who strokes me will kill me."

It is a mark of the failure of Stalin's heirs that such despairing verses could now be written—and a sign of some hope, nevertheless, that they were published.

What Was Charles Lindbergh, a Nazi or a Saint?

THE LAST HERO: CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, by Walter Ross. Fitzhenry and Whiteside. $9.95.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

For most of us today, the Lindbergh legend consists of little more than the story of a dramatic solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927 and the dramatic kidnapping of an infant child on March 1, 1932. Few today could tell of the origins of Lindbergh, of his other fortunes and misfortunes, of his family, his character, or of his present situation.

Walter Ross gives us all this and more. He attempts to explain, with only limited success, how Lindbergh managed to achieve so much with so little formal education and so little stability in his formative years.

Today, Lindbergh is a grandfather in his 60s, yet he still wanders restlessly about the earth, driven by physical and intellectual energy that has made of him a flier, a writer, an inventor, archeologist, businessman, explorer, photographer, conservationist, and something of a political figure.

He is also something of a lonely enigma.

After the completion of his famous New York-to-Paris flight, he enjoyed the adulation of the world. But he was forced to sacrifice to that adulation his privacy, and, in a sense, even the life of his first-born child. The experience left him obsessed with the need to maintain his personal freedom and privacy.

If he did not become a recluse, he became astute at using his wealth and influence to shelter him from the intrusions of the press and public. He never, however, used his wealth for self-indulgence or the accumulation of possessions.

He inherited wealth and created wealth; he also married into one of the great American fortunes. His habits, however, were ascetic, and his life was dedicated to science.

His main contribution was to aviation. He opened up new air routes, explored the possibilities for new techniques, and above all, demonstrated that the aeroplane was both safe and dependable.

Much less is known, however, of Lindbergh the medical researcher. Working in the Rockefeller Institute with Dr. Carrel, an eminent French physician, he invented a perfusion pump. This pump gave an impetus to research that was to culminate in organ transplants.

If these achievements seem to have been blurred with the passing of time, so too, fortunately, have the memories related to Lindbergh during the Second World War, when he preached American isolationism and headed the America First Committee, as notable a group of reactionaries as ever managed to forget their differences in a concerted effort to obstruct American assistance to Britain in the early years of the conflict.

Lindbergh's isolationism and conservatism in later life have perhaps detracted from his popularity, but Mr. Ross sees these qualities as evidence of the inevitable and proper deepening and solidifying of the character traits that made possible his youthful achievements. It is also Ross's contention that Lindbergh can be considered not merely as an old-fashioned hero, but "as an existential hero, a man with a well-developed sense of commitment but no wish for leadership or authority. He is . . . as alienated as any hipster; detached, unassimilated, yet dedicated and noble."

Readers of Walter Ross's Lindbergh are left to decide for themselves whether Lindbergh is a Nazi os a saint, a misanthrope or a humanitarian, brilliant or lucky. Whatever their decisions may be, few readers will find this biography uninteresting or unenlightening.

Wilting Iris Blooms Again

THE NICE AND THE GOOD, by Iris Murdoch. Clarke, Irwin Co. $6.00. 350 pp.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

Admirers of Iris Murdoch should raise a cheer; with this book, she is back once again in top form.

Her last three novels have been something of a disappointment.

She is a past master of the fable, in which characters representing different aspects of the subject in hand revolve around a central situation so that their actions and desires reflect against each other and provide an ironic commentary upon the novel's main theme.

Her last important book, The Unicorn, took these devices about as far as they could go.

One was left with the uneasy feeling that her characters were in danger of becoming mere pawns to be moved around the novel's comic boards at will.

The failure of Miss Murdoch's subsequent novels suggested an attempt to break out of this format.

She tried to broaden her approach with the historical material of The Red and the Green, while The Italian Girl represented a retreat to the simplest level of her comic style where seemingly ordinary situations were blown up into cataclysmic proportions, each major event building to a surprise climax. The result was an uninspiring self-parody.

Her new novel, The Nice and the Good, is everywhere stamped with her characteristic flavor, but although she has gone back to the high style of her best work, the book is not another retreat into self imitation.

She has in fact extended her range at last.

Murdochian Surprises Gentler

The novel's tightly woven structure is engineered in a much mellower way; the Murdochian surprises are gentler and appear to be more closely the result of the characters in action. Her comedy is subdued to the world she creates, rather than cutting across it, so that her fable seems nearer to the immediacy of real life.

Her premise here is that the Good are those who are able to live out their lives unselfishly, resisting the temptation to use others in order to indulge themselves and refusing to meddle in other people's problems.

The Nice, on the other hand, tend to be meddlers whom other people admire for their so-called good hearts but who in reality understand very little of themselves or their friends.

Such a one is John Ducane, chastened by the drives of a Puritan conscience but unable to believe in God or—finally—in himself. Yet on the surface he is just the man to handle problems.

Reliable, good-hearted John. If someone feels lonely, leave him to John. Marriage on the rocks? . . . let John sort it out. A suicide in the office? . . . then bring in John to investigate officially.

Yet life, as Miss Murdoch makes clear, is not simply a matter of cause and effect.

Destiny is as much a mechanical thing as it is purposeful, so that when one attempts to clear things up one may let loose a great deal more than one bargained for.

And it is here that Miss Murdoch has managed to build the stylized structure of her plot into the very meaning of her book.

Mechanical Happy Ending

One of her characters has this to say about human beings: "We are the most mechanical thing of all. That is why we can be forgiven."

Consequently, she ends her fable of Love in all its degrees of selfishness with a mechanically happy ending.

The characters drift out of the book in their appropriate pairs.

Yet the trite neatness of the pairing is a delicious irony; each one is seen as a compromise, for the characters—whether consciously or not—have to settle for the less than perfect relationship. The Nice rather than the Good.

Amusingly, there are only two pairs who might possibly be called good. Mingo, the dog, and Montrose, the cat, settle comfortably into the same basket, while the book closes with a pair of nine-year-old twins walking happily across the downs, hand in hand in the soft, warm drizzle.

They are not yet old enough for the selfishness of adulthood; instead, they remain enclosed in their private little world of flying saucers, concerned only in making their own destiny-ridden patterns out of pebbles and shells.

However, the most brilliant feature of this novel is the way in which Miss Murdoch has used her scenery as a symbolic counterpoint to her central philosophy.

The majority of the action takes place on an estate in Dorset.

The countryside is predominantly round and soft, its color tones dominated by the rich browns of the beech trees, and each vista ends in a void of shimmering blue sea.

Ritual of the Black Mass

The formal architecture, down to the local graveyard, is neo-classical — civilized, orderly, in fact, nice. Against these backdrops move the figures who seem at first to be the heroes. They too are round and bronzed in their warm, smug niceness.

On another level are the scenes in the city, where the heatwave which has been so pleasant in the country becomes oppressive. Things are not so nice in London.

A third strand is made up of a series of underworld journeys.

This theme is struck on the surface by the fact that some of the characters are reading Book VI of the Aeneid, and this descent into hell is echoed by a dramatic journey into a dangerous cave and, in the city, by investigations that lead into an underground cellar which has been equipped for the complicated ritual of the Black Mass.

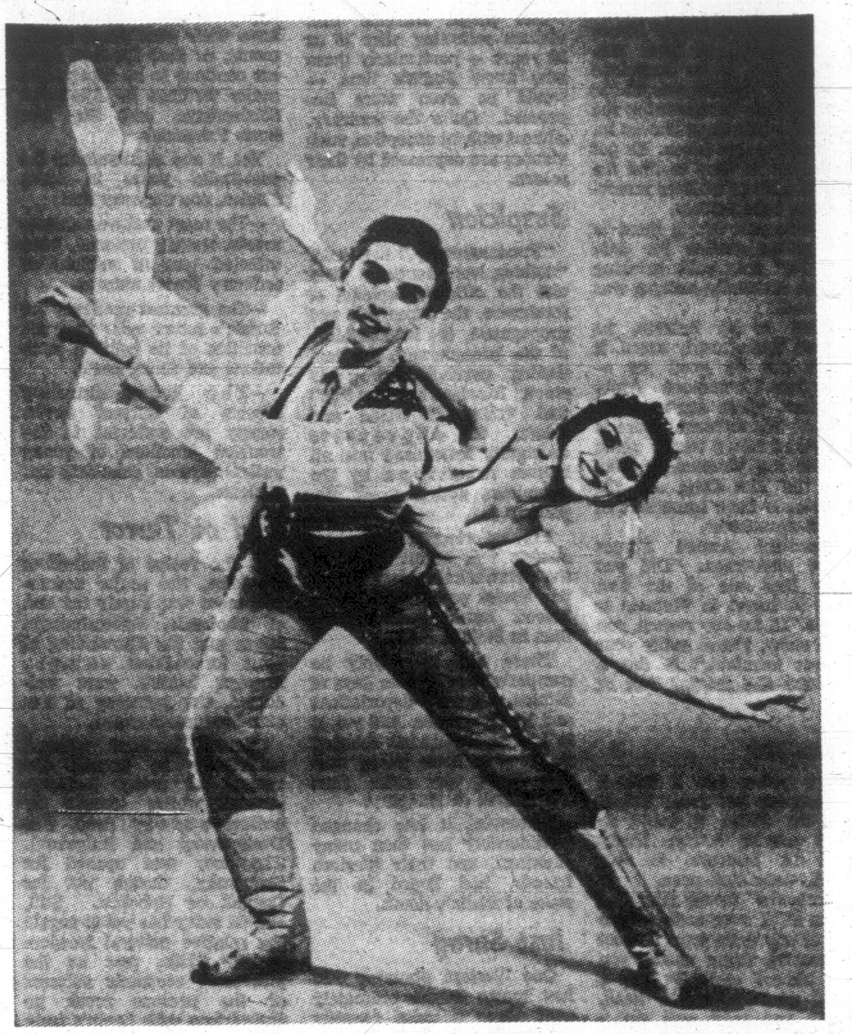
Neither the gentle countryside nor the descent into darkness provides the answers to the characters' respective journeys toward their identities.

Finally, at the book's centre is Bronzino's picture of Venus, Cupid, Folly and Time at the National Gallery.

Its allegory of human desire is played against in the novel's love scenes, where figures take up the position of those in the painting.

Its message suggests a sort of divine laughter; the languor of Love is mocked by Time, Folly and Envy, and this laughter is perfectly matched by the ironic detachment of the author herself.

The complications of the action are very much a midsummer's dream: "Lord what fools these mortals be!"



GLAMOR GIRL of National Ballet Judie Colpman gets lift from Earl Kraul in performances of Coppelia. Picture is one of hundreds in Canada's National Ballet, an illustrated study by dramatic critic Herbert Whittaker, published by McClelland and Stewart Ltd., Toronto.

GOVERNOR A CIPHER FOP

Stupidity Not Explicit

THE UPROOTED HEATHER, by Wemyss Cavaick, Vancouver, Mitchell Press. 275 pp. $6.95.

The Uprooted Heather is a short novel written by a Vancouver businessman under the pen name of Wemyss Cavaik. It tells the story of the first band of Selkirk Settlers to found homes in what is now Manitoba.

Canadian readers will find it an interesting and informative tale.

It traces the background of this group of Scots from the year 1746, when the Highlanders were defeated by the Duke of Cumberland, through the severe repression that followed, to the inhuman evictions suffered by them at the hands of the Countess of Sutherland.

Homeless and starving, betrayed by the government and their landlords, these hardy Scots were being decimated by sickness and disease as they clung to the rocky shores of their windswept beaches. They were rescued from their plight by Lord Selkirk.

Merely Hints

Unfortunately, Cavaick does not give his readers a satisfactory portrait of this enigmatic eighteenth century nobleman.

The complexity of Selkirk's character is merely hinted at, but the reader never has an opportunity to see Selkirk the shrewd financier in juxtaposition with Selkirk the humanitarian.

There seems to be no awareness of the uncertainty among historians as to whether Selkirk brought the settlers to the new land out of sympathy, or primarily to protect his heavy investment in the Hudson's Bay Company.

Similarly, in his depiction of Governor Semple, the victim of the Massacre at Sevenoaks, Cavaick fails to show the blundering stupidity of the man. The reader sees him as a mere cipher, a fop totally ignorant of the ways of the frontier.

In fact, The Uprooted Heather is at its best when it is depicting the scenes of suffering that attended the lives of the Selkirk Settlers.

Across the North Atlantic they journeyed, to Hudson Bay.

Group Heroism

There they found that adequate preparations had not been made for their arrival.

In the arctic winter they were forced to travel overland, women and children alike, from Fort Churchill to York Factory, and thence by canoe the following summer to the site of what is now Winnipeg.

There is no well-defined hero; the heroism is the unity and strength that bound the group together and permitted it to survive.

It is unfortunate that the novel is not better written, that the characterizations are shallow, the plot sketchy, and the style barely acceptable.

It is unfortunate, for the descriptions of suffering and endurance, and the consistency with which the theme of pioneer courage is developed, make the book a valuable experience for Canadian readers.—G.M.

STUDY OF TORMENT

Oliver Hated Himself When He Loved Evie

THE PYRAMID, by William Golding. Faber and Faber, 1967; $4.75.

Reviewed by Patricia Koster

In The Pyramid, Golding again creates a profoundly moving work of art.

He has this time used a form new for him, dividing the book into three tales each of which could stand alone, and unifying them by the person of the narrator, by the setting and—but this is subtle and tenuous—by the common themes of love and sex, of change as growth and decay, of the insoluble contradictions of man's condition.

He allows the three tales to reflect upon one another, with mirror-images in depth.

In the first tale the narrator, Oliver, fills in time between winning a scholarship in chemistry and going to Oxford.

He tries to sublimate in music his unrequited love for Imogen, but is drawn into a sexy affair with a young nymphomaniac called significantly Evie.

At first proud of his conquest, Oliver passes through a series of emotional states, hating Evie because he needs her, despising her social inferiority, fearing the disgrace and loss of his career if she should have a baby, and even admiring her toughness.

At last he is reduced to self-loathing, when he finds that Evie as a climax to her varied exploits has goaded his father into spying upon them with binoculars.

Weeping uncontrollably, "I stood, a heap of dung, yearning desperately for some sewer up which I might crawl and reach my parents, kneel, be forgiven, so that the days of our innocence might return again. I stood, watching him make up prescriptions for all the ailments of Stilbourne."

In the first coda to this tale, Oliver comments briefly upon the social conventions of Stilbourne, and in the second he recounts a further meeting with Evie, two years later. Even Oliver can perceive that "Evie had hitched herself up a couple of degrees on our dreadful ladder."

They talk briefly, she makes a public scandal, they quarrel and part for ever—but Oliver (like a more advanced Lok) sees a new picture; "as if this object of frustration and desire had suddenly adquired the attributes of a person rather than a thing."

In the second tale, Oliver comes home for his first holiday from Oxford, and is forced by his mother to take part in the current production of the Stilbourne Operatic Society.

He resists out of shyness, of musical snobbery and of anguish because Imogene and her husband play the leading roles, but is easily outflanked by his mother.

Oliver does not however suffer quite as much as he had feared, and even gains a grim pleasure from observing the faults of Imogen's husband and the quarrels of this middle-class sub-culture.

She Was Happy Until She Was Put Away and Properly Cured

By the final coffee-party, "They were in several groups that did not seem to have much inter-connection; and I realized with relief that the SOS could not function again for at least three years."

Oliver is also "cured" of loving Imogen: she could not sing.

In the third tale, Oliver as a now middle-aged family man returns to a modernized Stilbourne and considers the village music teacher Miss Dawlish. Oliver himself comes in and out of her story, first as a toddler being pushed in his go-cart, then as a most unwilling pupil, as neighbor—but always as insensitive.

Oliver becomes here almost the chorus of a classical tragedy, achieving a few belated recognitions and reversals of opinion while he meditates over the expensive, ironical monument which covers poor Miss Dawlish.

He realizes that Miss Dawlish had for years loved her protege the garage owner who has mechanized Stilbourne.

He remembers a previous visit, when Miss Dawlish told him that she had always wanted to be not a music teacher but a veterinarian.

Now Oliver himself, as he reveals first in this tale, had once considered giving up science for music, since he had perfect pitch and an intense love for music.

At that time Miss Dawlish said bitterly, "Go into the garage business if you want to make money. As for me, I shall have to slave at music till I drop down dead."

Under pressure from his parents, and receiving no encouragement from Miss Dawlish, Oliver won his scholarship in chemistry and gradually gave up playing.

He has in various ways given up his first love, and so have all the others. Oliver's father, too, loved music, but for practical reasons became a pharmacist. Evie wanted love, but could draw attention only as a sex toy.

On his last visit, Oliver is appalled at the sight of Miss Dawlish, and determines that his daughter shall "be a fulfilled woman, a wife and mother." But what ultimately can Oliver do to ensure happiness for his little girl (or for anybody)? The second tale and third have already shown that his own mother craves excitement beyond her family; and the first tale has exploded the notion that fulfilment can come from raw sex, and "perilous onanism."

The tragedy of Miss Dawlish represents in little the wastefulness of all human life, the ironic pseudo-choices, the inevitable conflicts:

"The only time she was ever calm and happy, with a relaxed smiling face, they put her away until she was properly cured and unhappy again."

As in his earlier books, Golding in The Pyramid presents ugly aspects of the human condition, but as before he makes a terrible beauty from the ugliness.

He writes with flawless skill and resolute understatement, sparing us for example what has recently become the most obligatory cliche of describing the sexual act, but bringing various details of perception into vivid and meaningful focus.

Although Golding is certainly not to the taste of every reader, he offers a unique literary experience in every book.

Here, he shows us a section of the social pyramid, the finger of a smashed metronome, and some implications of the fact that the closer to the apex, the narrower becomes any pyramid.

April Fool From Writer

A CALENDAR OF CONSOLATION, selected by Leonard Woolf. Clarke, Irwin & Co.; $3.25.

Day-to-day consolation in the form of good thoughts from a tear-off calendar is now completely out of fashion.

The neatness of the aphorism seems hardly likely to stand up to the cynicism and unbelief of the modern temper.

However, if this sort of thing must be done, then Leonard Woolf's little book is probably the best way to do it.

Fortunately the promise of the title page—A Comforting Thought For Every Day In The Year—is wildly misleading. Most entries are dry and ironic—even refreshingly sick.

For April Fool's Day we're offered E. M. Forster: "God who saves the King will surely support the police."

The entry for Christmas Eve neatly exposes the shabby cheer of the contemporary turkey-fest.

Swift's succulent proposal makes a wry comment on our modern celebrations of the Christ child's birth: . . . "a young healthy child well nursed is at a year old a most delicious, nourishing and wholesome food . . ."

We Got Hell —U.S. Didn't

By AL FORREST

The CBS network doesn't care if Pat Paulsen gives Canadians Hell but he can't say it to Americans.

That's why the comedian's light-hearted announcement that he was running for president was censored Sunday night on Channel 12.

On the Canadian networks (CTV Friday) and (CBC Saturday) Paulsen said: "Would I like to be president? Hell, yes!"

On Sunday across the length and breadth of the U.S. Paulsen said: "Would I like to be president? . . . yes!"

I phoned Channel 12's president Dave Mintz in Bellingham and he explained that CBS officials get their first look at the finished TV film Friday afternoon.

To cut out the rough language before Sunday they'd have to rush, and why bother—it's only Canada.

But the beep machine is in full swing for the big U.S. audience. More than one item was chopped from Paulsen's speech, as many readers were quick to point out.

●

Permit me to wonder whether in far-off Japan some radio announcer named Suki Tumi is starting off his program right this minute by saying:

"Ah, good evening, honorable listeners, once again it's Suki Tumi Time."

●

"Al Forrest?" the voice said.

"Yes."

"Did you know Channel 12 censored some stuff from the Smothers show?"

"Yes, I did notice and . . ."

"They cut out Hell in Paulsen's routine. No kiddin' they cut it right out."

"Yes, I . . ."

"No guts. Just no guts. I'm not surprised they cut out that other part, though. You know, about Ronald Reagan."

"Well, it surprised me a bit. I thought . . ."

"You can't have people saying things that are libel, even in fun."

"I beg your . . ."

"That line about Ronald Reagan being a known heterosexual."

"But that only means . . ."

"I know what it means and I wouldn't blame Reagan one bit if he sued them for calling him a sex maniac. I'll bet you wouldn't dare print that line in your paper."

If the warm enthusiasm of Victorians is any indication, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner deserves to be awarded the Oscar April 8 for best movie over the other four entries.

The others are: Bonnie and Clyde (great nostalgia), The Graduate (mixed reviews), Dr. Doolittle (for children) and In the Heat of the Night (disappointing—somebody should have cooled off the melodrama).

●

Was rather puzzled by that TV joke that went:

"The year, . . . 1984. A wave of American jokes is sweeping Poland."

I checked my underground sources and was informed that a wave of Polish jokes is sweeping the United States underground. Or was. There's a new game out that's designed to kill off the epidemic.

Whenever someone tells a Polish joke, somebody in the crowd shouts out the most hackneyed joke title he can think of, and you win if you come up with a pseudo-Polish joke.

Examples from the Victoria underground:

The challenge: Why did the chicken cross the road?

The reply: Why did the Polish chicken cross the road? Because the rooster behind her was Russian.

The challenge: Travelling salesman and farmer's daughter.

The reply: The Polish travelling salesman's car got stuck and he asked to be put up at the home of the Polish farmer. But the farmer told him to sleep in the barn and insisted his daughter sleep in the attic. He made certain his daughter and the salesman were Poles apart.

It was good to see Princess Grace on TV once again (Channel 4 Wedneday) but one suspects that they put on these tours whenever Monaco is having difficulty balancing its national budget.

MIA . . . bottoms up?

An inside look at Mia Farrow was promised (Channel 4, Wednesday) but all she told us in a half-hour interview was that she used to daydream a lot as a child and had the nicest parents in the world.

She also announced that she is excited by the new morality which permits her to eat what she wants, do what she wants and love whom she wants.

"Now we're free to do all the things we wanted to do as a child but couldn't."

Unwittingly, she may have come up with a new definition of the so-called new morality . . . the Spoiled Child Syndrome.

After listening to her pouting for 30 minutes I got the distinct impression that she needed nothing so much in all the world as a good spanking.

The proud parents were in a bit of a tizzy this week when it was announced that at long last the Walt Disney film The Wild Heart starring their son Andrew Penn, 14, would be shown on TV (7:30 p.m. Sunday on Channel 5).

The problem is that the Penn family can't get cable TV where they live.

To the rescue came the Colony Motor Hotel who have offered a room to the Penn family so they can watch on cable in color. Also invited to the room is the family of Kitty Porteous, 10, who co-starred in the Vancouver Island animal adventure tale.

They will all be seeing the movie for the first time.

If it's good, Kitty may go on to be an actress. Andrew considers acting just a hobby and at the moment is more wrapped up in his science and mathematics studies.

Pianists' Recital Thursday Night

Widely known CBC artist, pianist and conductor John Avison, who is a part-time faculty member of the Division of Music at University of Victoria, will join division chairman Gerald Hendrie in a recital for two keyboards Thursday at 8 p.m.

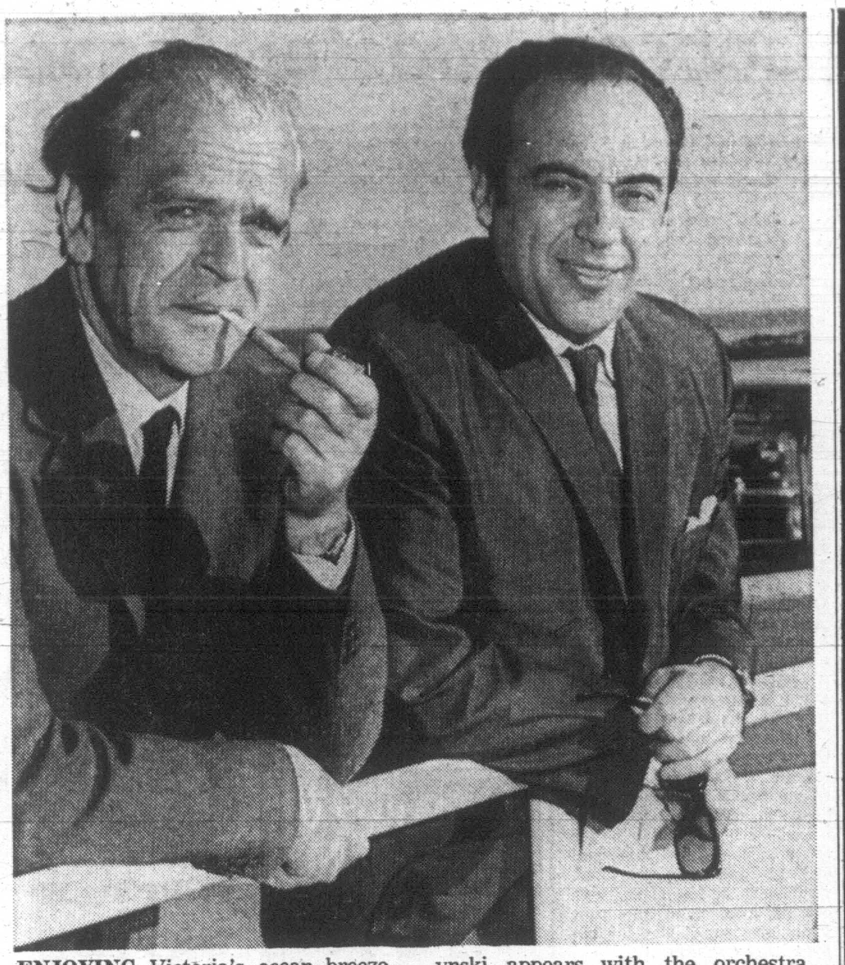
The recital takes place under auspices of the School of Fine Arts in the Education-Arts Building.

The program will highlight music not arranged but specifically composed for duo keyboards, ranging from the baroque period to the 20th century.

Early music includes a Suite in C minor by Handel and a Concerto in G by the 18th-century composer, Antonio Soler.

Sonata in D, K 448, Mozart, will be contrasted with a Stravinsky Sonata and a suite, En blanc et noir, composed by Debussy in 1915.

This is the last in the winter series of evening recitals at Uvic.



ENJOYING Victoria's ocean breeze and spring sunshine after a night of intensive rehearsal is Symphony Orchestra guest artist, the world famous pianist Witold Malcuzynski (left) with maestro Laszlo Gati. Malcuzynski appears with the orchestra Sunday and Monday. Foremost interpreter of Chopin, he will play the brilliant Chopin Concerto No. 2 in F minor.

Mock Moustache for Real! Villainous but Groovy

By GREG GRAVER
And BONNIE RICKETTS

Vancouver's Mock Duck invaded Victoria last week and really laid it on us.

Joe Mock, leader of the group, plays guitar and sings He has a groovy moustache which gives him the appearance of being a villain.

Glen Hendrickson plays fantastic drums and is happy to be a professional musician for the Blacksmith Blues Band.

Lee Stephens, who plays bass and second vocals, played folk music for three years in Port Alberni. He then moved to Vancouver and played bass for numerous folk acts in town. He digs Tim Buckley, Tom Rush and The Jefferson Airplane. He advises people who want to go into pop music: "Do your own thing; for there is no shortcut. Be yourself."

Their manager, Robbin Newton, has known Joe Mock for two years and is interested in the future possibilities for the group.

Although the Mock Duck has been together as a group for only two months, they plan to cut a 45-disc release in two-three months entitled Jelly Man.

For fab rock and blues lovers, the Mock Duck is definitely your bag.

A great group to look into is Victoria's Marquis. Although they have only been together for a year now, they are rapidly moving to become one of Western Canada's top groups.

Jerry Adolphe, Tom Middleton, Len Knake, Norm Piercy and Gary Garraway are all top musicians in each of their chosen fields.

Len has been playing lead guitar for three years now and lately has become a serious student of the guitar.

Gary and Jerry can often be found in any corner discussing their latest findings on crash diets.

Norm is the quiet one. On stage he seldom says anything and at times, the guys of the group forget he's even there except for his pounding on bass.

Tom's main problem is his height. While the others tell him he's growing, he insists he's shrinking and pretty soon people won't be able to notice him on stage.

Aside from chicks, Jerry loves drumming and insists Metrecal helps him to play better! He also plans to make music his profession.

By BRAD NUGENT

A new group called The Otherwise Impossible Ugly Funk Band is slated for a very short existence—one night!

The group will consist of various members of Every Mothers' Son, one New York pop journalist and a few other assorted musicians from that city.

They're planning to have a live album recorded at their one-night stand at a New York night spot. However, they've promised that the public will never hear them again—even if their album is a tremendous success.

Latest group to get on the movie kick is the Dave Clark Five. The group has filmed six half-hour TV shows which they produced and directed themselves.

Chad Stuart and Jeremy Clyde, who were in Victoria a year or so back, are splitting up again but only temporarily. Even though the success of their most recent LP, Of Cabbages and Kings, has brought them scores of offers for world tours, Jeremy will tour in the play Black Comedy for six months while Chad writes motion picture scores and musical comedy material.

The Candymen, the back-up group that Roy Orbison used on his last two visits to Victoria, recently amazed patrons of the Cheetah Club in Los Angeles.

While doing a regular gig they performed the entire Beatles' album Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. The outstanding thing about the performance was that it was note-for-note accurate, and sounded exactly like the Beatles' tracks.

A lot of musicians have been noticing Nillson, new singer-composer, including the Monkees. He wrote their hit Cuddly Toy, which he performs on his own album.

The Leaves, whose biggest hit to date has been their first single, Hey Joe, have changed their name to The Hook. They offer no explanation for this action, but the new name might grab the fans a little better.

The Doors' third album will have many monologues by Jim Morrison instead of his singing. Monologues are supposed to be his new bag.

●

There's word around that those into-everything Beatles are considering putting money into a New York Broadway musical. They don't intend to act, produce or direct it . . . just put up the necessary funds.

I'm wondering if Vanguard Records knew that Country Joe and The Fish were splitting up before they released the group's second album, I Feel Like I'm Fixin' to Die.

The liner notes read, "Sometimes it's just Country Joe—sometimes it's just the Fish—each of them into their own thing."

These and many other equally astounding developments are the result of modern technology. Telstar and trans-Atlantic airflight have been dealt with at some length elsewhere.

Dynamic reading has been growing steadily over the past 14 years. The Bell Telephone Co., U.S. Navy, and many other large concerns have made dynamic reading an essential part of their executive training curriculum. Dynamic reading is now firmly established in British Columbia.

Dynamic reading is the ability to read printed material at speeds hitherto considered impossible—speeds of 1,500, 2,000 and even 3,000 to 5,000 words per minute! One of the basic impediments to reading at these high speeds is the fact that our reading habits are still linked very closely to our early primary school training. Numerous studies have shown that reading at the ordinary rate of two to six hundred words per minute result in subvocalization. This unnoticed habit is one of the main obstacles in the way of grasping visual material in purely visual manner. This habit of subvocalization is a direct carryover from the days when we used to read aloud.

It is indisputable that the present average reading speed of North Americans (roughly 400 words or one page per minute) is totally inadequate in today's informational environment. All people in a professional capacity and all levels of the academic system are up against the same stumbling block—mountainous volumes of reading material and no time to read it all. What is the answer?—Reading Dynamics!

Reading Dynamics have proved through years of research and satisfying results that after eight weeks of instruction and practice, students will have at the very least trippled their reading speed with the same or more comprehension and retention. This means in effect that the average person must graduate at a speed of no less than 1,200 words per minute.

Think about it for a time—that is over three pages a minute! However, we don't just aspire to a factor of three times your initial reading speed but of ten or fifteen and faster with the same conditions of recall and comprehension. In other words, the average 400 words a minute student should graduate at around 4,000 words per minute or better with the same conditions of increased recall and comprehension.

We guarantee to increase the reading efficiency of each student AT LEAST 3 times with good comprehension. Making Fortune Isn't Everything

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The apparent demise of I Spy should have made Bill Cosby a happy man.

Freedom from the time-consuming chore of co-starring in a weekly television series means he will be able to earn millions in other enterprises.

COSBY
. . . show defects

Yes, millions. Recently the Negro comedian and his partners, Roy Silver and Bruce Campbell, announced a $12,000,000, five-picture deal with Warners-Seven Arts.

With his March 18 NBC special, best-selling record albums, five-minute radio spots, music publishing and so on, the company expects to do $20,000,000 in business this year.

Cosby also plays concerts here and there. One recent night in nearby Long Beach, he earned $33,150, for telling stories about his boyhood.

Why, then, is he not overjoyed with the dropping of I Spy from NBC's schedule for next season? As judged by the third-season ratings, the adventure series with Robert Culp appears to have burned out.

"Well, I'll tell you," said the onetime basketball star as he put his feet atop the desk of his Beverly Hills office.

"Although the continuation of I Spy would stop me from making films and doing other things I want to do, I would like to finish it out. Another season would make it a more worthwhile venture for our producer, Sheldon Leonard.

SCENE OF DUTY

"I feel a sense of duty to Sheldon. After all, he was the first man to hire a black American as co-star of a television adventure series. He did so in full knowlegde of the power of bigotry and racism in this country. Why did Nat King Cole fail as a weekly television performer? Because he was a Negro.

"We were picked to fail. The collapse of I Spy would have been another affirmation for the question of whether this country is as bigoted as it has seemed to be. Yet Sheldon was willing to take the chance.

"He did so knowing that on the show this black American would shoot and kill and would engage in fisticuffs with white men. Since he was the hero, he had to beat somebody. Would America accept such a portrayal? America did.

"It was Sheldon himself who pulled it off; no NAACP jumped up and joined in the fight. He was the one producer who said, "to hell with it —I don't care whether this guy is green, black or white; I want him for the part.' And after he succeeded came the roles for Negroes in Star Trek, Mission Impossible and other shows."

Besides allowing him to be the Jackie Robinson of television, Cosby observed that I Spy had prepared him for his next challenge: The movie world.

The Cosby empire now employs 42 persons in its Beverly Hills headquarters.

The place is decorated in most modern style except for one feature in Cosby's office: a battered old trash can. That helps maintain his common touch.

Portland Choristers Coming Here

A choir from Portland, Ore., will pay a visit to Victoria March 18 in the course of an annual tour.

Under the direction of famed organist and choirmaster Lauren B. Sykes, known as Portland's dean of church music, the Warner Pacific College Touring Choir of 36 select voices will give a concert at St. Andrew's Kirk Hall, Courtney Street.

Each year the choir tours some part of the Pacific Northwest and each third year it makes a transcontinental tour, presenting programs of the finest in sacred music liturgy.

Warner Pacific College is a four-year liberal arts college. The choir members are among the school's best students in addition to being outstanding singers.

Mr. Sykes has been director of choral and organ music for the College since 1946. This year marks his 50th anniversary of service to Portland churches as organist and choir director.

The Victoria concert is being sponsored by the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Breath Of Scotland Blowing In

Coming to McPherson Playhouse Tuesday, March 26, for one night, is another of the popular Scottish concert parties.

The group, known as A Breath of Scotland, lists as headliners, comedian Alec Finlay, tenor Dennis Clancy and accordionist Will Starr.

Sheena Andrew, a lovely Scots lass with a heart-warming soprano, and British junior champion Highland dancer Bonnie Monaghan, are two other members of the cast.

The variety show, with its emphasis on nostalgia and broad Scots humor and the lilt of Gaelic music in speech and song, will begin at 8:30 p.m.

Concert Master to Solo at Playhouse

End-of-the-season concert for Victoria Musical Art Society provides an opportunity city music lovers have been awaiting—to hear Victoria Symphony's new concert master Raymond Ovens, in solo performance.

The concert takes place on St. Patrick's Day, Sunday, March 17, at 3 p.m. in the McPherson Playhouse, and features as well, the Don Kyle Singers with pianist Grace Timp as accompanist.

Robin Wood will partner Mr. Ovens at the piano.

Mr. Ovens came to Victoria with his family at the beginning of the current symphony season from Birmingham, England, where he was assistant concertmaster of the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra.

COUNCIL GRANT

Victoria Symphony received a special Canada Council grant to make the engagement of Mr. Ovens possible.

Highlights abound in Mr. Ovens' career.

With BBC and concert engagements already behind him, in 1949 he won an important scholarship for study at the Royal Academy of Music and two years later, while still in his teens, was offered a seat in the first violin section of the London Symphony Orchestra.

There he remained, gathering vast orchestral experience, for eight years.

During that time he also served in the Household Cavalry where he played leading violin for the Life Guards, a position which brought him before Queen Elizabeth and the Royal Family on many occasions.

On release from the army Mr. Ovens also left the London Symphony to study chamber music, playing with the Boyd Neel Orchestra, the London Mozart Players and other groups.

After studying with Maxim Jacobsen and spending six months in Spain Mr. Ovens was asked by Sir Thomas Beecham to join the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, where he stayed until 1963, becoming Beecham's second violin leader.

Accepting an offer from the BBC, Mr. Ovens was heard in two solo appearances at the London Promenade concerts in 1965 and later that year accepted Hugo Rignold's offer to become assistant concertmaster at Birmingham.

With Mr. Wood, Mr. Ovens will play a Sonata Movement by Brahms, the Ravel Sonata for Violin and Piano, a Vitali Chaconne, Three Romantic Pieces by Dvorak and the Scherzo Tarantelle by Wieniawski.

He will also play the difficult Ysaye Sonata for violin alone.

The Don Kyle Singers, a small carefully selected ensemble who delighted a Musical Art audience with a recital last season, will sing three groups.

Mr. Kyle has chosen first, Schubert's lovely setting of the 23rd Psalm, followed in the same group by Cherubic Hymn No. 7 by Borniansky and Gloria in Excelsis by Mozart.

Arrangements of My Johnny was a Shoemaker and Caller Herrin' and Elgar's My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land will be sung by the woman's voice section, and early English songs by the Madrigal Group.

Butterflies Taking Off For School Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Poised on school auditorium platforms all over Greater Victoria next week, will be groups of youngsters waiting for the "You're on!" signal — for the opening of the curtain and the performance to begin.

Countdown for the conservatively estimated 500 students and teachers begins this weekend and reaches zero hour Thursday at 8 p.m.

That is the day and the hour when at Mount View Secondary School the stage lights will go up and the 28th annual Greater Victoria Schools Drama Festival will be under way.

The festival, unequalled in scope on the North American continent, will continue for nine days, ending on Saturday, March 23, with an Honor Performance at Victoria Secondary School.

28 Plays

Twenty-one public and private schools at elementary, junior and senior secondary levels are involved. They have entered a total of 28 plays.

The self-sustaining festival has never looked back, but has maintained steady forward progress since its first appearance, April 29 and 30, 1941.

There were 12 plays entered in that festival which was sponsored by the schools and community drama branch of the department of education (since transformed into the community programs branch).

Chairman was H. S. "Bunny" Hurn and ex-officio chairman and co-founder was L. Bullock-Webster, then head of the community programs branch.

Through the years a fairly long list had evolved of youngsters who have carried their school drama experience forward into phases of adult life and some form of professionalism.

But it is not this aspect which is the objective of the festival not by any means important in the over-all idea.

Wide Range

Participation in school drama provides much more than an initiation for the individual with specific potential. It provides a wide range of experience for all the children involved.

It offers easily assimilable lessons in communication, self-confidence, co-operative activivity, social, artistic appreciation.

Richard Courtney, British drama education expert who is now an associate professor in the University of Victoria's Theatre Division and who will adjudicate this year's festival, says that in Britain creative drama is developing, not only as a subject in schools, but as a vital method of teaching other subjects.

Creative drama is, of course, a very different aspect, for it entails the improvising of a play from the materials supplied by imagination, rather than from a ready-made script.

Nevertheless, there are valuable lessons to be learned from the production of a well chosen script, especially if the director's approach goes beyond mere memorization of lines and movements.

On the final night of the festival, three contrasted plays out of the 28 seen during the nine days, will be presented. It is expected that they will be chosen from elementary, junior and senior secondary levels.

The list of prizes and scholarships to be presented include the Ross Scholarships for an elementary school boy and girl and the Mark Trueman Scholarships for a junior secondary boy and girl.

Book prizes will be given by the festival committee at all levels and for a Senior Secondary boy and girl who give the best vocal presentation of a character, the Victoria Times is offering prizes of valuable books this year.

Team Spirit

Other prizes included the Colonist award and Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council award for the group showing the best team spirit.

Schools entered are Colquitz Junior Secondary, Central Junior, Norfolk House, Oak Bay Junior and Senior, Mount View, Belmont, Dunsmuir Junior, Edward Milne Senior, Macaulay, Sooke and MacKenzie Avenue elementaries, Claremont, North Saanich and Victoria Seniors, Mount Newton and S. J. Willis Juniors, St. Ann's, St. Michael's, Glenlyon, Malvern House and Westerham Schools.

Tickets, either for single performances or the entire festival are on sale at the Theatrical Costume Studio at Oak Bay Junction or the Marionette Book Store. Or they may be purchased from students or at schools.

The plays will be performed at various schools which will be listed daily in the Times reviews.

SHE'S RICH now but Donna Douglas who plays backwoods girl in Beverly Hillbillies was born in Louisiana bayou country, six miles off the highway.

Music for Pleasure Of Everyone

Derek MacDermot, who conducted the Peninsula Concert Orchestra in its fourth annual concert at Claremont School last night, expressed justifiable pride in the players who performed under his direction.

Jerome Kern's Cat and the Fiddle was the selection which best suited the style and abilities of the orchestra.

This piece, played with liveliness and precision, because of its quick tempo and its dependence on the orchestra as a single unit, avoided problems of intonation encountered in several works in which slow sustained melody lines invited disastrous discordance in the string section.

The orchestral discipline was excellent and even difficult syncopated rhythms well maintained. The tutti playing was firm and clear throughout and each member played with the conviction and sincerity of the true music-maker.

A small group of singers, the Metchosin Choral Group, added variety to the well-planned program.

Sing a Merry Madrigal from The Mikado was very well sung; and the choir sang Dance a Cachucha from The Gondoliers so liltingly that they almost began to dance.

It is heartening in these days of early specialization that such groups continue to make music for their own pleasure and that of discriminating friends.

Though their performances will probably never be flawless they should rouse nothing but admiration in those of us who do nothing but listen.

Total Immersion's the Thing

A different concept in training and rehearsal of the student cast is the foundation of a production soon to be seen at the University of Victoria's Phoenix Theatre.

Eugene O'Neill's autobiographical play, Long Day's Journey into Night, is directed by Frederick Edell and produced by the Theatre Division.

It will be seen at the Phoenix, Tuesday through Saturday, for two weeks, March 19-23, and 26-30.

Involving second year theatre students, the play has provided the source for all class sessions instead of merely occupying the students during evening rehearsals.

IN DEPTH

Preparation of Long Day's Journey began in September with two months of round table discussions during which the play and the characters were analyzed in depth.

The concept behind this lengthy rehearsal period, says Mr. Edell, assistant professor in the Theatre Division, is that acting students are best trained in production.

"At the second year level a long period spent developing one major role is the best process through which to learn an approach to textual analysis and basic characterization," Mr. Edell points out.

"The result hoped for in this production is a theatre experience well thought out, well filled and mature, and that works in terms of an ensemble," he says.

In early preparation the students were required to create biographies of the characters, make ground plans of the entire house, even create interior decoration concepts of all the rooms and to realize the exterior situation, such as the distance of the house from the sea.

This created a sense of the total environment of the characters.

O'Neill's habit of using dialogue as a mask for emotions was difficult for the students to grasp, so related scenes — Importance of Being Ernest, plays by Chekoff — where similar treatment of dialogue occurs, were used as class exercises.

In the cast are James Netherton, James Leard and Alan Munro as Jamie and Edmund Tyrone and James Sr., and Jennifer Spicer as Mary Tyrone.

Susan Roy and Dian English alternate in the role of the maid, Cathleen.

Michael Vrooman, a second year technical theatre student, has designed the lighting.

U.S. BUSINESS

Boom in Steel, Car Production

NEW YORK (AP)—The production and sale of steel and autos are booming, U.S. industry reports this week.

The surge in American steel production is due to hedge-buying in anticipation of a possible steel industry strike Aug. 1.

Auto executives say there has been a burst of consumer demand for new cars.

Output of steel set an all-time weekly record of 2,862,000 tons last week, topping the previous peak of 2,857,000 tons reached in the week ended Feb. 10.

Last week's production was up 1.2 per cent from the 2,828,000 tons produced in the previous week. It raised the industry's unofficial operating rate to 79.8 per cent of estimated capacity.

Hedge-buying has pushed steel orders as much as 30 per cent higher than mid-January levels. Some mills reported the daily rate of orders 30 to 40 per cent higher than their peak shipping ability, with orders coming in for May, June and July shipment.

OFFER DISCOUNT PRICES

Wheeling Steel Corp. joined other major producers in allowing customers who want to buy steel to build up 120-day inventories to pay for it at discount prices. The action was taken earlier by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem and Pittsburgh Steel.

Auto production this week was estimated at 179,900 passenger cars, up 13.6 per cent from 158,403 assembled a year ago.

Output in February totalled 715,143 cars, an increase of 38 per cent over the 519,525 turned out in February, 1967.

Sales of U.S.-built cars in February rose 18 per cent to 624,000 units from 509,000 a year earlier.

Sales of foreign cars in the United States climbed to a monthly record of 76,000 in February. This compared with 48,000 cars a year earlier.

The commerce department reported that new factory orders declined during January for the first time in four months—by 4.6 per cent from the record level of $47,400,000,000 in December. Hard-goods orders dropped even more sharply—by 7.1 per cent to $24,600,000,000.

Inventories in manufacturing increased in January for the fourth straight month, the commerce department said. They climbed to $82,900,000,000 from $82,400,000,000 in December.

CONSUMER CREDIT UP

The Federal Reserve Board reported that consumer instalment credit—buoyed by new loans for autos—increased by $393,000,000 in January. This maintained the momentum of the two previous months.

The advance raised total consumer instalment credit outstanding to a record $77,500,000,000 at the end of January.

Non-instalment credit, which includes single-payment loans and charge and service accounts, rose by $181,000,000 during January to $20,700,000,000.

A number of major retail chains posted good sales gains in February over a year earlier.

The First National City Bank of New York reported that profits of U.S. corporations in 1967 slipped to $32,100,000,000 from $32,470,000,000 in 1966.

"Earnings in 1967 were adversely affected by lagging demand in the early part of the year, by rising costs of labor and materials and by disruptions of production due to labor disputes," the bank said.

Neon Products Plans Merger

VANCOUVER (CP) — Neon Products of Canada Ltd. has announced a preliminary merger agreement has been signed with Northern Paint Co. of Winnipeg, which has outlets on the Prairies and in Ontario.

Neon said the merger, subject to approval by directors and shareholders of each company, "will be a straight transfer of common stock involving approximately $3,000,000."

The management of Northern Paint, under president Arthur H. Laing, would remain unchanged.

RECORD HIGH temperatures are causing unexpected difficulties for oil industry crews working in normally frozen muskeg areas. This B-A Oil seismic crew near Dawson Creek in northeastern B.C. is in a race with nature to complete its program before an unusually early spring break-up turns the frozen surface into an impassable bog and makes river ice unsafe for crossing.

Exemption Hailed By Oil Industry

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's newly-won exemption from U.S. curbs on foreign investment has taken the pressure off the oil industry in Alberta.

The general relief was evident from statements made by spokesmen for the industry.

"Wonderful news—a great relief on all counts," said F. A. McKinnon, chairman of the board of the Canadian Petroleum Association. "We have been hoping something like this would come about."

Said John D. Porter, manager of the Canadian Association of Oilwell Drilling Contractors: "We're extremely pleased. We had been increasingly concerned over the investment restrictions. This clears away a good deal of concern which has been evident since the first of the year."

John C. Rudolph, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, said the reversal of the U.S. policy will have a "tremendous impact on the whole oil and gas industry, and on the province of Alberta."

He said there was little doubt that the policy of restriction would have "seriously affected oil industry activity within the next month or two."

"Many companies were facing a decision of withdrawing in a very substantial way from further investment in the Canadian industry," he said.

The exemption for Canada from the U.S. balance of payments controls was announced by Finance Minister Sharp in Ottawa.

Estimates published by the Independent Petroleum Association recently placed the diversion of funds from the Canadian oil industry at $100,000,000 over the next two years if the exemption had not been granted.

Flourish in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farmer co-operatives did a record $15,700,000,000 business in the year ended June 30, 1966—7 per cent over the previous year.

This was reported in a survey by the agricultural department in its efforts to help co-operatives do a better job in marketing and buying for their farmer members.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Fluctuating Golds Were Big News

By FRITS ROOS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Violently fluctuating gold stocks dominated Canada's exchanges this week as European speculators renewed their attack on major western currencies with a surge of gold bullion buying.

Most gold issues on the Toronto Stock Exchange hit all-time highs, but at Friday's close most were down form the previous week.

Speculators and devaluation-scared investors in New York, forbidden by U.S. law to own gold bullion, again did most of the unusually active buying and selling.

The week opened with an unprecedented 14-point surge in the exchange's gold average amid rumors that Washington would stop the sale of gold abroad and that South Africa, the world's major supplier of the yellow metal, would switch its gold trade to Paris from London.

A RECORD LOSS

The rumors subsided and Tuesday's profit taking reaction accelerated Wednesday into a 20-point plunge — the sharpest loss on record.

However, the index bounced back with an eight-point gain Thursday which continued at the same pace Friday until the final minutes of trading when speculators cashed in on their profits.

During the week, the index declined 5.31 points to 241.69 after soaring to a record 260.76, breaking the 31-year-old mark of 252.89 set in February, 1937.

Analysts said that if the price of gold doubled — or Washington devalues the dollar by 50 per cent —most gold stocks still are heavily overpriced.

In the four-month boom since the devaluation of the British pound, stock prices have ballooned an average of about 50 per cent.

DOME LEADS LOSERS

Dome Mines, which traded between a record 89 and a low of 77, paced the declining issues, tumbling 5¼ to 79 on sales of 32,0000 shares.

At its lowest point this year, Dome traded at 56¾ points.

Campbell Red Lake, swinging between 44 and 37, slipped ¼ to 38½.

Camflo, down 10 cents to 6.05, was the group's most active issue trading 266,000 shares.

Dickenson was up 45 cents to 5.20 while McIntyre-Porcupine, which derives only a fracton of its income from gold mining, jumped 8½ to 86½.

Wright-Hargreaves, which hasn't produced an ounce of gold since it closed its mine in 1966 to concentrate on exploration, soared 70 cents to 3.75 on 206,000 shares. Earlier, the stock hit 4.90 — more than three times its 1968 low of 1.51.

Most other sections of the market declined in quiet trading, despite a strong mid-week advance influenced by a major rally at New York.

MASSEY MOST ACTIVE

Most active industrial was Massey Ferguson which slipped ¼ to 15 on sales of 63,000 shares.

Standard Radio, which proposed a 5-for-1 stock split and an increased quarterly dividend in addition to announcing an extra dividend, soared 6⅜ to 48¼.

Scurry-Rainbow, heading the list of declining oils, dropped 2¾ to 33¼. Dynamic Petroleum, the week's most active oil, climbed 39 cents to 1.75 while 330,000 shares changed hands.

Campbell Chibougamau, up 60 cents to 9.95, held centre-stage in the quiet base metals section. The company produces gold as a by-product to its copper operations.

Denison dropped 1 to 60. Northgate gained ¾ to 13 in active trading.

On index, Toronto's industrials were down 1.05 to 148.64, oils 2.97 to 177.64 and base metals .22 to 100.42. Volume increased to 18,842,000 from 17,505,000 the previous week. Declines outnumbered advances to 451 to 236.

Montreal's compostie index slipped 1.01 to 144.09. Volume was 7,558,000 shares compared with 6,320,000 while declines outpaced advances 189 to 111.

ON PRAIRIES

Food Retailers Will Be Probed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Consumers Affairs Minister Turner said Friday he has instructed the federal combines branch to look into the grocery retailing business on the Prairies.

The minister, one of 12 Liberal party leadership candidates, made the statement during a flight stopover en route to Calgary.

It follows a Prairie-province royal commission on consumer problems and inflation recommendation that special attention should be given to the dominant positions of Canada Safeway Ltd. and the Weston Companies—which control Loblaws food stores.

The commission said it was convinced the predominance of the two organizations "led to the current unsatisfactory performance of the retail grocery business on the prairies."

Turner said that, if the allegations are substantiated, he will urge an official inquiry under the Combines Investigation Act.

Its hard-luck struggle apparently over, the Cowichan Copper Co. Ltd. mine at Jordan River has been in steady production for the past year at a rate of some 700 tons of ore daily.

Having been flooded, washed out, rehabilitated, in financial difficulty and refinanced in fairly rapid succession, the old Sunro mine is currently enjoying the copper market demand resulting from the prolonged strike of U.S. miners.

And with hopes of a further price increase Cowichan should do even better.

Besides, the grade of copper ore is expected to improve by at least 50 per cent soon, according to a mine spokesman.

That should put 1.5 per cent ore through the mill, in effect cutting the cost of production.

Or, other things being equal, raising the return on mill run by half.

About 100 men are employed on average, a few less than when the mine closed down for a lengthy period in the fall of 1966 pending reorganization.

They are working in stopes rather than trying to establish new development areas, but when more money is available for exploration purposes—with continued steady production—it is planned to resume exploration and new development.

Meanwhile, the miners are working toward richer ore zones determined during previous exploration.

Cowichan president Oswood MacDonald anticipates improvement in the volume of ore the underground mill will be handling over the next period of production.

Earnings for McKay-Cormack Ltd. in the nine-month period ended Jan. 31 were down, said chairman E. C. Warner in a preliminary statement. He predicted the full 12-month financial period would show considerable improvement, however.

Without giving comparable figures, Mr. Warner said sales for the nine months amounted to $857,004 and cost of production was $605,815, leaving gross profit of $252,097 including $968 miscellaneous income.

Expenses were $146,927, depreciation $30,482 and net earnings $74,687. Work in progress is valued at $148,232.

Two aspects of the Watkins report on foreign ownership and the structure of Canadian industry are endorsed by Babson's Canadian Reports.

While finding the bulk of the "bring Canadian industry home" report unworthy of discussion, Babson's likes the idea of making more Canadian equities available to Canadian citizens through tax incentives, and of making more information on the operations of private companies available to the public and government.

The former would tend to minimize the drift of Canadian investment into U.S. equities, and it would have the effect of reducing the likelihood of sellout to U.S. firms (for reasons of estate planning) by Canadian holders of stock in the larger Canadian companies.

By and large, the report will not be acceptable because of the political situation and because it takes an academic approach, Babson's believes.

The outcome of a pilot study of sulphur refining guided by engineering consultants Chapman, Wood and Griswold Ltd., North Vancouver, could bring a Vancouver-based firm into a California mining scheme.

Casino Silver Mines Ltd. has an option to buy a two-thirds interest in Leviathan Sulphur Mine, in Alpine County, where drilling shows a native sulphur deposit 135 feet thick.

The holder is U.S. Borax and Chemical Corp., which would retain a one-third interest and develop the property jointly if the pilot project proves out.

Casino and another Vancouver company, Pinex Mines Ltd., are involved in the pilot program being carried out by Colorado School of Mines Research Foundation to develop a new refining process.

The option must be taken up by June 25 with a $27,850 payment, with $112,000 to follow by July 1.

Back Britain Girls Fired

CHELMSFORD, England (AP) — Two girls who started a Back Britain campaign in their factory were dismissed Friday because there is nothing for them to do.

Secretaries Carol Atkinson, 18, and Rosalind Pettigrew, 20, persuaded the staff at Windley Bros. engineering plant six weeks ago to work an extra 30 minutes each day without pay to help get Britain's economy out of the red.

"Unfortunately, we found these people in excess of our requirements and it is not our policy to have people hanging about doing nothing," said managing director Eric Windley.

GOLD SPECULATION

'Gnomes of Zurich' Play Top Role

LONDON (CP) — The gnomes of Zurich, as Foreign Secretary George Brown called them, are essentially men with money everywhere: the oil-rich sheikh, the wealthy Bombay merchant, the French wine-grower, the sly Hong Kong entrepreneur.

These and many others have become feverish speculators, rushing to buy gold either to secure their wealth against the cheapening of money or convinced of a profit once the United States is forced to increase gold prices.

They get their gold in many ways: through bankers on open markets or through secret channels feeding grey and black markets; through brokers and smugglers; through mysterious intermediaries and unmarked deposit boxes; through honest men and thieves.

Some of it is new-mined gold from South Africa, Canada and the Soviet Union. Some of it is old gold, passing through the hands of countless hoarders waiting for the last 30 years for the U.S. to lift the gold price.

Almost anyone can walk into a Swiss bank and order gold at near the official price of $35 a fine ounce, U.S. funds. In the black markets of the Far East the price can easily be two or three times that figure.

With the world monetary system moving towards a grave crisis, the legitimate demand for gold by private hoarders and speculators has reached a figure of well over $500,000,000 a month. That rush, accompanied by a huge demand for gold by many central banks, is threatening to turn stabilized marketing into chaos.

While markets exist in Paris, Zurich and other parts of the world, by far the largest is still in London. From bankers and brokers all over the world the orders flow into the bullion departments of five major London merchant bankers who meet daily to fix the price of gold.

These are N. M. Rothschild and Sons, Samuel Montagu and Co., Mocatta and Goldsmid, Johnson Matthey and Sharps Pixley. Rothschild represents the Bank of England which in turn acts as agents for South African gold.

The bankers with their huge daily orders get their gold from a seven-country pool made up of Britain, U.S., West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Switzerland. France was in that pool but backed out. The French government is one of the main forces behind the drive to push gold prices up.

Selling from the pool has pegged gold prices at about $32.20 (U.S.) an ounce. While much of the trade is conducted during the daily price-fixing, deals are also negotiated privately in the corridors and banking offices. A rumor in Paris or other reputable European centres can start a new gold rush that likely will continue until the U.S. makes a new decision on gold or takes such drastic action to protect the dolla. that speculators may be forced to retreat.

The U.S. could possibly do this by slamming the door hard on foreign goods and placing a freeze on the export of capital. But American hints that it might do so have brought threats of retaliation from countries buying American goods.

Even if the U.S. does manage to reassert the prestige of the dollar, there will be countless speculators and hoarders still in the market for gold.

In the great trade that goes on daily, the transfer of gold may merely mean putting a new label on a consignment lying in a darkened vault under London's ancient streets.

But consignments also are shipped from London daily, sometimes under misleading markings to protect the gold against hijackers.

In the Middle East camels have been forced to swallow the gold to carry the metal across the borders in their stomachs.

In India, private hoarding has been estimated at more than $3,000,000,000.

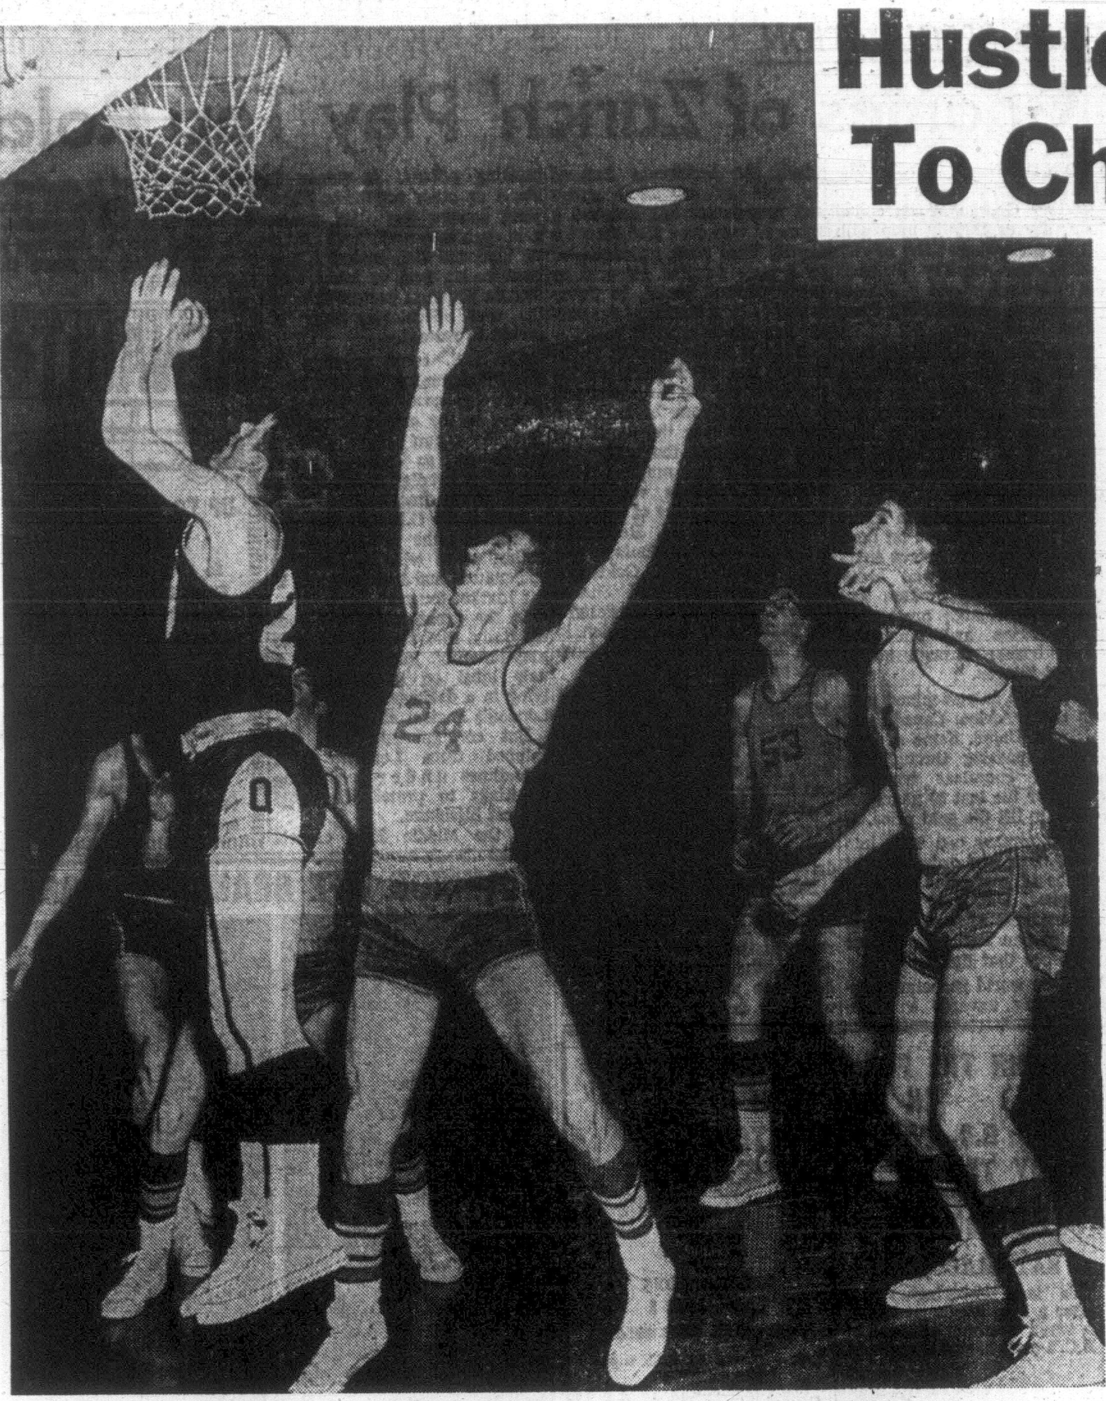
Hustle and Hutton Not Enough To Chain Chinooks in Opener



DREW'S PLEA MAY HAVE HELPED

"Don't go in," Chinook guard Drew Schroeder (24) seems to be pleading as Ray Delegarde of Hamilton Quigleys goes up for shot under Victoria basket during opening game of Canadian junior men's basketball final. Drew's pleas may have helped because Delegarde, who was far off usual shooting form, again missed his target on this play as Victoria's Mike O'Connor waited at right, Delegarde collected six points while Schroeder contributed 11 points along with fine playmaking as Chinooks tripped Eastern Canada champions 85-75. Hamilton Club Clipped Despite Edge in Rebounding

Victoria 85, Hamilton 75

By DOUG PEDEN

Teams that control the backboards win the games.

That's what they say about basketball battles but Victoria Chinooks refused to believe the theory on the rebound business Friday night at Central Junior High School and snatched a one-game lead in the Canadian junior men's final.

Outhustled, outmuscled and beaten on the boards for more than half way in the opening game of the best-of-three series, the Chinooks made superior shooting accuracy pay off for an 85-75 triumph over Hamilton Quigleys.

Hamilton coach Dave Bartolotta later paid tribute to the Chinooks and then sounded a warning to the Western Canada champions, who had just won their eighth successive playoff game.

"They have a very good club, but there is not a 10-point difference between the two teams," said the rookie pilot.

"We can play better than this so don't count us out yet! We lost the first game to Montreal (in the eastern final) but came back to win.

"I never saw the boys panic the way they did tonight. We'll make a few adjustments and I think you'll see a different team out there Saturday."

Chinooks and Quigleys will go at it again on the Central floor tonight at 8:30, following a preliminary game at 7. If a third game is required, it will be on the same court Sunday at 2 p.m.

Panic or not, Quigleys acted as if they owned the backboards during the opening half and they might still have pulled it out if they could have found a shooting partner for Barry Hutton.

After drilling 15 points in the opening half, which Quigleys finished with a rush to trail by only two points (39-37), Hutton went to town in the second session.

Quick, shifty and showing brilliant shooting ability, the chunky guard fired another 23 points to finish the night with 38.

Chinooks Had Spirit and Big Play

After Hutton, there wasn't much scoring punch in the hard-driving Hamiltonians, who often played with a frenzied air of desperation. Tall Gregg Jackson, who canned 11 points, and big Mike Hogg, who came off the bench to collect eight, were next on the Quigley point parade as most of the visitors were guilty of firing shots while off balance or from bad angles and thus wasted many of their opportunities.

Centre Jim Noble, scoring leader for Quigleys during the regular season, with a game average of 18.5, managed only two points against tough Chinook defending and Ray Delgarde, an elusive little redhead whose fine outside shooting helped him compile a 14.6 average, was bouncing shots off the rims all night and finished with a mere six points.

While Quigleys may have had their troubles, you couldn't take anything away from the Chinooks. As they have done all season, the young men of coach Moe Turner produced the spirit and ability to come up with the plays they needed to win despite the fact that two regulars were still feeling the effects of bouts with flu.

OPEN SHOTS

Their usual poise vanished from time to time but once they conquered a first-half tendency of trying to run and scramble with the hustling easterners, they appeared slightly the better team. When Chinooks moved the ball quickly, the eager easterners often dashed out of position on defence and allowed a series of open shots.

Chinooks also followed their habit of finding a man with the touch to pull their chestnuts out of the fire.

This time it was Glen Moffat who took over as club leader. Strong on defence and often superb on attack, Moffat dropped six field goals in each half to finish with a total of 25 points.

HALL ADDS 18

Glen had lots of help, especially from slender Chris Hall, who swished four of his soft floaters in about three minutes while the Victorians were building a nine-point lead midway in the second half (57-48). Hall chalked up 18 points.

Drew Schroeder, again a polished playmaker and ball-hawk, added 11 points while Barry Turner and big Mike O'Connor, a rugged rebounder and one of the reasons Noble was held under control, each contributed nine.

OPENED UP

Eventually Chinooks seemed to discover that Hamilton's pressure checking and fast-breaking tactics left the easterners vulnerable to quick sorties. They cruised in for a few easy baskets to run their lead to 84-69 with less than a minute to go and had no worries as Quigleys collected six of the last seven points.

With some of the Hamilton scoring aces expected to be tougher, and with Bartolotta's "adjustments" liable to present Chinooks with a few new problems, tonight's second game offers some interesting possibilities.

However, if the Chinooks follow their "share the glory" pattern they'll present another scoring hero or two and coach Turner hopes it will be enough to bring the national junior crown back to town.

Freak Injuries Give Vikettes Reason to Fret

Special to The Times

HAMILTON—Several "good luck" telegrams were forwarded to the University of Victoria Vikettes Friday, and coach Wally Yeamans this morning was looking for some of the goodness to show.

Even though Vikettes breezed by Moncton Purple Knightlettes, 55-29, in the opening rounds of the Canadian junior women's basketball tournament, not all of Victoria's luck Friday was good.

Freak injuries may have cost Victoria the services of two players for tonight's championship battle with Hamilton Dumonts.

Hamilton made it an East-West battle by trouncing Saskatoon Aces 80-26 in a penalty-filled affair.

GAIL HOBBLING

But while Vikettes were disposing of the Moncton high school girls, the big story was the unfortunate mishaps to Gail Vaughan and Margo Jackson.

Miss Vaugan, a first-stringer, fell heavily on the tiled floor here and suffered a back injury. She was taken to hospital for x rays this morning and was a "most doubtful starter."

Miss Jackson, entering the Victoria dressing room, had the fingers of one hand jammed in a door. She'll definitely sit out tonight's game.

"Gail didn't get too much sleep and had difficulty walking this morning," said Yeamans. "It'll be a big setback if Gail can't play.

HAMILTON GOOD

"Hamilton has a very good team. They're big, and move the ball well. We'll have to be at our best to beat them."

Vikettes didn't have to be as good against Moncton. Yeamans used his reserves freely, and every Victoria player except Vicki Williams managed to get on the scoresheet.

With Marg Maysmith setting a 13-point pace, the Vikettes grabbed a 26-11 first-half lead over the Moncton team. The winners got seven each from Jean Robertson, Marg Woodley and Lyn Hagglund.

The leading Moncton scorers were Joyce Douthwright with 10 points and Nancy Buzzell with eight.

SIX FOUL OUT

Three players from each team fouled out in the Hamilton-Saskatoon match with the Dumonts getting 58 free throws on penalties, although they hit on only 24.

A girl-to-girl, full-court defence held Hamilton to only a 39-25 first-half lead against Saskatoon, but they opened up as the second half progressed and ran away from the Aces.

Pat MacDonald led all scorers with 23 points for Hamilton followed by Heather Gilmore with 19 and Chris Brass with 14.

Betty-Ann Frederickson got 12 for Saskatoon with Barbara Hodges and Jennifer Leddy adding 10 each.

VIKETTES (55)—Marg Maysmith 13, Vicki Williams, Marcia McIntyre 2, Gail Vaughan 4, Jean Robertson 7, Marg Woodley 7, Lyn Hagglund 7, Gisela Weiger 6, Dina Gibson 5, Margo Jackson 4.

MONCTON (29) — Joyce Douthwright 10, Nancy Buzzell 8, Davey Allen 4, Sandra Haynes 4, Barb Clodatter 3, Wendy Wallace, Susan Wallace, Cindy Ford, Dot MacDonald, Joanne Cogan.

Hot Off the Line On March Nine . . .

If it ever leaks out, there's one curling item floating around Kelowna that may smother Brothers . . . British Columbia's minister of mines, Donald Brothers has let it be known that the province is experiencing a great mining boom. With all that precious metal lying around, how come the Canadian Curling Association's 1968 Brier pins had to be "Made in Japan"?

BILL GADSBY

Despite the strong fan support they enjoyed during the B.C. Junior Hockey League season, Victoria Cougars will probably report an operational deficit of just over $3,000 . . . The final figure will be released Sunday when the directorate holds a meeting at the Red Lion Inn. . . . Actually, the loss should not scare anyone . . . the operating costs include outright payment of equipment that was non-existent last fall but will be put to use again next season; prepayment of coach Doug Anderson's contract through to next October, and a performance bond on deposit with league headquarters . . . The equipment is, of course, the big item.

Cougars also will be better off in the talent department . . . Anderson had to put a team together in less than six weeks last fall. . . . He already has taken a personal look at several B.C. juvenile teams and plans to move into Alberta for minor playdowns there next week . . . And don't be surprised if ol' Bill Gadsby, an old friend who resigned Friday as Edmonton Oil Kings' coach, comes through with some players for his one-time teammate.

The big rave among golfers is the new aluminum-shafted clubs . . . Somehow, if I were a professional, I wouldn't rave because it might help the Alcan company . . . This is the outfit that plows some of its profits into a tournament called the "Golfer-of-the-Year" championship . . . The tourney's format was conceived by two Canadians—Holles Pickens and Doug Smith—for a basically-Canadian company . . . Yet it is virtually impossible for any Canadian pro to qualify for a chance at the $55,000 winner's purse . . . The only exception that stands on the horizon is George Knudson . . . Most annoying is the fact that Alcan's qualifiers are selected from performances in four U.S. events (New Orleans, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Western Opens) without any consideration for the Canadian Open . . . It is the kind of move that may annoy the nationalists.

One of the best things to happen to our golf courses has been the formation of the Victoria Turf Grass Association . . . While the golfers started it all, a few non-golfing groups are putting in bids for membership . . . among the latest are the always-interested experimental farm people.

Harry Filion, who beats the publicity hooves for the B.C. Jockey Club, will draw the usual amount of requests for passes to the track before the April 6 opening at Sandown . . . There were a few moans when the Jockey Club, at the insistence of the government-supervised racing commission, cut down the complimentary list a few years back . . . If it makes the local free-loaders feel any better, Illinois tracks have cut their "free" lists to the marrow, a reduction from 110,700 complimentary badges to a mere 400 this year.

George Fleharty, whose Shasta Corporation controls the Vancouver Royals' pro soccer team, was expected to pop into the city this afternoon . . . Bear Struggles Deep in Timber

MIAMI (AP)—He stands 23rd on golf's money-winning list with a puny total of $6,450. Two weeks ago at Phoenix, they cut him out of the tournament after 36 holes because he was four strokes over par.

In the Doral Open here Friday, he was two over par at the halfway point. One more stroke and he would have missed the cut again.

His name? Jack Nicklaus.

In 1967, Nicklaus was the golfer of the year. In the modern era of golf, he has won $723,000. Nobody tops that but Arnold Palmer and Billy Casper.

What's the trouble with the famed "Golden Bear?"

"I need work," Nicklaus said Friday after firing a two-over-par 74 and a 36-hole total of 146 in the Doral. The players who had 147 were out of it.

Nicklaus was 10 strokes behind the leader, 40-year-old Gardner Dickinson.

The long-hitting Nicklaus thought he played well enough to be in contention.

"I was hitting the ball good," he said. "I really hit some long drives today. But it was just that half-inch that made the difference so many times. I played all right but I didn't score well."

After next week's tournament at Orlando, Fla., Nicklaus said he would drop off the tour and try to regain his touch for the Master's at Augusta, Ga.

Nicklaus' troubles were not so heartbreaking as those of Doug Sanders, Doral's defending champion, and Canadian George Knudson, who had come into Miami with a two-tournament winning streak. Both wound up with 147s and were eliminated.

Attorney Says Orr Will Ask $100,000

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins' all-star defenceman will ask for a $100,000 contract next season, the largest in the history of the National Hockey League.

Alan Eagleson, attorney for the 19-year-old Orr, said Friday:

"We'll have to ask for $100,000 on the basis of the club's own evidence on how important Bobby is to the team.

"I understand Bobby Hull is going to ask the Chicago management for $100,000. If Hull is worth $100,000 to the Black Hawks, then Orr is worth at least as much to the Bruins."

In an interview, Eagleson said that without Orr the Bruins win about half their games, but with him they win seven out of 10.

With Orr in the lineup this year, the Bruins won 22 games, lost 12 and tied seven. Without him, the club is 11-10-3.

Orr is in the second year of a two-year contract with Boston. The Bruins sought a new long-term agreement with the young defenceman, but were unsuccessful.

Eagleson was instrumental in forming the NHL Players Association last year and he says 99 per cent of the players in the 12-team league, including Orr, are members.

GUELPH (CP)—University of Ottawa won the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union volleyball championship Thursday, defeating University of Manitoba 15-5 and 16-14 in the finals. Ottawa was undefeated in the round-robin five-team tournament.

TO NAME VICTORIA'S . . . . . . TOP MALE ATHLETE

Selection Group Has Tough Job

Several sports stars are still in the running to receive the male "athlete of the year" award at the first Celebrity Dinner of the Victoria Sports Council.

Sponsored by the Kiwanis Sportsman's Show and scheduled April 16 at the Empress Hotel, the dinner is expected to bring several sports celebrities to Victoria and it will honor the best of the city's athletic crop during the past 14 months.

Among the awards scheduled for presentation are those for Victoria's "sportsman of the year" and "team of the year." Also to be named at the dinner are the leading male and female athletes, who will be selected by a five-man committee.

Currently considering nominees for the male award, the committee has trimmed the list but still faces a tough task to pick the best from a roster of stars.

Certainly rating considerable consideration are Bob McLaren, the smooth quarter-miler and hurdler who collected silver and bronze medals for Canada at last summer's Pan-American Games, and Jim Shields, coach of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club, who won the 1968 B.C. and Canadian senior indoor speedskating crowns.

Touted by many as the year's top performers are Ranjit Dillon, scoring champion, most-valuable player and all-star in the Inter-City Lacrosse League last season, and golfer Dr. George Bigelow, winner of the Canadian and B.C. senior golf championships.

Others still on the list include distance runner John Cliff, Pacific Northwest cross-country champion, soccer player Ike MacKay, member of Victoria O'Keefes and Canada's Pan-American Games team; Gordie Gannon, selected to the national gymnastic team; badminton and golf ace Bob Hunt and swimmer Grant Treloar.

Organizers of the Celebrity Dinner expect to soon announce the main head table guests and the feature speaker.

Tickets for the event, which starts at 6:15 p.m., are available from Esquimalt Sports Centre, Memorial Arena, Price and Smith, and members of the Sports Council.

SMILING MOMENT for Esquimalt's cheer-leaders came early as Dockers tangled with Chemainus, top-rated north Island team. Smiles didn't last, however, as Esquimalt dropped 50-39 verdict in Friday's Vancouver Island high school boys' tournament action at University of Victoria.

TROPHIES AND CASH

Bowler-of-Year Event Scheduled for May 12

Times and sites have been set for the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs in the fifth annual Bowler-of-the-Week contest sponsored by the Daily Times.

Pin-spillers Friday night completed the 21st week of the 27-week contest and have only until April 19 to capture one of the weekly awards. All bowlers who win awards for topping their divisions during regular league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes are eligible for the season-ending rolloffs, scheduled this year for Sunday, May 12.

Bowlers are competing in four divisions—men's and women's tenpins, and men's and women's fivepins—and 27 will qualify in each division for rolloff competition.

BONUS PRIZE OF $100

Each division winner in the three-game rolloff event will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a regular subscriber to The Times will receive a bonus prize of $100.

In the tenpin quest for Bowler-of-the-Year trophies, both men and women will fire their shots at Mayfair Lanes, starting at 2:30 p.m.

Fivepinners will all begin at 1:30 p.m., with the ladies aiming for strikes at Esquimalt Bowladrome and the men cracking headpins at Gibson's Recreations.

Completing the list of award winners for the first 20 weeks is Curl Twentyman of Chemainus, leader of the women's fivepin section with a 350-245-289—884 series at Chemainus Bowlarena.

Who'll Be Bad Guys To Fans?

By Canadian Press

The OK Corral had nothing on Maple Leaf Gardens when it comes to showdowns.

The difference is that when the good guys and the bad guys shot it out in the classic western setting, there was no question who was who.

Tonight when Detroit Red Wings invade the Gardens to tackle Toronto Maple Leafs it's not going to be that simple for the more than 15,000 fans in attendance and millions more watching on television or glued to their radios.

The fly in the ointment is Frank Mahovlich, returning for the first time to Toronto since he, Peter Stemkowski and Gary Unger were traded to Detroit for Norm Ullman, Floyd Smith and Paul Henderson.

Rated by some as a superstar although reaching his potential only once in his unhappy career with the Leafs, Mahovlich still was the biggest threat they had going for them.

Big, powerful, smooth he has the ability to bring even the most jaded observer off his hands howling by winding up behind his own net, sweeping down left wing, finessing his way past opposing defenders and terrifying goalies with the paralysing power of one of the biggest slap shots in hockey.

First returns, Tuesday gave the nod to Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the Leafs, as a shrewder trader than Sid Abel, his opposite number with Detroit.

NEW WINGS FLOP

Ullman, Smith and Henderson each scored once in dropping Philadelphia Flyers 7-2 while none of the new Detroit players earned a point as the Red Wings fell 6-1 to New York Rangers.

It is expected that the new Toronto players will continue as a line while indications are that Unger will centre Mahovlich and Gordie Howe on right wing. Stemkowski has been working with Alex Delvecchio and Bruce MacGregor.

The Leafs are fighting for a berth in the playoffs, hoping to avert elimination for the first time in 10 seasons.

The team they now have to catch is Chicago Black Hawks, who are in Montreal against the Canadiens, leaders of the Eastern Division while second-place New York is in Minnesota to play the North Stars.

Western Division games tonight have Los Angeles Kings at Pittsburgh against the Penguins while Oakland Seals are in St. Louis to play the Blues.

Three Victoria Clubs Gain Semis in Junior Tourney

Three schools from the Victoria area and Mount Prevost were battling today for the Vancouver Island junior high school boys' basketball championship.

Central, Colquitz and Lansdowne were the Victoria clubs that collected victories Friday night in the opening round of the eight team Island tournament and moved into today's semifianls.

Lansdowne charged into a 33-13 lead and hammered St. Louis College 52-25 as Jim Nemec set the scoring pace with 16 points. Jim Griffin notched seven for the college crew.

Colquitz had to stage a comeback after trailing 14-11 at half time before tripping Lake Trail of Courtenay 45-29. Darrell Teng (11 points), George Hyne (10) and Bruce Twamley (10) sparked the winners.

John Roodbol staged a 23-point scoring outburst to power Central to a 69-33 triumph over John Barsby of Nanaimo and Mount Prevost advanced with a 42-30 conquest of the Alberni District squad.

PRO ROYALS SCHEDULE MATCH AT MACDONALD

Vancouver Royals of the United Soccer Association have scheduled another professional exhibition in Victoria.

Royals announced Friday they will play Oakland Clippers, the National Professional League champions of last season, at Macdonald Park on March 24.

It will be the second of a two-game Vancouver-Oakland pre-season series. The clubs also will meet in Vancouver's Empire Stadium on March 21.

Henderson Races To Downhill Title

SEATTLE (AP) — Nancy Greene, Canada's queen of the skis, rejoined her team-mates today to find the male contingent already in command after Friday's running of the downhill race which opened the 1968 U.S. national Alpine ski championships.

Scott Henderson of Banff, Alta., won the downhill title in 1:46.51 and three fellow Canadians finished in the top five. Billy Kidd of Stowe, Vt., placing third behind Rod Hebron of Vancouver, was the only U.S. runner to put a wedge in Canada's domination of the event at Crystal Mountain southeast of Seattle.

Dave Bruneau of Montreal piled into a tree half way down the 1¾-mile course and suffered a fractured leg and severe facial cuts in the only bad mishap of the day.

MISSES EARLY RUNS

Miss Greene stood in the hot sunshine at the foot of the run and watched as 18-year-old Ann Black of Seattle, a freshman at Colorado University, took away her national downhill title in 1:54.04. The Olympic gold medalist from Rossland, B.C., missed the mandatory pre-run Thursday while attending ceremonies in her honor at Vancouver.

Brother-sister acts figured strongly in the downhill competition. Wayne Henderson, 14 months younger than Scott, 24, followed Kidd in the official standings.

Cathy Nagel, 19, placed third in the women's downhill behind Erica Skinner of Stowe, Vt., and 16-year-old sister Judy Nagel was eighth. This is the home hill for the Nagels of Enumclaw, Wash., and for Miss Black.

Miss Greene was heavily favored today in the giant slalom, the event in which she won her Olympic gold medal.

STAMPS SIGN LINEMAN

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders have signed import lineman Wayne Coleman to a Western Football Conference tryout contract. Coleman, 24, can play defensive end or tackle and was a late cut from Oakland Raiders of the American Football League last season.

Uplands Pairing Captures Buttons

Victoria's senior golf buttons changed hands at Victoria Golf Club this week when Colwood's Larry McCooey and Roy Johnson lost on the 18th hole to Uplands' challengers, Jim Douglas and Jack Betts.

The new holders, who had a best-ball score of 70, now face an Oak Bay pairing in the next challenge at Colwood.

Cowichan Capable Of Making Thunder

Bays, Claremont and Chemainus Also Pass Opening-Round Tests

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Top-seeded teams bounced into the second round with unexpected ease Friday, so this will have to be the day the thunder claps in the Vancouver Island high school basketball tournament.

And don't be too surprised if Cowichan Thunderbirds stand up and clap loudest.

They picked up on Friday exactly where they left off last year to kayo Victoria High Totems and move into today's rounds as one of four undefeated teams. Claremont, defending-champion Oak Bay and Chemainus Timbermen—as expected—were the others to successfully hurdle the opening night's action at the University of Victoria.

The eight-team hoop-de-doo winds up this evening, with games at 7 and 8:30 deciding Vancouver Island's three representatives to the B.C. championships at UBC next weekend.

This is how it went Friday:

- Cowichan bounced the Totems, 51-36.
- Gary Taylor's defending champions from Oak Bay put out the Alberni Chieftains, 59-26.
- Chemainus, the north Island's top-rated squad, bowled over Esquimalt Dockers, 50-39.
- Claremont, the south's No. 2 squad, turned on the power in the second half to defeat Nanaimo Hubsters 56-30.

The unbeaten teams knocked skulls this afternoon with Claremont paired off against Chemainus and Cowichan going against Oak Bay. The losers tangle in the 7 p.m. game for third place while the afternoon's winners meet in the championship final at 8:30.

Some Worry Behind Tweed Curtain

After watching the Cowichan club knock off the Totems, Taylor frankly admitted his defending champions had "some reason to worry." The Thunderbirds are big and spirited, and they have Ted Webb and Alan Wilson.

Although B. J. Wightman, a former English international in rugby, is listed as Cowichan's coach, player Webb handles much of the 'Birds' tactical chores.

Webb also is the six-foot-one guard who jolted Totems in the opening night last season. His last-second basket gave Cowichan a 40-39 upset victory over Victoria.

He came back to toss in 12 points Friday, along with Dave Bellis, but it was Webb's direction and playmaking that helped Cowichan make it look easy.

And not to be overlooked is Wilson.

The six-one forward popped only seven points for Cowichan, but four came on a pair of second-quarter field goals that did much to upset Victoria's composure.

Most important, however, was the manner in which Wilson controlled the backboards against Totems. He handled the boards so effectively that Cowichan shooters were able to take second and third shots time after time.

Along with Webb, Bellis and Wilson, the Thunderbirds also have the height to make this a rather interesting day.

Ken Faught and Brian Anderson are both 6-4 and centre Bill Plumb is 6-5.

Little wonder, then, Taylor expressed concern after Friday's action.

Dockers Missed Upset Opportunity

Still, Oak Bay—the south's No. 1 team—had things all its own way against Alberni. The Bays worked their plays well and showed good depth.

Holdover all-star Dave Morgan led the Bays with 22 points, guard Don Burrows added 12 while Tom Holmes dropped 10 points and plucked off 19 rebounds with a strong display on the boards.

Esquimalt had an excellent chance of creating The Great Upset until three of the Dockers' first-stringers fouled out in the fourth quarter.

Chemainus led 8-4, 16-14 and 30-26 after the first three quarters ... and Esquimalt's upset possibilities looked rather bright. But after Bob DeCosta, Ron Grahame and Norm Smith fouled out, the Timbermen pulled away.

Timbermen counted 14 of their 20 points in the fourth quarter on free throws.

As they have all season, guard Gerry Plester and forward Rod Francoeur shouldered the brunt of Chemainus scoring. Plester counted 21 points, including a 13-for-15 performance from the foul line. Francoeur tossed in 15 points.

Claremont, ahead by a slender 13-12 margin at half-time, shook off early jitters to pull away from Nanaimo. Dave Tooby (18), Dave Baade (16) and Ken Lundeen (11) demoralized Hubsters with a fast-breaking attack.

Claremont's "Big Three" managed only 10 points in the first half, including six by Tooby. They poured in 35 in the second half.

Ron Wanted Perfection But Ice Made It Difficult

REIGNING as Canadian curling champions are Calgary's Bernie Sparks, skip Ron Northcott, Jimmy Shields and Fred Storey. They'll represent Canada at world championships March 20-23. (CP Wirephoto)

Alberta Claims 10th Brier Title

KELOWNA—Ron Northcott of Calgary rolled past nine rinks on the way to victory in the Canadian curling championships, but he wanted to run his total to 10.

"Let's face it, we were thinking about that big 10-0 record," he said Friday after he posted his ninth victory to win the 11-rink, round-robin competition.

It was the 10th time Alberta has won the Brier Tankard.

"But the way the ice was and the way we were curling, I think it pretty unlikely anyone could have gone through this thing with a perfect record."

The villain of the piece for Northcott was Dr. Don Gilbert of St. Thomas, Ont. The 36-year-old dentist handed the Alberta skip his only loss, 9-8, Thursday night.

"The game could have gone either way," said Northcott. "But I missed a raise and he won it. We're still happy with our 9-1 record."

USE PRECISION

Northcott's rink of third Jimmy Shields, 39, second Bernie Sparks, 28, and Lead Fred Storey, 36, curled with methodical precision Friday to post victories over Burke Parker of Gilbert Plains, Man., and Herb Pile's Northern Ontario rink from Geraldton.

The 32-year-old Western skip, winner of the world and Canadian titles in 1966, needed two in the 12th end to defeat the stubborn Parker 10-9 but had an easy 13-9 win over Pile.

"Parker was the toughest. We were playing on sneaky ice. It was keen, but draw shots would go crazy when they hit a run down the centre. When we tried to lay up, they'd either hook or hang."

The victory earned Northcott a trip to Pointe Claire, Que., for the world curling championships March 20-23.

"I don't want to make any predictions about that now," said Northcott. "The Brier was tough enough."

Second place in the national final went to Bob Pickering of Milestone, Sask., and his rink of third Jack Keys, 40, second Garnet Campbell, 41, and lead Gary Ford, 28.

HAS 8-2 RECORD

Pickering finished with an 8-2 record, losing 17-6 to Northcott and 10-5 to Bob McCubbin of Richmond, B.C.

"British Columbia was the big one," said Pickering Friday. "If we could have got going on that heavy ice Wednesday we would have beaten them. I didn't mind losing to Ron because he outcurled us, but I think we should have beaten McCubbin.

"With the one loss we could have forced a playoff and I know we'd be fired up to meet Northcott again. I can promise you it would have been a game."

Ice was the main bone of contention at the 1968 finals and it was so bad Wednesday that curlers were hogging takeouts. Garnet Campbell, making his seventh trip to the final, was light on at least seven take-outs and called the ice "the worst I've ever seen."

But Alan Smith of Charlottetown didn't have too much trouble figuring it out and finished with seven victories and third place in the championships—the best finish for a Prince Edward Island Rink since the competition started in 1927.

KNEW HAD CHANCE

"We knew we had a chance for the record," said the happy Smith after he posted a final round 17-16 victory over Bill Piercey of St. John's, Nfld. "But we didn't really curl that well."

"We nearly blew our last game against Piercey because we opened a big lead and lost interest."

Fourth place in the competition was shared by Gilbert and Jim Ayer of Fredericton, both with 6-4 records.

Ayer's rink was the surprise of the competition. The 200-pound electrician drew the first-round bye—the worst draw of the competition—and suffered three consecutive defeats. Then he won five in a row, upsetting Ontario and B.C.

Monarchs Upset by Rifles As Vikings Breeze to Win

University of Victoria Vikings did the expected but Queen's Own Rifles pulled the trigger on an upset Friday night as Vancouver Island Hockey League playoffs opened at the Sports Centre.

The league champion Vikings found smooth sailing and cruised to a 6-1 victory over Stockers North Americans.

Rifles had a tougher chore and had some troublesome moments before getting by Tudor Monarchs, the second-place finishers, 6-4, in the other game.

HIT HOT STREAK

Tudors jumped out in front on a goal by Don Robinson but the Rifles hit a hot streak and fired the next five tallies. Mick Brown and Dave Stones each counted twice for the military men with Cy Simonen and Reg Gurr adding the other tallies for the winners.

Frank Colburn, Dave Davidson and Frank Colburn were the other Monarch marksmen.

Vikings vaulted into a 4-0 lead in the opening period on goals by Ted Sarkissian, Bill Rudyk, Mike McAvoy and Paul Bion before Nick Nicoletti found the range for Stockers.

BROWN EARNS AWARDS

Sarkissian, in the second period, and Harper, in the third, closed out the scoring.

Second game in each series is slated for Wednesday night at the Sports Centre.

Brown collected most of the awards as the league held its annual trophy presentations. Winner of the league scoring race, Mick picked up the most-sportsmanlike-player award and shared most-valuable-player honors with clubmate Des Desjardins. Uvic's Jack Leggett was the leading goalie.

Bucks, Broncos Capture Openers

(Times News Service)

Penticton Broncos and Kelowna Buckaroos put their best foot forward Friday to rack up crucial, first-game victories in the opening round of the B.C. Junior Hockey League playoffs.

League-winning Penticton peppered Vernon Essos' goalie Jack Gilroy with 47 shots to post a 2-1 victory before 1,600 Penticton fans.

At Kamloops, Buckaroos defeated Kamloops Rockets 3-1 to take a 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven series before 1,650 fans.

Pat McMahon, Terry Strong and Jim Robertson were the Kelowna scorers while Grant Evans replied for Kamloops.

Kamloops goaltender Wally Denault kicked out 44 shots and Brent Kneen of Kelowna stopped 34. The totals of both netminders were helped considerably by comparatively easy shots from outside the blue line.

GOALIES' DUEL

At Penticton, Gilroy kicked out 14 shots in the first period and 17 in the second as the teams played scoreless hockey for 40 minutes.

Vernon's Lawrence Quechuk spotted Gilroy a 1-0 lead with an unassisted goal at 2:28 of the third period but Broncos broke through less than four minutes later—at 6:09—while Vernon was playing short-handed. Jack Taggart tied the score with a close-in shot after a passing play with Wayne Schaab and Bob Mowat.

Schaab scored the winner with less than two minutes remaining when he made a rink-length rush before beating Gilroy.

Mexicans Request Meeting

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican Olympic officials announced Friday night they have asked for an International Olympic Committee executive committee meeting the first week in April.

They also questioned the procedure under which South Africa was re-admitted to the Olympic Games.

The Mexicans, who have the most to lose if a boycott threat by what now amounts to 40 countries is carried out, thereby took the initiative in pressing for a decision on re-admission to the Olympics of South Africa, whose apartheid (Racial segregation) policies prompted the boycott.

The three top Mexican Olympic officials said that the vote to admit South Africa, taken by mail and passed by a simple majority last month, constituted essentially a change in Rule No. 1 of the IOC.

That rule states that the Games shall be held every four years and that athletes of all nations will congregate in loyal and equal competition.

POLICY UNCHANGED

Mexico's position as stated by the Mexican Olympic organization committee chairman, Pedro Ramirez Vazquez, and the two IOC delegates from Mexico is that black and white athletes are not considered equal in South Africa and therefor could not congregate in equal competition.

Rule No. 50 says any change in the other rules requires a majority of two-thirds of the IOC countries.

Lovable, Hitless Sox Unveil Batting Power

By Associated Press

Ah, what wonderful things spring can do for a baseball team.

Today's example is Chicago White Sox, those lovable, hitless wonders who had a team batting average of .225 last year.

The Sox made their 1968 debut at Sarasota, Fla., Friday, pounded out 14 hits and thumped Boston Red Sox, the American League champions, 7-3. It was enough to make manager Eddie Stanky risk a contented smile.

Two newcomers—outfielders Russ Snyder and Tommy Davis—led the offence with two hits apiece. Snyder, acquired from Baltimore, rapped a triple and a single and scored twice. Davis, who came from the New York Mets, slapped a pair of singles and scored twice.

The Mets, meanwhile, were idle but in form. Often accused of not being able to stay out of each other's way, they proved it in practice when ace pitcher Tom Seaver was hit in the head by a line drive.

Coach Eddie Yost was the culprit and the interesting part of this story was that Yost was supposed to have been hitting grounders, not line drives.

Seaver escaped serious injury and was expected to start today's exhibition opener against St. Louis.

Philadelphia Phillies playing without Richie Allen, took an 11-2 shellacking from Cincinnati Reds at Clearwater, Fla. Allen left the Phillies' camp and returned to Philadelphia to have his injured right hand examined by his own physician.

The slugging third baseman missed the last six weeks of the 1967 season when he cut his hand in an accident.

Jim Beauchamp slammed two home runs and Lee May had one for the Reds, who pounded three Phillie pitchers, including Chris Short, for 13 hits.

Oakland's brand new Athletics won their first start with an exciting late rally, beating Detroit Tigers 3-2 at Bradenton, Fla.

Four Houston pitchers limited Pittsburgh to four hits at Fort Myers, Fla., as the Astros beat the Pirates 4-2.

Ken Holtzman, unbeaten last season, took the loss as San Francisco Giants dropped Chicago Cubs 6-3 at Scottsdale, Ariz.

The Giants bunched three singles, a double by Willie Mays, a walk and a sacrifice for four third-inning runs against Holtzman.

MEDAL WINNERS

Mrs. J. Olson and Mrs. M. Graham were winners of the silver and bronze divisions in a women's medal competition at the Victoria Golf Club.

Liverpool Ties Spurs On Header by Hateley

LONDON (AP)—Tony Hateley, Liverpool's $260,000 ace, headed a goal to snatch a 1-1 draw against Tottenham Hotspur today in the fifth round of the English Football Association Cup soccer tournament.

Hateley's goal came two minutes after Jimmy Greaves had scored for Tottenham in the 52nd minute before a home crowd of 54,000.

The draw was one of four in eight Cup matches. Arsenal tied 1-1 with Birmingham, Rotherham held Leicester City to a 1-1 draw and Sheffield Wednesday wound up in a 2-2 deadlock against Chelsea.

Those matches will be replayed next week.

Everton defeated Tranmere 2-0, Leeds United blanked Bristol City 2-0, West Bromwich won 2-1 at Portsmouth and Sheffield United won 2-1 at West Ham.

Joe Royle and John Morrissey scored Everton's two goals—both in the first half—and these were enough to send Everton into the quarter-finals.

SCORES EQUALIZER

Leeds United, which defeated Arsenal 1-0 in the English League Cup final a week ago, went into the last eight on first-half goals from Mick Jones and Peter Lorimer.

The English Football Association Cup—first contested in 1871—is the glamor competition of the season. The winner qualifies for the money-spinning European Cup of Cup Winners' competition.

In quarter-final play for the Scottish Football Association Cup, Ranger and Hearts tied 1-1 while Dunfermline blanked Partick Thistle 1-0, Morton beat Algin City 2-1 and St. Johnstone defeated Airdrieonians 2-1.

In the English League, Manchester United, which was idle, stayed on top of the league standings as neighbor Manchester City defeated Coventry City 3-1 and moved into second place.

Manchester United has 43 points from 30 matches and Manchester City has 41 from the same number of games.

Clematis Pruning: Wear Your Thinking Cap

Tips for Home Garden

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

The pruning of a clematis is confusing to the home gardener because it is not generally known that nearly 100 species are in cultivation on the North American continent.

The genus includes shrubs, herbaceous perennials and climbing plants, to which the hybridizers have added many crosses that exhibit characters that are not easily fitted into any standard grouping.

No matter how much we try to simplify the subject we have to recognize four distinct groups as far as flowering habits are concerned, and we shall always have a few hybrids which overlap.

This leaves the gardener to make the decision as to the group in which his particular plant will fit, a decision that should not be too difficult if the flowering habit and time of flowering are carefully noted (and recorded) for one season.

•

The time of flowering determines the method and the time of pruning, and while we have varieties which flower continuously, or intermittently, from May to October, the period of most profuse bloom will fit them into their correct group.

The earliest to flower have only one period of bloom, which is through spring to early summer, and constitute Group 1.

The most popular species grown here is Clematis montana and its hybrids, but also included are C. armandi, C. alpina, C. macropetala, and others not quite so well known.

•

All this group are characterized by comparatively small flowers, generally around two inches across, and quite rampant growth. They need lots of room and are at their best romping over a low fence, a rocky outcrop, an old tree stump, or up a bank.

In general, those in group 1 do not require regular pruning in order to obtain a breathtaking display of bloom, but when they get out of hand a severe pruning may be necessary in June after flowering has finished.

Group 2, referred to as the patens group, includes the plants that give those enormous eight-inch blooms in May and June. The flowers are carried on short growths emanating from wood produced the previous season, in other words, on old wood.

No regular pruning is needed on this group providing (and this is important) the plants were pruned for the first year build-up and then trained properly to avoid an unmanageable tangle.

•

When a tangle has developed (as has happened in many local gardens) the plants may be pruned back severely immediately after flowering (late June) to produce strong new shoots during summer which will ripen into flowering wood for the next season.

These growths should be carefully spread and trained to avoid another tangle, and each succeeding year the dead ends should be trimmed back to good shoots, weak growths control pruning practiced in removed entirely, and general March or April.

The popular striped 'Nellie Moser', the pure white 'Miss Bateman' and the purple 'The President' are in group 2.

Flowering at the same time are the doubles of the florida section, such as Belle of Woking and Duchess of Edinburgh.

•

Strangely, these produce double flowers on old wood in early summer, and singles or semi-doubles on new wood in late summer. Pruning treatment is the same as for Group 2.

Group 3, the lanuginosa group, is the real puzzler and causes most of the confusion. It contains those popular larger-flowered hybrids that bloom anytime from June to October, such as the white Henryi and Madame le Coultre, the blue Beauty of Worcester and the mauve W. E. Gladstone, to name a few.

This group can be pruned hard every February, or a better method in most cases is to thin out all weak growths and tie in the strongest. This will give a generous supply of blooms at different periods during summer on new wood.

Here again, a tangled plant may be cut back severely in February and the strong new shoots will give masses of medium-sized flowers in late summer and full sized blooms early the next season.

•

Another method, one advocated by those responsible for display plants in public and private gardens, consists of pruning hard one-half of the growths in one season and the other half the next season, but careful training of the new growths is needed to keep the old and new wood separated so that it can be pruned in alternate years.

We are now left with the vitacella-Jackmani group which can be designated Group 4. These give masses of medium sized flowers through the summer and until frost.

Included are Jackmani and all its hybrids, Comtesse de Bouchard, Hagley Hybrid, Huldiane, Madame Edouard Andre, Ernest Markham, Ville de Lyon and many more.

•

These are pruned back within two to four feet above soil level every year in February or early March. New growths will extend rapidly, six inches a day in May, and flowers will be produced about two feet above the height to which the plant is pruned.

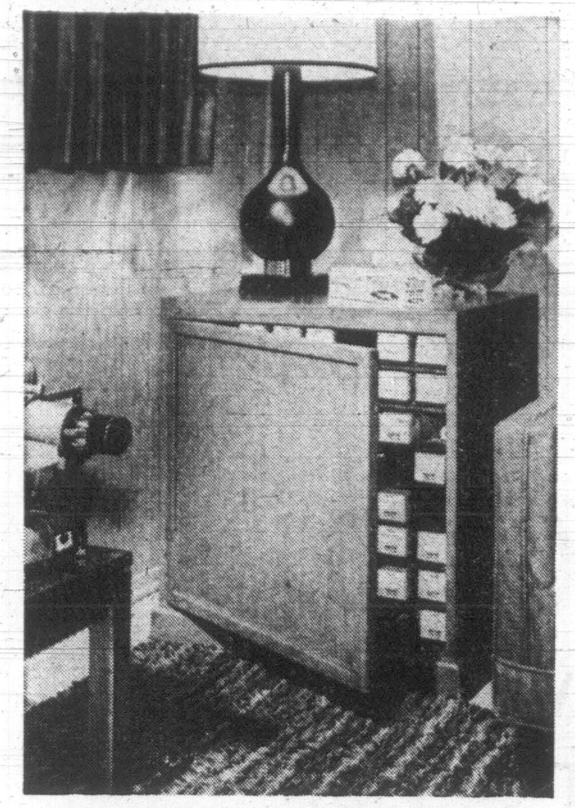
If such drastic pruning unnerves you, cut back half the plant the first year and note the results. The main difference will be the first blooms coming in July rather than in June, and these will be low down where they can be more easily enjoyed.

To this group can be added the small flowered species such as C. viticella, C. tangutica, and C. flamula. These are often allowed to ramble at will, but can be treated the same as others in Group 4.

•

All clematis should be pruned back to a height of six inches above soil level the spring following planting. This should give two strong shoots, the tips of which are nipped out after two leaf buds have formed. Each further growth is nipped when about a foot long.

Thus we encourage a bushy base and two strong stems not easily broken by wind or tools.



Shelves hold boxes of slides arranged in order.

SLIDES ARE FUN WHEN ORGANIZED

By PAULINE GRAVES

How many closets have you seen, designed for clothing, but with camera equipment and boxes of slides, stacked together in a jumble on the floor?

Linen closets, too, have their share of storing unrelated items, and even general storage areas, planned for miscellany, usually remain organized for only a short period of time.

In the family room, where the pictures are shown, a cabinet, 26" high, 25" wide and 19" deep, holds each slide tray in a separate compartment.

Any tray can be removed without distrubing its fellows, and with identification on the end of each box, selection of subject mater is as easy as choosing a record on a juke box.

Designed expressly for a particular slide tray that goes with the projector, the cabinet depth of 19" holds the length of two trays.

A door on each side eliminates one tray's hiding behind the other. Three inch molding around the base conceals heavy duty casters which give necessary mobility to the unit.

To make a separate compartment for each tray, ¼" plywood shelves were installed first, 2⅜" apart, and then ½" plywood vertical dividers added, creating 2⅜" x 2⅜" pigeon holes.

FIT EQUIPMENT

Refinements of the idea can be developed to fit the equipment.

Carrousel trays would need different dimensions, or could be used on shelves only, without the dividers. The main point is that a handsome furniture piece, used as a lamp or end table can serve a very practical storage purpose.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. My daffodils are coming into bloom early, but the stems are much shorter than usual. Why is this?—T.O.D., Esquimalt.

A. The fact that the blooms are so early accounts for the shortness of the stems. They just haven't had the usual time to grow, but if the season remains as it is now, the stems will continue to grow each day and probably be their natural height before the flowers fade.

Q. I find some daffodils are coming into bud with a pale cream color. Is this due to the soil in this garden? We bought the property last year. What can I do to make them normal?—Mrs. O., Uplands.

A. You probably have some of the lovely pure white daffodils coming into bloom. Many hundreds of varieties are grown here, and you will no doubt enjoy seeing them all during the spring bulb season.

WEEK'S WORK

If soil is drained of free moisture, continue dividing and replanting of perennials as necessary. Phlox, aster, heleniums, solidagos and a host of others can be done. If buying these plants, get them into well prepared soil with plenty of humus to avoid drying out in May.

Fuchsia and geranium cuttings taken now and rooted in sandy mixture, or terralite, or the new bark-kelp mix, will make flowering plants in summer. Keep fuchsias damp and humid; geraniums dry and airy.

Small flowering shrubs such as forsythias, spiraeas, weigelas, philadelphus (Mock-orange), escallonias and late blooming creamy colored hydrangeas (H. arborescens, H. paniculata and the Lacecaps) can all be given a small feeding of fertilizer such as 5-10-5.

A few hardy vegetables can be sown outdoors if soil is easily worked and the garden usually free of frost during April and May. Try small sowings of peas, carrots, parsnips, early spinach, broad beens.

If soil heavy, use coldframe, sunroom or unheated greenhouse for early sowings in peat pots or plant bands to facilitate planting out.

Circus Capers Production To Evoke Vaudeville Era

A return to the tradition-enshrined days of the vaudeville circus is provided by Solarium Junior League's Circus Capers which takes the stage at McPherson Playhouse March 27-30.

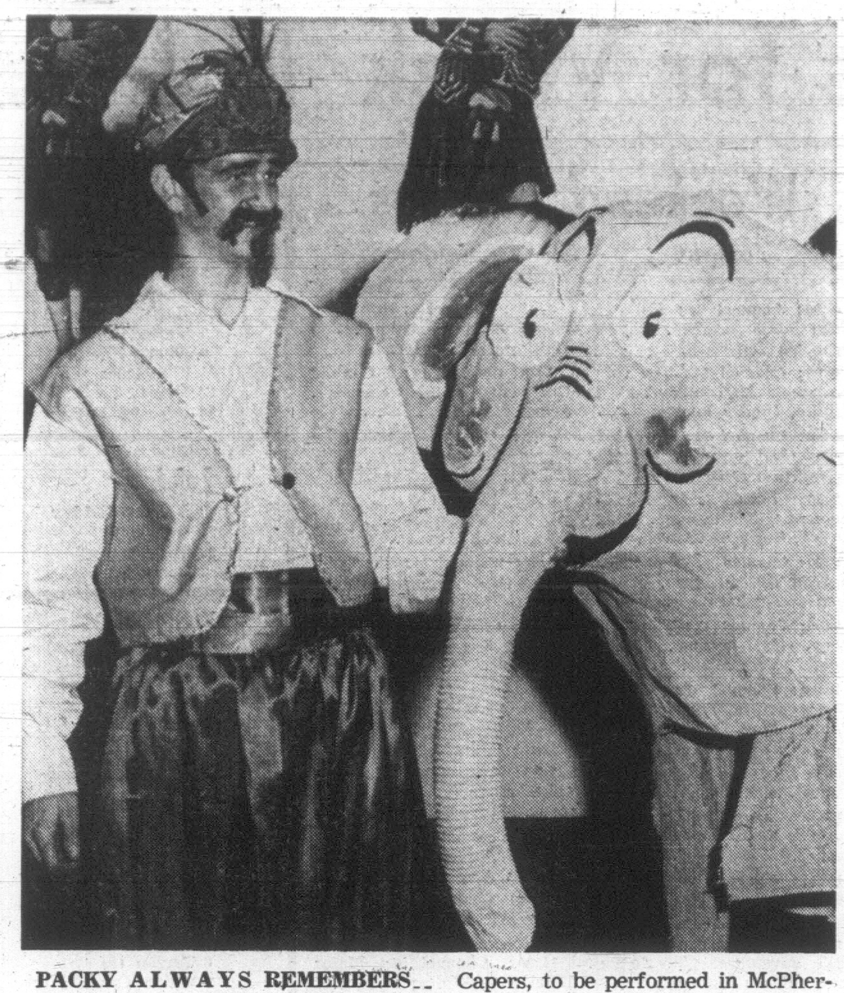
Costumes will reflect that golden age of pre-television entertainment. So will ringmaster Fraser McAlpine and many of the acts.

Wally Fletcher is the director of a show that will warm the hearts and delight the eyes of young and old.

Clowns will perform hijinks, there will be chorus numbers, specialty dances and numbers by Mimi and Alan Robertson and Marge Bridgeman, among other goodies.

Tickets are now on sale with special prices for students and old age pensioners.

Curtain time is 9 p.m. with a matinee on Saturday, March 30 at 2 p.m.



PACKY ALWAYS REMEMBERS .. his lines, much to the delight of his trainer Terry Fletcher in Circus Capers, to be performed in McPherson Playhouse at the end of March. See story at upper left.

U.S. Students Going to Concert

Forty young people from Quillayute Valley Schools at Forks, Wash., will attend Sunday's Victoria Symphony concert at the Royal Theatre.

In planning an annual expedition for the students, authorities selected this particular weekend in order that the group might attend the concert.

They will arrive on a 12:45 ferry, registering at the Strathcona Hotel.

While in the city, besides taking in the symphony program which features world-renowned pianist Malcuzynski, they will visit museums, art galleries and other points of interest.

Crown Jewels

Miniskirts come and go but the British Crown Jewels are forever a major attraction. More people than ever are expected to view the jewels this year in their new home — a $1 million stronghold 26 feet below ground at the Tower of London.

DIAMOND IN THE GROOVE

Wide Range of Good Records Available Through Library

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Throughout the year, hundreds of Victorians borrow from the record-lending department of the Public Library. At regular intervals the wide range of records available is enriched by the addition of new listings, and so thought it might interest you, from time to time, to hear of newly acquired discs.

A. The Story of Babar the Elephant; The Little Tailor; Peter Ustinov; Angel S 36357.

B. Nine Overtures of Mozart; Colin Davis; Seraphim 60037.

●

The charming tale of Babar is beautifully narrated by Peter Ustinov and Poulenc's music, in this orchestrated version is pleasant and amusing—except for the discordant opening bars of the first lullaby.

The cafe music, reminiscent of palm-court orchestras, pier bandstands and afternoon teadances is wittily funny: and the Hollywood nobilmente of Babar's nuptials and coronation, rather like Walton's facade in style, a delightful caricature.

USTINOV
. . . amusing tale

The only trouble is that children have no memories of these things and no awareness of such musical subtleties. As each sentence or two of the story is followed by a lengthy musical interlude, children find it dull.

Harsanyi's music for The Little Tailor though bright and pert, has even less connection either with the story told or a youthful audience.

●

On this side Ustinov allows himself more freedom with his voices; a variety of accents vitalises the one-man crowd scene and Ustinov fans will be glad to hear a rejuvenated Governor of Gibraltar in Cornelius the wise old elephant.

The language is often above the head of young listeners but if you borrow this record, theoretically for the children to listen to, you will enjoy it immensely.

The Nine Overtures, a brilliant Angel recording now reissued under the inexpensive Seraphim label, seems to have retained its original quality remarkably well.

●

The playing is very good indeed and the instrumentalists prove equal even to the fastest tempo (and some of them are unusually fast) set by Colin Davis.

Inner parts are clearly heard and Mozart's reliance on sweet-sounding woodwinds clearly conveyed.

The order in which the overtures are played ensures that less familiar, slighter ones are set between the most successful of them.

The heroic opening of Idomeneo gets the record off to a good start and it ends in a final flourish of Don Giovanni; and the whole disc is recorded with the fine delicacy essential to Mozart's music.

THE HOSTAGE

From Babble To Gibberish

By AUDREY JOHNSON

According to the best authorities Brendan Behan's play, The Hostage, is one of the inspired pieces of stage writing of our time.

Unfortunately one wouldn't be able to recognize it as such from the production which opened Friday night at McPherson Playhouse.

To begin with, only about one-third of the total text is distinguishable. The rest is lost in a general babble or is so overlaid with attempted Irish brogue that it becomes gibberish.

Then again, Behan's people—an earthy, brawling lot of very human beings in a Dublin brothel, more or less depraved and certainly individualistic—are with few exceptions represented as caricatures. Grotesque marionettes jerking about the stage and indulging at frequent intervals in studied musical comedy routines.

The only portrayals that conveyed some of the warmth and reality necessary to the play's success, were given by Helen Smith, Karen Austin, Ross Petty and, to a limited extent, Allen Hughes.

But even these were inhibited by the general lack of form and substance provided by Peter Mannering's direction.

QUIET SCENE

In a quiet scene between Miss Austin and Mr. Petty, there was promise of some real emotional depth.

There were moments too when Phyllis Gaskell as the "sociable" worker shone out like a light in the clutter, but at other times she too fell into the trap of type caricature.

In The Hostage we should be laughing with the characters, not at them. Laughing and crying a little, too, touched by their sudden erruptions into gaiety, tempted almost by their spontaneity to burst into song with them.

With the musical comedy style of production none of this came off.

TAMPERINGS

Nor, for me, did the tamperings with the script—a Canadian soldier for the hostage and allusions to Expo, LBJ, de Gaulle and the RCMP add anything of contemporary value to this tale of the Irish and their troubles.

In other words, The Hostage has turned up in Victoria looking a little like a diluted blend of Spring Thaw and Finian's Rainbow and doing considerably less than justice to Brendan Behan in the process.

The Bastion Theatre production occupies McPherson Playhouse nightly through March 22.

SUNSHINE, DANCING

Bahamas Fun Both Day And Night

NASSAU, Bahamas — There are two faces to this famous resort hard by the sea. One is the bustling face of Bay Street, the other is that of the native towns over the hill.

Over the hill time seems to run a little slower, the pace is easier and the sounds of mellow Bahamian voices and rhythmic drums mute the garish noises of the city.

No tourist on a visit to Nassau should go home without going over the hill to see how life is lived in communities that are throwbacks to older, easier days.

★

The best time to go sightseeing, naturally, is in the daytime when bright sunshine makes picture-taking easy and the multitude of colors brighter.

He will find the nearest communities, Grant's Town and Bain's Town, fascinatingly different.

There are small, wooden dwellings, streets no larger than alleys and alleys no larger than goat paths.

Market Street in Grant's Town and Blue Hill Road in Bain's Town are a little broader but both suburban communities were old before city planning was popular and the topographical confusion that resulted from this lack of planing is actually the main charm of these Bhamanian villages.

★

Old-time residents say existence has changed but little in the last century. Houses still crowd the streets as if front yards were a menace.

The women's costumes are gayer in these communities than they are in Nassau, often rivalling the bougainvillea and other flowering vines that cling to houses and fences.

Grant's Town was founded in 1829 and got its name from Gen. Sir Lewis Grant, then governor of the Bahamas.

It was settled by 370 Negroes rescued from a slave ship on the high seas. Bain's Town, named for an early resident, was settled by freed Negro slaves who had come from the Gold Coast of Africa.

★

Their descendants still reside in the little cottages that give this village its unique character.

These towns, and other localities just beyond, are lumped together in the phrase over the hill.

The reason is a simple one, tied directly to topography.

Just back of Nassau and the other shore resort areas on the north shore of New Providence Island runs a ridgeback following a rough east and west axis.

To get from the centre of busy Nassau to the subrubs stretching away to the south one must go up over this ridge and everything on the far side has come to be known as over the hill.

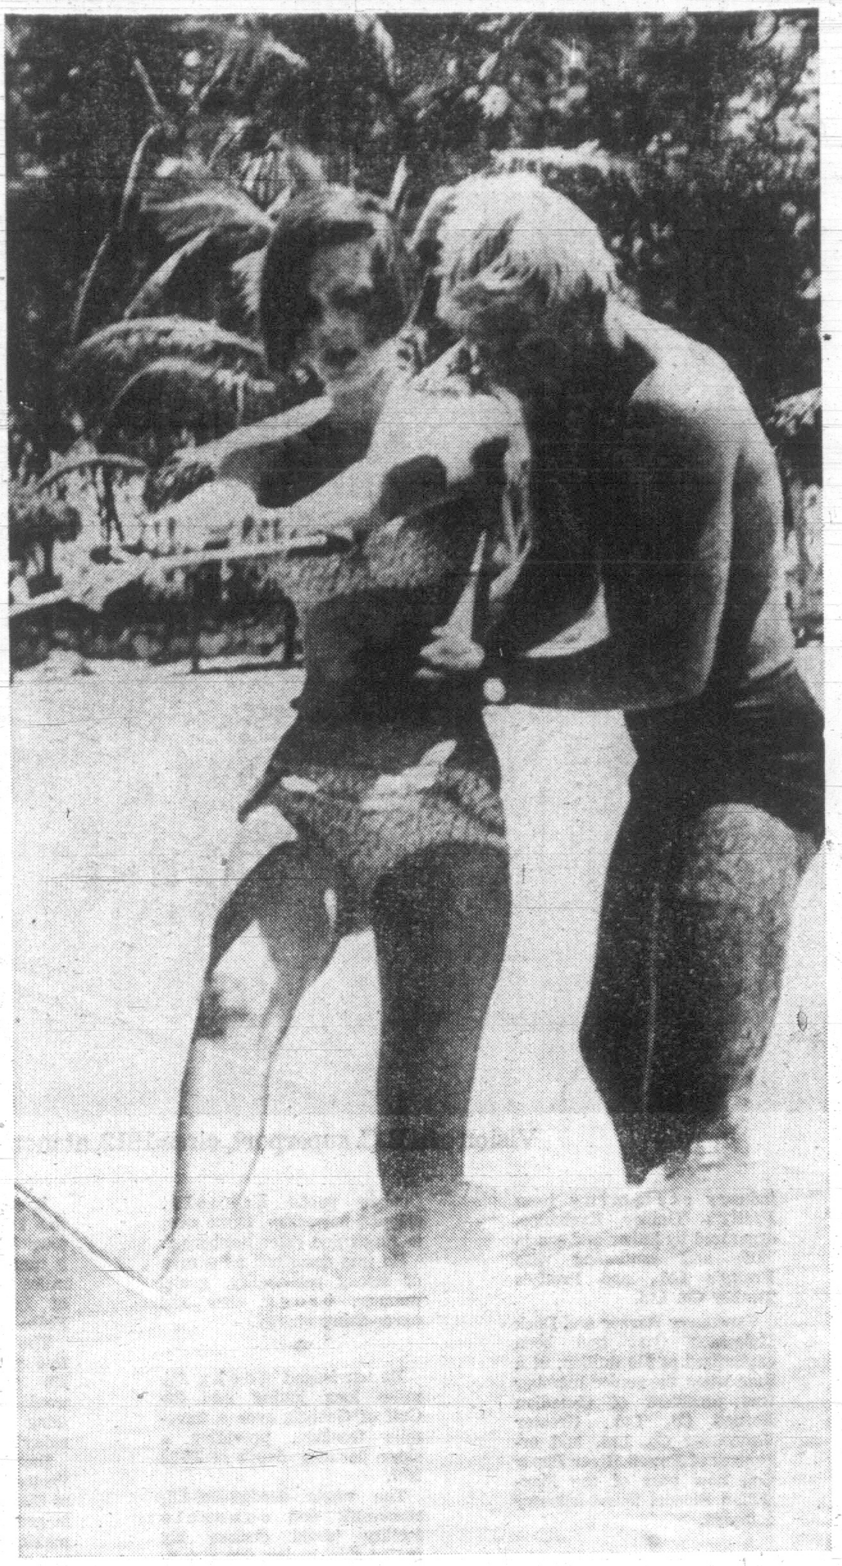
★

While the tourist will want to see these colorful areas in the daylight he will miss a wonderful experience if he doesn't go back again after the sun has gone down.

That is the time to whistle up a surrey—a carriage with a fringe on top—and ask the driver to go over the hill.

When dinner is out of the way, Grant's Town and Bain's Town come to life again—gay, picturesque and exciting.

This is when the music of the islands comes beating upon the eardrums like a leitmotif of the tropics. There is music for all tastes but those who long for authenticity will listen most eagerly for the beat of the goombay drums, direct descendants of the drums that echoed along the Congo centuries ago.



PARADISE is the name of the beach across the harbor from Nassau and visiting girls find it an excellent place to get water-ski instruction.

NIGHT SPOT attraction in Nassau is limbo dancer who keeps straw hat on while going under bar. It's not easy as over-enthusiastic tourists discover when they respond to challenge.

He Pushes Button And Friends Flee

When Mike Pittaway presses the button, his co-workers not only jump, they run for their lives.

For Mike, of Revelstoke, is an avalanche observer in Glacier National Park in British Columbia.

He is one of six trained avalanche observers working with the National Research Council of Canada in the testing of a system designed to get road-clearing crews out of the way of any sudden snow avalances.

The danger to road crews is real, not imaginary. In 1965 two men were killed by an avalanche at Rogers Pass. They were attempting to clear the Trans-Canada Highway of snow from one avalanche when they and their snow-clearing vehicles were buried in a second avalanche.

Experience has shown that, in Glacier National Park, there is a maximum period of three minutes from the time an avalanche releases until it strikes the highway. This short period is all that is given to road workers to abandon their slow-moving "cat" or grader and run out of the avalanche path.

To maximize the escape potential of this short span of time, engineers at NRC have devised a plan of action built around modified commercially-available Citizen Band communications equipment.

A trained avalanche observer is stationed in a safe location up to a mile away from where road crews are working. From here he is able to observe all the trigger areas which may affect that portion of the highway being cleared.

At the first indication of danger, he need only press a button of his modified CB transmitter-receiver to ring an alarm bell in the cab of the snow-clearing vehicle.

The operator must then abandon his vehicle and run for his life.

Off-the-shelf CB equipment was used wherever possible to simplify maintenance and operating procedures.

Five-watt transceivers were selected along with a selective calling unit for use in the vehicle. However, it was necessary to add the alarm signal generating capacity to the transceivers used by the avalanche observer. This involved adding two tuning fork oscillators and a push-button switch to this handheld unit.

Work began on this project after the Navigational Aids Section of NRC's Radio and Electrical Engineering Division received a request for assistance from the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development which has responsibility for Glacier National Park.

Two vehicles were equipped with the alarm system following an initial testing period in the Summer of 1967. Full-scale trials began in mid-October and are to continue until Spring, according to George Neal of the Navigational Aids Section, who designed the alarm system.

PROJECT BORN IN 1912

DIED IN DEPRESSION

'City of Docks' a Father and Son Dream

By AB KENT

The impact of a super port facility on the B.C. economy was predicted more than 55 years ago, but the chief visionary of the scheme projected then died long before the Tsawwassen concept was born.

A Vancouver industrialist, Charles F. Pretty, captured the imagination of British Columbians about 1912 with his Vancouver Harbor and Dock Extension Co., at the mouth of the Fraser River.

This was to be the key to a flourishing western Canada economy, a $30 million undertaking to handle half the prairies' wheat export and half of the western trade generally.

It was to be a shipping and industrial "city" of docks, basins, rail yards, warehouses, factories and mills built upon the reclaimed foreshore of Lulu Island.

•

When B.C. government authorities first looked into the Roberts Bank proposal, they examined the old plans drawn up by Pretty's company and decided they were well founded.

But the site chosen by engineers of the day, harbor experts J. G. White and Co., was on silty material between the north and south arms of the Fraser. The Tsawwassen site—10 miles south—has a fine gravel base ideally suited to foundations.

Charles Pretty died about 27 years ago, but his son Charles N. Pretty, still living in Vancouver, has long had visions of resurrecting the superport plan.

"I think the idea was very sound," Mr. Pretty said recently. "I also think the Tsawwassen idea is superior because of better foundation material and better access.

•

"The government site is valid beyond question," he added.

Reflecting on his father's scheme, Mr. Pretty said "At one time I thought I might carry the idea through. But the government project will retard anything like that for a long time."

Vancouver Harbor and Dock Extension Co. foundered around the end of 1918 when a shortage of capital was an obstacle. Panic and depression followed, preventing further progress of the company.

The Pretty family is well established in other B.C. industry stemming from Pretty's Timber Exchange, organized by father and son in 1910, and continuing with Pretty's Ltd., and Pretty's Timber Co. Ltd.

Vancouver Harbor and Dock Extension Co. had been capitalized at $10 million, at a time when the senior member was president of Canadian Borneo Co. Ltd., Greater Vancouver Co. Ltd. and organizer of Powell River Paper Co., now part of the MacMillan Bloedel forest industry complex.

•

The latter was established as a 100-tons-per-day mill and soon doubled its capacity, the cost coming to more than $6.5 million, compared with today's pulp mill costs of around $55 million for about three times the Powell River capacity 50 years ago.

Born on a farm near Belleville, Mr. Pretty went to Ontario public schools, skipped university, came west to ranch and enter lumbering.

He was described as a man of strong personality, genial manner, broad view and never-tiring energy.

•

He envisaged docks 1½ miles long jutting into the Gulf of Georgia over a three-mile frontage, providing a clear berthing depth of 30-36 feet.

The whole dredge-and-fill, stonework and concrete facility would enclose six major ship basins and a two-mile pond for log booms.

There was to be space on each pier—the largest nearly a mile wide—for buildings, sawmilling, grain docks and other shipping facilities; streets, cross-streets and rail sidings connecting with a major marshalling yard on Lulu Island, where 4,000 acres of land had been bought.

It was proposed to connect the rail system with downtown Vancouver by means of a tunnel driven three to four miles under the high ground of Point Grey and across False Creek.

The terminal would take five years to build, and the $30 million estimated cost would be equivalent to something like $100 million at today's prices.

Such was the magnitude of Pretty's scheme that a writer of the time reported difficulty in grasping its significance in making Vancouver "a ranking sea port" and industrial city, taking New Westminster and the interlying districts with it.

•

"What it means ... will only be grasped when the fortnightly pay rolls are being distributed," said the New Westminster British Columbian.

"That will be the magic touchstone that will transmute the leaden spirit of apathy into the gold of enthusiasm."

With these miles of docks, blocks of industries and 100 miles of rail trackage in operation, Vancouver will have "arrived," the paper said.

•

"The predictions so freely indulged in by every visitor, from railway magnate to royal duke, will be actualities then.

"This transformation, little short of marvellous and nothing short of stupendous in its conception and carrying out, means a mountain of work, a volcano of energy, a lava-flood of capital.

"But it will be done, and it will make Vancouver—which is the nearest to prediction this article will be permitted to reach. But mark well this prediction."

55-Year Wait, Roberts Bank Now in Orbit

By JOHN MIKA

The Roberts Bank concept may have had a 55-year countdown, but it's been blasted into orbit this week.

If the pronouncements of Premier Bennett and Transport Minister Hellyer are to be believed, there will be two superports alongside the Tsawwassen ferry terminal by 1970.

But the more likely prospect is that by then there will be just the first pier, for handling two or three coal-carrying superships, part of a development plan that will provide dockage for up to 120 vessels at 13 square miles of reclaimed shoreline.

And, with both sides protesting that they want the cooperation of the other, this facility likely will be a shared-cost in some aspect.

The current argument is over which portions will be shared by whom.

Ottawa says it wants to build the docks proper and run them but wishes to share the cost and responsibility for the huge industrial park that will be created behind them by filling in the tidal zone.

It is willing, apparently, to leave the port's railway system in provincial hands entirely.

HARBOR BOARD CHAIRMAN
BONNER

50-50 Partner

Premier Bennett, on the other hand, says he wants to build the whole project—from marine pilings to railway ties—but hopes that Ottawa will come in as a 50-50 partner.

The federal government already has completed a seven-month survey of the entire lower mainland coast which confirmed Roberts Bank as the most suitable superport site.

And it has a drilling rig at Roberts Bank right now obtaining samples on which specifications will be based in an early tender call for construction of the dock.

The provincial government, on the other hand, commissioned a three-week survey of the Roberts Bank area and has a conceptual plan for the port which still is undergoing major modification.

Act Proclaimed

Mr. Bennett threw in more weight—but no money so far—on his side of the scales by finally proclaiming the B.C. Harbors Act which had been gathering dust on a shelf for a year.

The board has legislative authority now to borrow up to $25 million for building port facilities.

But the choice of its members may be more significant.

Commercial Transport Minister Bonner was made chairman. Trade and Industry Minister Ralph Loffmark and B.C. Hydro director William Mearns are the other members.

Aside from the most obvious, the one thing these men have in common is a connection with railway matters.

Mr. Bonner is the official who issues railway charters and permits for extensions in this province.

Mr. Loffmark is the government's, and perhaps the province's, leading expert on railway freight rates and their economic impact.

Hydro Expert

Mr. Mearns is the management specialist, noted for his harmonious relations, with political and business leaders of all stripes, for B.C. Hydro which operates a freight railway linking Vancouver to the delta lands.

As it happens, that rail line passes within almost two miles of the superport site and always has been regarded as the logical line to provide a common carrier link to the port which could be used by all five railways operating in the province: CPR, CNR PGE, BCH and the U.S. GNR line.

Although the act permits seven members on the board, Mr. Bennett did not appoint a single port management specialist from the province's business community to his team.

More Members?

He still has the option to do so of course, and will have to if the province actually winds up in the port business as either a partner or the sole developer of the Roberts Bank docks.

But, for the moment, the act's proclamation looks more like a further twist of the screw compelling Ottawa to deliver on its promise to build the port while establishing the three-man team which will have to deal with the important rail extension no matter who owns or runs the docks.

And, in fact, Mr. Hellyer last fall asked for a high-level provincial committee to be set up for liaison with the federal government, particularly on such matters as the rail link.

That request was almost lost in the hullaballoo over his announcement that Ottawa was changing its mind and would go ahead with immediate development of Roberts Bank.

Meets Request

Well, Mr. Bennett is a poker player and he met that ante in spades. By dramatically proclaiming the act and saying he's going for broke, may have lost sight of the fact in the hullaballoo that he's meeting Mr. Hellyer's specific request.

And now that all bets have been called so noisily, the game has reached the stage where the cards are being turned up.

Mr. Hellyer reaffirmed more strongly then ever Ottawa's determination to build a superport at Roberts Bank by 1970, when the first Fernie coal exports are due to be shipped out as part of $650 million contract.

And Friday, the federal government announced it would call tenders for the work within three or four months.

CATERING TO THE WORKING MOTHER

Day Care Centres for Children Expanding

By KATHRINE THOMAS

It's a struggle to get two small children dressed and fed by 7 o'clock in the morning.

But it's necessary if you're a working mother who has to be on the job by 8 a.m.

And it's even harder to find someplace to leave your youngsters where you know they will be well-looked after, fed and happy at play until you pick them up at 5:30 p.m. to catch the bus home.

• • •

Transportation is a big problem. Without a car, it's impossible to reach many private kindergartens or nurseries. And there isn't time to go out-of-the way by bus.

And what about fees? For many women, perhaps separated from their husbands, the cost of good day care for their children is just too expensive.

• • •

With an increasing number of mothers entering the work force, the Family and Children's Service is attempting to meet their needs by setting up child day care centres at points accessible to mothers on their way to work.

The centre at Centennial United Church at the Douglas roundabout has been in operation for some time and takes care of 30 children.

On February 12, a second centre at Metropolitan United Church was opened for the convenience of mothers coming to work via the Quadra, Pandora area.

MAKING PLAY DOUGH out of flour is an absorbing pastime for these youngsters at the Family and Children's Service's new day care centre at Metropolitan United Church. Teacher Mrs. J. E. Booth gives encouraging advice about mixing the right ingredients. (Times photo by Irving Strickland.)

When there is room, children are accepted at the centres for a variety of reasons. Perhaps the mother is not working—but the child is very isolated, lacks stimulation, has become withdrawn, lonely and emotionally deprived.

At the centre, he'll find other youngsters to play with, creative materials, toys. He'll take part in story readings, sing songs, and be taken for outings to parks and playgrounds. And for the older children, there is a fully-developed kindergarten program.

The centres are open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Each child is given two snacks of milk, fruit and cookies and a warm meal from a nearby restaurant at noon.

At Centennial United Church facilities include a large, bright activity room, a dark resting room, use of a modern kitchen and a huge gymnasium.

• • •

There are two full-time teachers who have had pre-school training and four part-time teacher's aides.

The Lions' Club donated cots, the women's auxilary of the Family and Children's Service provided blankets, Eaton's donated a fridge, the women's auxiliary of the church spruced up the furniture and the Family and Children's Service bought all the necessary toys and equipment.

The children range in age from three to six. They are divided into two groups by age but are free to move from one group to the other.

They take part in creative activities of every type — free to make their own choice.

"Because of the long hours the program has to be particularly flexible," says supervisor Mrs. Jane Gurr. "The children are allowed to move at their own speed."

Both churches have donated freely their Sunday school facilities empty during the week.

Fees are geared individually by the agency to each family's means. A number of parents are not able to pay anything — other pay fees ranging from ten cents to $2.50 per day.

• • •

"The average cost of a child with the hot meal and snacks is 78 cents a day," says H. E. Saville, director of resources services. "But when you weigh the cost against what it's doing for the child, it's worth it.

"You see a tremendous growth in the children. Also communities are apt to discount the great strain on the woman who has to manage on her own."

Mr. Saville would like to see the community take an even more active part in the centres through volunteer work.

"Whether or not we can develop a volunteer program for day care remains to be seen, but we're going to work at it. The government could take over everything but that's not involving community resources."

The agency is particularly seeking new volunteers to help the teacher's aids.

"For pressure points in the program where extra hands are needed, we're looking for interested, active, retired men," says Mrs. Gurr. "Many children come from broken homes where they are without the influence of a father."

• • •

Centennial already has a waiting list — the limit of 30 youngsters is set by municipal officers. The new centre at Metropolitan will help to meet some of the need.

But for other children in different areas the Family and Children's Service also has 45 day care homes picked by the agency.

Staffed by mothers in the homes, they look after 75 children. The agency keeps a close supervision, visiting them often. The mother is paid a standard overall fee per child. The mothers of the children make their contributions directly to the agency to protect their privacy.

'CONFUSION MAKES REBELS'

If what youth is told differs radically from what youth experiences in life, only confusion results.

"And this tends to turn the individual into a rebel against society," said A. L. Cartier, director of adult education for British Columbia.

Mr. Cartier was speaking at the weekly panel discussion of clergy and laity held in the Y building under auspices of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

The topic was Christian Aims in Private and Public Education—one of a series on The Church's Way in Victoria Today.

Speaking as a private citizen, Mr. Cartier said:

"The communications problem is not confined to the schools; it continues into the church. The problem is one of method and language. No amount of teaching is of value unless the pirit of Christianity is caught.

●

Philip Fawcett of Mount View Secondary School said he would do away with the Lord's Prayer and Bible reading in schools, because "too often the teachers are not Christian."

"It is frustrating not to be able to comment on the Bible reading—theologically or even historically," he said. "Religious education is no longer found in home, school or university."

Mr. Fawcett listed three high school aims:

1. To educate in metaphysical principles. 2. To cut through false values to the true aim in life. 3. To meet youth in dialogue as to what is the chief purpose of man.

"The Hippie and the flower people have more on the ball than society sees on the surface," he said. "They fall short of Christ's standards of love and peace, but at least they are on His path."

Walfare Man Speaks At Lenten Luncheon

By DON DINGWALL

DUNCAN — Social welfare superintendent Peter Clugston will be the theme speaker at the Lenten luncheon meeting at St. John's Anglican Church here Wednesday.

Last year's Lenten experiment of a series of lectures is being repeated and was started by financial secretary Ed Linder of Duncan local 1-80 of the IWA.

The meetings are interdenominational and anyone is welcome to take along his sandwich lunch and enjoy the coffee, tea and debate in the church hall between noon and 1 p.m.

Ash Wednesday, St. John's hall was taken over by the church men's fellowship.

With a minimum of feminine help in the kitchen the men catered a fish and chip supper to over 150 members of the congregation and friends.

YEAR-LONG

The evening had an interdenomination flavor as the speaker was Rev. Paul Monahan of St. Edward's Parish Church. He spoke on the need for Lenten discipline being carried into people's lives throughout the year.

Men's Club president Ray Kane, Will Dobson and Dick Dobell organized the supper.

Mr. Dobell reported a profit of $130.

Wednesday evenings in Lent are also booked for lectures at St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Cowichan station.

Next week their guest speaker will be Rev. Clinton Swallow of Mill Bay United Church who will talk on: "Anglican and United One in 1970?"

Over 100 women attended the World Day of Prayer service in Duncan United Church Friday afternoon. The congregation was interdenominational, including members of the Pentecostal congregation and sisters of St. Ann, Tzouhalem.

United Church minister, Rev. Philip Louie, said: "There was a real ecumenical feeling and the service was a happy experience for everyone taking part."

The annual pulpit exchange of the Presbyterian churches on the island will bring Rev. Ed. Ling of the Chinese church, Victoria, to Duncan. The exchange is set for April 21, the first Sunday after Easter.

Panel Sunday On Pollution

A panel discussion on water pollution will be held at the Unitarian Church of Victoria, 106 Superior Street, Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

It will be chaired by Dr. George Evans, deputy medical health officer for Greater Victoria.

Members of the panel will be Dr. Alan Austin, assistant professor in the department of biology at the University of Victoria; Dr. Kenneth Thornton, director of laboratories at Royal Jubilee Hospital; and William Yeomans, a consulting landscape architect.

This is the fifth and final part of a series of discussions entitled Man in His Environment: Pawn or Power?

PRAYER GROUP AT HOTEL

Victoria Prayer Group, an undenominational organization started in 1949 by Mrs. Dorothy Abraham, will meet in the Dominion Hotel every second and fourth Wednesday of the month at 3 p.m.

Meetings were formerly held in the Memorial Hall of Christ Church Cathedral.

"All who believe in prayer for a chaotic world, sick unto death, are welcome to join us," says Mrs. Abraham.

THE CHURCH IN ACTION

They All Like Happiness St.

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

Why doesn't the church do more for people in this world instead of talking so much about the next?

In fact, the church does a great deal for mortals here below and this applies to churches of all denominations. Millions are poured into overseas relief funds; millions more are directed to home charities.

One of the many examples is the Gorge View Homes for Senior Citizens sponsored by the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada.

Since 1959, when the first sod was turned, the church has spent more than $310,315 on the construction of bright, well-equipped bungalows for 40 senior citizens at Chown Place—a five-acre site between Burnside and Gorge roads.

TWO MORE UNITS

Recently the Victoria Presbytery voted $103,777 for the construction of two more units which will house 16 more elderly citizens—a total of 56.

The contract has been awarded to Victoria contractors T. Lambie and Son Ltd. Construction began this week and is expected to be completed by May.

Ultimately the church hopes to provide homes for 130 senior citizens, and, at the moment, it has a waiting list of 60 men and women.

Suites for single persons are rented at $27 a month; those for married couples at $37.

Tenats pay for their own electric lighting, heating and cooking. But electric stove, refrigerator, drapes and bathroom facilities are provided, along with cablevision for users of TV sets.

'HAPPY COMMUNITY'

"Generally speaking, we are a very happy community," says 94-year-old Mrs. Gertrude Mason, the oldest tenant on the estate.

"We live quietly most of the time, but many of us attend socials and concerts at the Silver Threads Centre on weekdays and go to church on Sundays."

While members of the United Church are given some priority, men and women of other faiths are eligible. And the present community includes two Roman Catholics.

The chief condition is that applicants must be 60 years of age and have lived in British Columbia for three consecutive years.

Another is that their montly income must not exceed 140 per cent of the federal old-age pension and the provincial assistance allowance combined.

NO NURSING

It is also required that residents must be able to look after themselves, because nursing care is not available on the estate.

"Fortunately most of the people here are in good health," said Miss Hazel Man, 74-year-old member of Victoria's First Baptist Church and a Baptist missionary in the Philippines for 14 years.

"I've lived here four years and I don't know of a pleasanter community."

John Carmichael—still robust and youthful in his 85th year—walks around the estate every day and calls frequently on neighbors.

He introduced me to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Dixon, formerly of Winnipeg and originally from Yorkshire, England, and Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus Wray, who have lived at Chown Place since 1966.

All seem pleased with their environment.

NON-PROFIT

Keith Henderson is president of the Gorge View Society, a non-profit organization created by the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church in June, 1966.

"We build new housing units as funds become available," he said.

Funds so far have come from the Board of Evangelism and Social Service of the United Church; grants from the B.C. government and the development fund of the B.C. Conference of the Church; from bequests, donations and various United Church groups, including the United Church Women.

Jock Sneddon, who acts as public relations man for the Gorge View Society, stressed the importance of sons, daughters and other relatives keeping in touch with residents at Chown Place.

"Physical accommodation is important," he said. "But our elderly folk need to be remembered as well. They like to hear from their families and friends—even if it is only a phone call."

ORGANIZED HELP

The Turkish Red Crescent organization has sent about $5,500 to the International Red Cross to help the peoples of both North and South Vietnam.

STARRING in Edward Albee's play The American Dream next week at First United Church are Joan Marshall (top) and Derek Eversfield.

Albee Play Planned By Church

The controversial play The American Dream by Edward Albee will be presented by the New World Players of Victoria United Church next Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

Edward Albee is the author of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and the dialogue in both plays is described as "offensive to some."

"The American Dream is actually a criticism of modern society," said Denis Johnson, who is directing the play and will conduct a final rehearsal in the church basement Sunday at 3 p.m.

"Some may find it too outspoken but it is a thought-provoking play and that is the kind of drama we are attempting to put across."

The cast includes Jo Pepper, Joan Marshall, Sylvia Clark, Derek Eversfield and Dave Roberts.

SALONIKA (Reuters) — Greek doctors performed eardrum transplant operations on an 18-month-old baby and a 27-year-old carpenter Friday night, it was announced.

The doctors, led by Prof. George Yiannoulis, performed the operations at the Ahepa Hospital here, officials said.

They carried out a similar operation Feb. 29, transplanting the eardrum of a traffic accident victim to a 35-year-old worker.

He described the operations as successful. The eardrum membranes had been stored in a refrigerator.

SHE may not be big, but she's bright. This as yet unnamed black Terrier cross was the star of the city pound during her 11-day stay which ended Friday. She will go to her new home with Dr. and Mrs. E. T. W. Nash.

Dog Taught to Obey 'Stay' Meant 'Stay'

The "stayingest" dog in Victoria was released from jail Friday afternoon into the care of it's new owners, Dr. and Mrs. E. T. W. Nash.

Local SPCA manager David Beeching said that the dog, a black terrier cross, had been abandoned outside a coffee shop in the Mayfair shopping centre Feb. 27.

Witnesses said a man drove up to the curb and let the dog out.

He said "now you stay there" and drove away.

And the little dog stayed and stayed. At one point someone in the coffee shop called the dog and fed it. It returned to the sidewalk and stayed.

At about 2:15 in the afternoon the terrier was "arrested" and hustled off to jail.

"She was very obedient" Mr. Beeching said.

"After four days in the pound unclaimed," he added, "animals are transferred to another section of the building where they await adoption."

At present there are about 20 dogs and eight cats waiting for homes. The cats include a mother and four kittens.

Much More Asked Of Modern Pupils

By ANDREW McMORLAND

Where is education heading? This is the theme of a series of six articles written by local educators on topics of their choice, appearing during Ed-choice, appearing during Education Week.

Continuous progress, co-operative and team teaching, open areas, programmed learning, the level system, individualized instruction (not to be confused with instructing individuals).

These, and others, are being used in the schools of British Columbia today.

The role of the teacher in these situations is vastly different from the traditionally assigned. There are newer and more demanding expectations for teacher and pupil.

No longer can the pupil be expected just to attend regularly, be punctual, dress appropriately, be neat and clean, obey school rules and be diligent in his studies as outlined in the Public Schools Act.

He must be brought to see the relevance of his own part in the educative process, that he has a responsibility for his own rate and direction of learning and that his progress is the result of a co-operative effort involving himself, the school, the home and the community.

ON HIS OWN

In newly-adopted school organization the pupil cannot expect that the teacher or someone else will schedule five hours of activity every day, every week and supervise to see that he does them.

For some of the time he will be on his own and he must be prepared to take the responsibility for the proper use of this time. He cannot continue to fall back on the fact that: "the teacher didn't give me anything to do;" "no one is watching so I can do as I like;" "He is a poor teacher and I didn't learn anything."

Poor teaching is an excuse for poor progress or complete lack of progress to a grade one pupil who is so dependent upon the teacher but a Grade 9 pupil who has mastered the fundamental skills of learning cannot excuse his poor grades entirely on those grounds.

Tp provide the teacher with the time to assess the level of development and achievement of each pupil, to provide an adequate program for each to follow and to evaluate continuously the progress made, the pupil must be prepared to assume responsibility for those areas for which he can rightly be held accountable.

Why should children who can tell time have to be told that they are going to be late for school?

Why do children old enough to know how they should conduct themselves while moving in the halls or rooms have to be supervised?

Why should pupils who have all the reading skills necessary sit and let someone else do their reading for them?

Not only do many expect these things to happen but the school encourages this behavior by controlling, directing and supervising any and all activities.

Starting with the kindergarten the school should place the responsibility where it belongs and expect to see it carried through. The school should be working toward producing an independent learner.

Research says that 50 per cent of a child's achievement is attained by the end of the third grade; 75 per cent by the end of the seventh grade. If independent learners are to be produced, it is clearly the job of the elementary school and it will have to organize to accomplish it.

To do so effectively it requires the assistance of all the community, in time, effort and money; but most of all it requires children who know why they are in school and are willing to do what is necessary to help themselves.

Then the school can truly be said to be for the children.

Mr. McMorland is principal of Victoria West elementary school. He taught nine years at Lake Cowichan and 11 years at Duncan.

SCHOOL DUTY

Teach Industry Pupil's Worth

By DON VIPOND

A community conference on education was told Friday night that schools must tell the business world about the potential employees they are grooming.

Occupational and some vocational graduates are not finding their place in the work world, said E. G. Stroyan.

"Why? Because the employer does not understand the curriculum and in part because he has not been invited to take part in the preparations necessary to make the program work."

The former teacher and vice-principal, now manager of community relations for MacMillan Bleodel Ltd., said lack of communication between educators and industry can be fatal.

He was speaking to more than 100 people — teachers, trustees, labor, industry and employer representatives, students, politicians, clergy and others — in a community debate on education.

Many students do well within the school system without much help, he said.

List Liabilities

"But what of those that go into the occupational course because they have limited ability? What of those a step above who are on a vocational course because they have nowhere else to go?"

After training these students, the school abdicates its responsibility.

"It dumps the occupational student and, in some cases, the vocational student into a world which can use him but it fails to educate society as to how the student can fit.

"And it fails to educate the student as to the standards and mores and practices of the society into which he will go."

There has to be something wrong when employment agencies say any student who wants a worthwhile job had better take the academic program.

'How Far?'

And there has to be something wrong when the majority of employers are still hiring students on the basis of answers to two questions:

"How far did you go in school?"

"Were you on the university program or the general program?"

Nobody in the school system, he said, has the responsibility of communicating the facts of the curriculum to the rest of the world.

Phrases like "technical-vocation option," "occupational courses," "community services program" and "visual and performing arts program" don't mean anything to employers.

Mr. Stroyan said he checked with those responsible for hiring hundreds of people "and not one of them knew."

The importance of seniority for promotion in numerous labor contracts poses a major problem for the Grade 10 occupational graduate.

Future Needs

Any practical person hiring young people is going to make sure they have the potential for the top job they may reach through seniority, he said.

So the personnel supervisor insists on Grade 12 education for the new man, not because his first job requires it but because his future job will.

The Grade 10 graduate could easily handle the first job but he gets no chance.

Mr. Stroyan said the solution may lie in a conference between educators, management and labor before an occupational course becomes part of the curriculum.

His concern, he said, was not with what solutions might have developed but with the fact such a conference was not held in the first place.

Buyer Not Asked

"The buyer, if you want to be cold about it, is not consulted."

What other line of business is there where the manufacturer never consults the buyer of his products?

Mr. Stroyan said he thought the community conference to probe education issues was a "tremendous idea."

Following his talk, delegates split into groups to discuss his views and seek solutions. Group sessions continued today to look for answers on a variety of educaton issues.

'Your Sickest Patient Must Get New Heart'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard, the pioneer heart-transplant surgeon from South Africa, has told Congress only one standard should be applied—and only by doctors—in deciding who should receive a new heart: "Who is the sickest patient?"

Barnard testified before a Senate government operations subcommittee Friday that a proposed commission to study legal, ethical and social aspects of heart-transplant operations is "an insult to your doctors."

"Who decides where the general should attack?" Barnard asked the senators. "No. I don't think the public is qualified to make the decision. The general is qualified to make the decision."

Senator Abraham A. Ribicoff (Dem.-Conn.) asked which of several patients should be chosen if just one donated heart is available.

NEEDIEST RECIPIENT

"Operate on the patient who needs it most," replied Barnard.

Then Ribicoff outlined a hypothetical situation in which a doctor would have to choose one patient to receive a new heart from among a millionaire, a senator, an industrialist and a laborer.

"I've just explained it to you," Barnard said. "Who is the sickest patient?"

Barnard said it is up to the doctor to decide when to remove a heart from a donor—as he did from two accident victims in South Africa.

"Why do we have to have new definitions of death, or commissions to tell us when a patient is dead? We doctors have done that for years."

Barnard has performed two heart-transplant operations. His first patient, Louis Washkansky, died after 18 days, but his second, retired dentist Philip Blaiberg, is still alive after receiving his new heart Jan. 2.

Barnard said such surgery can be successful even if the patient dies because "we can at least alleviate suffering."

LBJ Advertising Angers McCarthy

McCARTHY
. . . hit on war stand

FRANKLIN, N.H. (AP) — Senator Eugene J. McCarthy says President Johnson should disavow publicly his backers' advertising that votes for McCarthy in New Hampshire could cheer the Communists in Vietnam.

McCarthy, challenging Johnson in the primary here on the issue of Vietnam, said he did not know whether the radio advertising that he and his backers have complained about was directed by the White House.

But he told a news conference in Rochester, N.H., Friday night: "If these ads were being put out in my name, I'd protest publicly."

The McCarthy campaign staff has distributed examples of what they said were spot announcements urging Democrats to write in the president's name in the primary next Tuesday.

One such announcement begins:

"The Communists in Vietnam are watching the New Hampshire primary. They're watching to see if we, here at home, have the same determination as our soldiers, navy men and marines who were fighting in Vietnam. Don't vote for fuzzy thinking and surrender. . . ."

McCarthy returned from Washington Friday night to launch the final days of campaigning before Tuesday's primary.

PRINCIPAL URGES ACTION FOR SURVIVAL

Teachers 'Too Fear-Ridden' to Speak

By DON VIPOND

A Victoria high school principal says it's time to stop worrying about freedom for students and consider survival for teachers.

"Now is the time for all teachers who see gross problems in the school situation to say so," says Horace Dawson, principal of S. J. Willis junior secondary school.

He suggests that if enough teachers speak out, Education Week can be stretched into a "memorable" Education Month.

A veteran of 37 years in teaching, Mr. Dawson is a former executive member of the principals' association and has served on committees of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

HAMSTRUNG

He sees the local school system hamstrung by fearful teachers, by committees of trustees and teachers which are doomed to failure and by a provincial government which won't do the job.

"What the Victoria school system needs is a guts program by teachers," says Mr. Dawson. "We are failing in our professional duty by remaining individually silent.

"It's time for teachers individually to come out of the bleachers to form a team in the arena."

Teachers, he says, are fear-ridden.

They suffer from the pressures of over-sized classes, the most overcrowded of any in B.C. secondary schools.

They suffer from the uncertainty generated by a swiftly-moving revolution in social values.

"But worst of all from their own fear of condemnation from society if they speak out."

The profession will only gain the significant respect of the parents when its members stand up for what they believe is needed to make the system work, he suggests.

And he predicts that if mass resignations were the weapon used by teachers to gain their ends, many hundreds of them would "stick by their guns to the bitter end."

Trustees and teachers working together in committees seem tied too closely to the public purse to speak plainly.

"But individual teachers can voice their concern—and if enough do they'll be listened to."

While school construction drops millions of dollars behind requirements, the Bennett government can produce $25 million "in three minutes" for a superport.

"It's time that we decided the provincial government is not going to do enough in the next year or two. The local authorities will have to come to grips with the problem or cause children to suffer the dire consequences."

The school system is headed for a "nervous breakdown" unless parents of Greater Victoria become much more concerned, says Mr. Dawson.

"What is needed is concern for those who make any educational organization possible—the teachers."

SAANICH POLICEMEN GET PARITY

Saanich and its policemen agreed to a new one-year contract Friday which will provide parity with the city.

Police commission chairman Hugh Curtis said the settlement represents a wage increase of just over 6 per cent for a first-class constable, who now will make $620 a month.

He said he subscribes "to the principle of parity between Saanich and city policemen" when the settlement is a reasonable one. He described the negotiations as good, without recourse to arbitration.

The police contract is the first one settled in Saanich municipality. Negotiations are in progress covering firefighters and inside and outside municipal employees.

Need for Burns Unit 'Brought Home to Us'

Boy Loses Fight After 87 Days

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The tragic death of a 14-year-old boy has given new impetus to a joint labor-industry campaign for a special burns treatment unit in St. Joseph's Hospital.

David Doyle died Friday, 87 days after suffering burns to 85 per cent of his body after a one-gallon can he was holding exploded behind his home at 2780 Millstream.

A hospital spokesman said this morning that with such extensive burns, any person would have to be "extremely lucky" to survive.

The family has declined flowers and asked that donations be made to the A. W. Toone Memorial Fund for the burns unit at St. Joseph's.

The chairman of the unit's fund-raising committee, John Nicol, said this morning the sympathy of all fund committee members is extended to the family "in a real and meaningful manner."

"Can this bring to all Vancouver Island residents the need for such a burns unit in St. Joseph's? The medical profession is well aware of the danger of infection at times when burns occur and such treatment and equipment and isolation is imperative.

"Co-operation is the key which brought industry and labor together to start this burns unit. Today we have one more case of the need for this unit brought home to each of us."

Sands Mortuary announced this morning that the funeral service Monday, at 11 a.m. in the Memorial Chapel of Chimes, will be without charge to the family.

"We want to see this burns unit put on its feet," the funeral company said.

$70,000 Needed to Start

Contributions can be made directly to the memorial fund at St. Joseph's, or left with Sands' at Sidney and Colwood and they will be forwarded.

The burns unit needs $70,000 to be built. Full cost is $168,000 with federal grants covering $77,000, a city of Victoria pledge of $20,000 and donations to date of $1,450.

Trade unions, through the Victoria Labour Council, made the burns unit their Centennial project. They were joined by contractors, through the Victoria branch of the Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C.

The fund-raising committee is made up of representatives of both labor and management.

The unit will be named after the late A. W. Toone, who was secretary of the Victoria Labour Council and mayor of Victoria.

Nine days ago, the fund raising committee started a Beds for Burns campaign and industries throughout Vancouver Island will be canvassed.

A survey has shown that in the Victoria area alone, 200 persons were treated for burns in the two major hospitals during a one-year period.

A bulletin from St. Joseph's Hospital earlier this week said the real danger involved in treating burns is that of infection.

Round Clock Nursing Care

"In Victoria hospitals at present, ideal facilities are not available to give the burns patient the greatest chance for recovery.

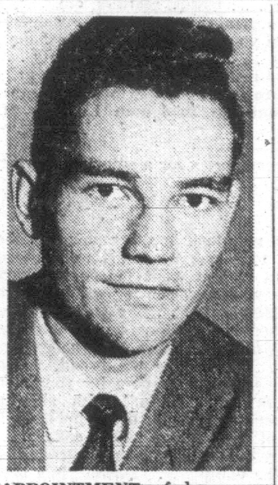
"Different beds throughout the hospitals are utilized for burns treatment, each requiring round-the-clock nursing care.

"While the patient is placed in the only adequate environment available for his care, it is a potentially dangerous environment regarding infection. Thus he is usually hospitalized for a longer period than would be required under ideal conditions."

The bulletin said a burns unit, with specialized equipment including asceptic air system to provide germ-free ventilation, lifting equipment and immersion tanks for hydrotherapy, "will give the patient an excellent chance for full recovery."

A burns unit would shorten the length of hospital stay, reduce deformities, lessen the number of repeat graftings and utilize staff to the best advantage.

The hospital said the proposed burns unit will be the most up-to-date west of Toronto and unique on Vancouver Island.



APPOINTMENT of lawyer Robert Hutchison as general chairman of the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal this fall was announced today. Mr. Hutchison's deputy will be Peter Darling. Mr. Hutchison is prominent in athletic circles and community endeavors. He has been a director of the Community Welfare Council, the Queen Alexandra Solarium and the YM-YWCA. No newcomer to the united appeal, Mr. Hutchison has served as group and division chairman and last year was deputy general chairman.

AMBULANCE DRIVER FINED $75

David Larsen, 1134 Pandora, was fined $75 Friday in central court when he was convicted of driving an ambulance without regard for the safety of others.

Court was told Larsen was carrying a patient into the city by the Patricia Bay Highway, with siren and red light on.

As he neared the Royal Oak intersection, he straddled the centre line to get by a car turning off to Royal Oak. An oncoming car passing a truck was forced to cut back in, and collided with the truck.

Larsen also carried the driver of the car to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Future Schools Should Handle Shift Classes

The structure of future schools should change so they can handle classes in shifts.

Schools must run year-round to produce a better return for the investment in education.

These were among suggestions in a community conference today on ways to bring the education system closer to the needs of modern society.

More than 100 representatives from every facet of society met in discussion groups at the Red Lion Inn to take part in Education '68, billed as a community meeting on today's and tomorrow's schools. (See earlier story Page 23.)

CLOSER TOUCH

Delegates will join together later today to try and thrash out some conclusions before dispersing.

One of their main aims will be to find ways educators and the rest of the community can keep in closer touch.

The conference is the second of its type, a sequel to last year's Centennial conference. It is jointly organized by the teachers and school trustees in Greater Victoria.

One group discussion on finance this morning emphasized the need for a higher budget priority for education.

Ask The Times

Q. Do United States bombers carrying hydrogen bombs patrol over Canada and if so under what authority? W.E.

A. U.S. planes regularly patrol Canadian, as well as their own, air space under the authority of the North American Air Defence (NORAD) pact. However, in news stories carried in the Times since the recent crash of a hydrogen bomb-carrying plane in Greenland, the U.S. has officially said its planes do not carry nuclear warheads over Canadian territory.

Has Speaker Stuck Out His Neck on 'Turtles'?

By PETE LOUDON

More than 2,000 years ago, when the Greeks were introducing democracy, they deliberated in "chitons."

More than 1,500 years ago, when the Roman senators were creating the bases of modern law, they sat about in "tunicas" and "togas."

But in the legislative chamber of modern British Columbia the rig of the day is business suits, buttoned-up shirts and ties.

This is progress?

Granted, the ancients looked as if they were still in their night shirts, but you can bet they weren't squirming in discomfort.

•

Undismayed by collars that constrict blood vessels and breath, not distracted by collar buttons nor the nooselike necktie which serves no purpose except to keep soup off your shirt, they were able to give their all to the problems of the day. The breeze got in where it counts.

But in the B.C. house, when Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) appeared in a turtleneck sweater and a natty sports jacket, Speaker William Murray Friday lowered the boom.

In a letter to all MLAs, Mr. Murray advised that conventional dress was in order unless the member could make a good case for deviating.

Mr. Murray was flying in the face of the fashion experts.

"Turtlenecks are in vogue in the States," said city clothier John Devlin today.

Eventually they'll take over, he thinks, "although I don't think I'd wear one formally in Victoria for some time to come."

Tom Price, often billed as the happy haberdasher of Yates Street, says, "Anything that creates a bit of interest, I'm all for it."

Douglas Street merchant Dal Horne says in mod centres they're being worn with tuxedos. It's part of the changing scene.

"A few years ago men wore tails that weighed as much as 40 pounds, to appear formal."

He said the turtlenecks are hard to keep in stock.

"They're a dynamic item suited to a dynamic government."

•

The new turtlenecks come in silk acetate, whites, blacks and colors, some with French cuffs, the popular styles ranging from $15.95 to $19.95—so pricewise they're a dressy item.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis sported one at the opening of "Spring Thaw" but he admits he'd hesitate to wear one in council or in the legislature.

Asked why, he's uncertain, but, "Adults can't quickly adapt to new fashions."

He admits the necktie is the most useless thing since buttons on coat cuffs.

Mr. Speaker—instead of asking the members to justify wearing turtlenecks—asked them to justify the necktie.

It's no wonder the women MLAs are always smiling.

They're probably the only ones in the House who are comfortable.

Road Safety Group to Meet Here in May

The 14th annual conference of the Canadian Highway Safety Council will be held in the Empress Hotel May 6, 7 and 8.

The conference will be opened by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes.

More than 18 topics, ranging from the role of medical advisory boards in licensing to seat belts will be covered.

In general session, workshops, debates and other meetings, more effective means will be sought to lessen the death toll on highways—more than 5,300 in 1967.

Special emphasis will be placed on the problems of drinking drivers, the need for improved vehicle inspection and the re-education of licensed drivers through special training courses and the education of young drivers through high school courses.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION

FUTURE MUSEUM WORKERS GET PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

These Gals Put 'Life' in Dead Glass Cases

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Burrowing in provincial archives, cataloguing old ships at the Maritime Museum, learning about the restoration of Indain art and dusting an old dollhouse at the Art Gallery.

It's all practical experience for seven students who are part of an unusual course at the Vancouver City College called Museum Function and Philosophy.

★ ★ ★

The students paid a five-day visit to Victoria as part of a program intended to introduce them to actual museum settings.

They also attend lectures by the experts: curator Peter McNair of the provincial anthropology department; Carolyn Case, curator of the history department; curator Will Hoare of the Art Gallery; archivist Willard Ireland; botanist Dr. Chris Brayshaw and restorer John Smyley.

It's the second year that the eight-month course has been offered. Students with Grade 12 as a prerequisite receive a certificate, those with first year university, a diploma.

Student Mavis McLeod has always been interested in display work and past cultures. And for Louise Hazel museums have always been "a pet thing."

Both girls are enthusiastic about the course.

"You get the professional man at the top with anthropology and history degrees, and the man who takes care of the displays at the bottom," says Louise. "We'll fulfil the necessary function of acting as an interpreter between the two."

★ ★ ★

They forsee no difficulty in getting jobs when the course ends in April.

"This course is designed for work in small outlying areas," Louise explained.

"Not many people have had special training and because of centennial year many places have built museums and now need people to run them."

Besides courses in academic work and museum theory, the students study restoration and conservation of artifacts, art techniques and display presentations.

But both Mavis and Louise are unhappy about the lack of opportunity for practical experience. "We have manuals on restoring damaged objects, tarnished metals, leathers and laces," says Mavis, "but we have to gather our own stuff at home or from friends."

But they are hopeful that the course will be adjusted when the new Vancouver Museum, which will have workshop facilities, opens in September.

Display work is changing Louise says. "No more dead glass cases; we're trying to get across the feeling of walking into a complete setting by using every kind of media as they do in psychedelic discotheques."

"We're trying to make displays as realistic as possible," says Mavis, "through sound effects and perhaps even smells.

"The emphasis is more on interpretation—relating the objects to people; making a story out of it," Louise added.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

The store that likes people . . .

We're convinced that Miss Frith's really LIKE people . . . as well as like selling to them . . . because they're continually thinking up new ways to make shopping in their delightful store more convenient and comfortable . . . Know what their latest improvement is? Brand new, extra-wide markings on their parking lot so that even if you've a great big car, you can manuoevre it in and out without fear of chipping or denting your own or a neighboring car . . . something you can't say for most parking lots! . . . Plenty of space for 11 cars at a time . . . more on Saturdays . . . Entrance is off Fisgard Street and there's a long canopy leading to the side door of the store, so do use it . . . Not new, but we think worth mentioning in case you didn't know, is that at Miss Frith's you can easily obtain a convenient revolving credit account . . . without carrying charges of any kind . . . Pretty helpful if you see something you can't live without but hesitate to pay for all at one fell swoop! . . . We saw some absolutely gorgeous new clothes at Miss Frith's this week . . . and new things are arriving every day . . . A piece-de-resistance is the Italian mohair coat, dress and stole ensemble . . . turquoise and white striped dress . . . same colors carried out in checks on the coat and triangular fringed stole . . . It's a size 12, and is ultra-smart . . . Miss Frith's Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas Street, 383-7181.

Don't wear ankle strap shoes unless your legs are slender—they make legs look heavier than they actually are.

Some real "plums" at Bridgman's . . .

As you are probably aware . . . Montague Bridgman's don't go in for much in the way of sales because their prices are always as low as possible for the quality merchandise they carry . . . BUT . . . you'll generally find a couple of tables in the front part of the store . . . and another on the mezzanine . . . containing all sorts of items marked down as low as half-price . . . either because they're discontinued patterns or lines . . . or there are only one or two of a kind left . . . We were looking over these bargains when we were in the store the other day and were simply amazed at the offerings! . . . Struck us this would be an excellent opportunity to pick up choice articles for future gifts . . . at a fraction of their normal cost . . . or to snag something nice for ourselves! . . . Just to cite a few thing we admire . . . a couple of beautiful big slate blue pottery vases perfect for branches or tall flowers . . . Several outsize Danish pottery ashtrays in heavenly colors . . . great gift for a pipe-smoker . . . Wedgwood and Royal Worcester dinnerware . . . plates, platters, etc. . . . A crystal decanter . . . a Swedish crystal vase . . . hand-cut crystal goblets that ring like a bell when you flick a finger against them . . . tall stemmed wine glasses . . . imported place mats . . . plus other things too numerous to mention . . . and all with price tags drastically slashed! . . . Drop in and see these clearance priced articles soon at . . . Montague Bridgman Limited, 811 Government Street, 383-0821.

The 1968 shoe story . . .

We're all getting used to the new look in shoes now . . . the broad toes, the little heels . . . that look so smart and are so wonderfully comfortable . . . But if you want to see the very newest look of all, go see the Bandolino shoes for spring which have just arrived from Italy at Munday's . . . "Festa," in black, brown or blue patent with crossed bone patent straps over the instep . . . will put you in mind of the demure little shoes you once wore at dancing school . . . They have the broad, round "baby doll" toe . . . which gives you lots of room for your own toes . . . And pretty as can be! . . . "Tullia," with slightly narrower walled toe, is a sling-back pump with little curved heel on the inner side . . . bone patent with bronze patent collar . . . "Mattia" is also a bone patent with walled toe and shaped heel . . . white cross strap trim on the vamp . . . "Susina" is a new spring version of one of last year's favorites . . . a camel melba calf shoe with elasticized T-strap . . . All these models are priced at $21.95 . . . Munday's also have a group of Bandolino flats which are most attractive . . . There's one in soft kid called "Sciecco" which comes in bone, black, yellow orange and green . . . costs but $11.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas Street, 383-2211.

Highlight your cheekbones by placing a blusher just on, or slightly above them.

See these new coats . . .

Don't for heaven's sake, let the nearly-bare windows and sheet-covered racks of clothes at Wilson's scare you off from going inside and asking them to show you whatever it is you're interested in! . . . Your favorite sales ladies are there to serve you and they don't in the least mind whisking those white sheets away to display the bright array of lovely new clothes for spring . . . which at the moment are like violets blushing unseen under their protective coverings . . . We got them to show us a few of the new spring coats when we were in this week . . . and believe us, some of them are enough to wax poetical about . . . especially the feather-light mohairs with their big, broken check patterns in lovely color blends . . . One is several shades of beige . . . another, gold and orange . . . a third, a symphony of pinks and rose . . . These are very wearable coats, and strike just the right blithe note for spring . . . Then there are the reversible coats from England . . . check one side, plain the other . . . and what's even better, these have matching check skirts to go with them, so you have the makings of a complete costume . . . two costumes, in fact! . . . And speaking of costumes, there are a couple of smart wool coat and dress ensembles . . . dresses, plain weave; coats, textured . . . slightly A-line . . . One is Wedgewood blue, the other a soft peach . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 383-7177.

Keep just as much up to date with your makeup as you do with your clothes, advises a famous cosmetician.

More coats for the younger set . . .

From Wilson's, we nipped into the Madam and Eve Shop . . . to be shown yet more coats which had just that moment come up from the shipping room . . . The M & E girls . . . Pam and Ruth . . . were as excited as children about these new English coats from Harlee of London, and insisted on modelling them for us on the spot! . . . Talk about style! They're just about the cutest coats for the young that we've ever seen (and when we say young, we're talking about figures rather than years) . . . One model, which is quite short, has a low waist, low patch pockets, and a swing to the back . . . shocking pink, sizes 7 and 9, and lime green, sizes 3 and 5 . . . There are a couple of double-breasted, plaid coats . . . lime and two shades of pink . . . which also have a pert swing to the back, and big patch pockets . . . Another very smart style . . . in light beige only . . . has a hidden button closing, slash pockets and some pretty nice welt seaming detail . . Two of these . . . one in size 3 and another, size 5 . . . This particular line of English coats has never been seen in Victoria before . . . and is exclusive to Madam and Eve . . . Coats are all wool . . . and we could scarcely believe our ears when we were told that prices are just $50 and $55 . . . It's an awful lot of chic and quality for the money! Madam and Eve, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Farewell to unsightly hair . . .

The House of Glamour has recently added yet another service to their long list for making us women look and feel our best . . . and this one's a humdinger! . . . It's a brand new method of superfluous hair removal called Unique Epilatory . . . fast, painless and effective . . . and done without benefit of needle, wax or chemicals . . . for a mere fraction of the cost of electrolysis . . . We won't go into the technical details here . . . but we're assured this is the very latest method of hair removal . . . that it takes hairs out by the root . . . is absolutely painless and completely safe . . . It can be used to remove unwanted hair from any part of the body . . . though we imagine it will be especially welcomed by women who have too much fuzz on their upper lip . . . a too low-growing hairline back or front . . . or dark leg hair showing through nylons or detracting from the pretty look of bare arms . . . The treatment is completed in a matter of minutes . . . and while we won't go so far as to say hair will never grow again . . . it will certainly be greatly retarded! . . . The Unique Epilatory treatment can be obtained ONLY at the House of Glamour . . . so make an appointment with Miss Dorothy, who is trained to perform this service . . . One thing no woman needs is superfluous hair . . . and this is a dandy way to get rid of it . . . House of Glamour, 658 View Street, 386-6188.

Men's jackets will be slightly longer and more shaped, with wider lapels . . . Many double-breasted blazers, sweaters, vests and coats.

St. Patrick's Day goodies . . .

There isn't a son or daughter of Old Erin . . . even unto the umpteenth generation . . . who hasn't a soft spot for the good St. Patrick and his day . . . which this year falls a week from Sunday . . . It's a weekend that calls for a bit of a celebration . . . a something special . . . maybe even a party . . . If you're planning such, do be sure to see what Welch's Candy Shop has to offer in the way of delightful, edible favors . . . There are, for instance, little shamrock-shaped chocolate shells filled with green and white jelly beans and wrapped in cellophane with a green bow . . . priced at 49c . . . Paddy pigs made of that pure, delicious milk chocolate Welch's are famous for, come in three different sizes, at 20c, 30c and 40c apiece . . . And our own special favorites . . . little burlap bags of Irish spuds . . . mouth-melting marzipans dusted with chocolate . . . These cost but 59c each . . . are conversation-making favors for adults and children alike . . . There's a jelly bean mix . . . green, naturally . . . that the kiddies will rejoice in . . . all kinds of chews . . . And if you've a friend with a drop of Irish blood . . . or even without . . . to whom you'd like to give a small token of affection . . . what nicer than a gift of Welch's mint-flavored chocolate truffles in their distinctive bright green mix? . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort Street, 383-6422.

Cramming for end-of-the-year examinations will be a little tougher for Patryce Loza this year as dreams of a summer in Europe vie for her attention. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Is Convinced Fee Was Worth Every Cent

BUYS SUMMER JOB

By PAT DUFOUR

Miss Patryce Loza, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Loza of Falaise Crescent, spent $150 to get herself a job this summer. She feels it's worth every cent.

Right now, she's not even sure what sort of a job it will be, or where, but this doesn't diminish her enthusiasm.

As you may have guessed, her employment agency is no run-of-the-mill affair. It's the International Student Information Service in Belgium and the International Society for Training and Culture, based in New York.

Working as a team, the two groups place students in summer jobs in Europe, billeting them in private homes whenever possible, and taking care of such details as work permits.

Of Patryce's $150, $50 goes to New York and the remainder to Belgium.

Patryce, who turns 21 this month, is a third-year arts student at the University of Victoria.

She has no idea where she will work in Europe. It could be in a cigarette packing factory in Belgium, waiting on tables in a Swiss, French or English resort, it might even be farm work . . . although she feels that this type of work is probably reserved for male students.

URGED BY FRIEND

Patryce applied to the organization in January on the urging of Miss Yvonne Gagnon of Hope, another Uvic student. They hope to fly to Europe together.

Patryce explains that an applicant is allowed to state which country he or she would prefer, although this doesn't guarantee that they'll be working in that area.

She hopes that she'll be earning her keep in Switzerland in a French-speaking area. Her reasons are obvious, the wish to polish up her French language and, as she puts it, "the opportunity to learn a little more about how other people live."

In anticipation of getting her wish, Patryce recently made her maiden swoop on skis during a visit to Whistler Mountain.

She reports that she weathered her initiation with nothing more eventful than the usual small tumbles.

Patryce will leave for Europe in mid-May on a plane chartered by Uvic and UBC students, flying from Vancouver to Amsterdam. There is a charter flight arranged by the groups which organized the job program, but it leaves from Montreal.

PLANS FOR TOUR

She expects to be in Europe about two months. Half of that time she'll be working and the remainder will be spent in touring.

The young student expects that her "grand tour" will take the form of a camping trip. She's had plenty of experience in this form of holiday, both with her parents and the Girl Guides. And, as she says, "it's a good way to see things on a restricted budget."

Two other students from the Victoria area have received notice of their acceptance in the job program. They are Miss Marjorie Turyk, 2820 Musgrave Street, and Miss Mary Ann McCammon, 1032 Craigdarroch Road. Excitement in their homes, too, runs high in anticipation.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Handy Scouring Pad Makes Cleaning Easy

By Penny Saver

I have as much fun shopping for other people as I do for myself. This last week's shopping trip with Jayne found me poking around happily, looking for items to fill her needs. I looked harder than usual because I knew my husband wouldn't be getting the bills. Of course, I wasn't altogether free from the danger of spending. I am always on the lookout for gifts and items that are too good for me to pass up. I always promise myself before I enter the store that I will just file the items away in my memory and come back to buy them when I really have a need, but my determination never wins out. Jayne says I am a born bargain hunter and should just give in to it, but she hasn't been married long enough to have an angry husband glowering over her bills for hours on end!

One item I did manage to file for future buying was a nylon scouring pad. I have promised myself one as soon as my steel wool pads wear out. This pad has the advantage of not rusting. It has the same matted texture of steel wool and works in the same way to cut grease and burned-on foods. It is excellent for all tough cleaning such as barbecue grills, broilers, ovens, even tough spots on lineoleum or tile floors. It can also be used to scrape vegetables or for such chores as belong to the man of the household, for example, cleaning whitewall tires. There is no soap in this pad (which makes it ideal as a vegetable scrubber) but the thick matted fibres will hold detergent for quite a while. Each pad, which is the size of a small sponge, is 29 cents.

While we were shopping I bought myself a handy item and counselled Jayne to do the same. It is a ceramic gravy separator. This is a good sized ladle with a spout starting at the bottom of the bowl. As the gravy settles out the fat will rise to the top and the less rich gravy stay on the bottom. It can then be poured off gently and the fat will be left behind. With a bit of practise I hope to be able to pour off the bits of meat that are so often found in gravy as well since the solids should sink to the bottom. These separators come in yellow, blue, brown and green and have pictures of the various kinds of meat printed on the insides. They have a hole in the handle to hang them on the wall. They are $1 each.

If you would like to know where I found these items, please call me at 382-3131.

Plans were made for the Coral Bell coffee party to be held on May 8 in Pendray Hall. Members of the Loyal Unit conducted the devotional period and served tea following the meeting.

Appoint Delegate

The Lake Hill Women's Institute appointed Mrs. D. Savage as delegate to the annual conference of the South Vancouver Island District Women's Institute when it held its recent meeting. The meeting will be held at Fulford Harbor, Salt Spring Island, on April 4.

Members voted to send a letter of protest to Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson concerning the cruelties suffered by mares and colts in the collecting of pregnant mares' urine for the manufacture of estrogen.

At the social meeting held on Adelaide Hoodless Day in February Mrs. D. Savage spoke on the founding of the Women's Institute by Adelaide Hoodless and of her own visit to Stony Creek, Ont. Miss D. Gordon Cox showed slides of a recent trip to the eastern States, Nova Scotia and Expo. She was assisted by Mrs. Robert Mercer. Mrs. J. Sutherland and Mrs. George Light were hostesses for the occasion.

Mrs. Light was appointed delegate to the provincial Women's Institute conference, to be held in Vancouver at the University of British Columbia from June 10 to 13.

Fish Farms and Robots Realized in Computer Age

Household robots, fish farming and computer-based living wi . all be commonplace before the end of the century, according to Commodore O. C. S. Robertson, who addressed the Women's Canadian Club in the McPherson Playhouse on Thursday.

"Science locked in a book that nobody opens is of no use to anyone." Commodore Robertson unlocked the book to give a "sneak preview" of "What Science Will Be Doing in the Next 20 Years."

Most famous for his Arctic exploration, the now-retired commodore has most recently acted as a scientific adviser to Expo.

Dealing with applied technology, Commodore Robertson said, "It takes about 20 years for a basic science breakthrough to come into use nowadays. All this racket about space—there are no new scientific facts involved here. The initial concepts date back to Newton's second law, formulated 300 years ago. Technology has just caught up."

FRIENDLY ROBOTS

Computer technology has made possible the manufacture of the robot. Describing robots which he had "met" at the company where they're made, he told how they now come complete with antennae. "Originally they'd had an embarrassing habit of bumping into people. The secretaries had to keep their office doors closed to prevent friendly robots from ambling through. The antennae have changed that though. Now when they meet an obstacle they stop, say "Excuse me" and move to one side. Not only that, but if one gets bored with your conversation it will say, 'Excuse me, I have to go sweep the floor,' and wander away."

MEGOPOLIS PROBLEMS

Describing the scientific advances that will affect the average person, he explained how a "megopolis," such as Los Angeles, grows to such a size that it begins to decay at the centre. "Los Angeles is dead. It's 28 per cent roads—it's just strangled itself to death. In 100 years time they're going to be digging up that city and wondering why it died. We must bring people, fresh air and fresh water back into the cities."

Illustrating fish farming, he told how a garbage reef could be made in Hecate Strait to attract fish. Two-man submarines could be sent out to herd the fish in to the dock and the fish, sorted at canneries close at hand, could be selected for size.

He also dealt with foods from the ocean, the necessity of pollution control, solutions to health problems, and the population increase.

He made a unique suggestion for curbing the population explosion. He noted that there was a definite correlation between a drop in the birth rate and women's hats. "Population fell off considerably after the Gibson Girl and Princess Eugenie hats," he remarked.

In closing he cautioned people to remember that technology has no morals, no feelings and the question facing civilization is "Can it supply the morality and know-how to harness this technology? We must know what we are doing or we can create a paradise or a hell."

President Mrs. H. H. Youson introduced the speaker, who was thanked by second vice-president, Mrs. R. L. Wallace.

Members of the nominating committee for 1968 were announced. They are Miss Elizabeth Forbes, immediate past president; Dr. Olga Jardine, a past president, and Mrs. E. C. Carson.

Every Woman May Now Quickly

To Herself: HE FORGETS I AM 50!

Lift Her Face Out Of Winter Lines, Wrinkles and Aging Dryness

. . . thanks to the "Wiesbaden Discovery" CEF-600

Helps Every Complexion Regain and Retain The Younger Look by Immediately Counteracting Effects of Winter's Icy Grip

No matter if your skin is typed dry, normal or even oily . . . no matter whether you enjoy being outdoors or prefer indoor protection . . . both frigid arctic air and overheated dry rooms dehydrate, drain skin of water and deprive it of the necessary moisture that pushes skin up and out to keep it as smooth, firm and wrinkle-free as the day you were married. And now, during the social season, when you particularly want to look your youngest best, "old man winter" works overtime to dry out and make your skin on face and neck flabby, sagging, rough, chapped and weatherbeaten. You look and feel years older than your age. And your husband . . . it makes him feel older too!

Your Chance for a Quicker Winter Youth

Medical journals have acclaimed the "Wiesbaden Discovery" known scientifically as CEF-600 and now embodied as the active ingredient in the cosmetic-like lotion named "2ND DEBUT." Apply "2ND DEBUT" nightly before retiring and daily before make-up. Day and night, it is constantly carrying water into the skin . . . counteracting all the skin drying effects of outside cold and inside overheating that chaps, dries, wrinkles your skin and makes it sag.

How 2ND DEBUT Works Quickly

Once again skin is moisturized, fresh, dewey radiant. Once again those aging lines and wrinkles are pushed up and out. Once again skin on face and throat is smoother and years younger in appearance. No matter how weather beaten your complexion may be, a youth-like color glows from within. Your complexion seems to have been born beautiful. Only 2ND DEBUT can bring about this fantastic skin youthifying miracle . . . in spite of winter's drying action!

For Extra Dry Skin—Or Mi-Lady In A Hurry—2ND DEBUT With Double Strength CEF 1200

New DOUBLE STRENGTH 2ND DEBUT contains CEF 1200 instead of CEF 600. It acts much faster to smooth and flatten skin made scaly by winter's icy grip . . . and it works quicker to push up and out the more deeply seated lines and wrinkles.

Important To Regular Users of 2ND DEBUT

Particularly in these winter months, in time will your skin revert to the lined and wrinkled condition it was, unless you keep using 2ND DEBUT day and night. Your skin is constantly exfoliating . . . old skin flakes off and away and new skin is constantly being born. In winter weather it is more important than ever that you keep applying 2ND DEBUT before retiring and before make-up if you want to retain your soft, smooth youthful looking complexion. Users of 2ND DEBUT with CEF 600 are urged to switch to 2ND DEBUT with CEF 1200 . . . double strength and to use it all winter long.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Broken Engagement Or Broken Marriage

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently became engaged to a very pretty girl. She's from a good family and so am I. All our friends and relatives think we are just right for each other, but the more I see of her, the more doubts I have about how this marriage would work out.

She can be sweet as honey one minute and very sullen and pouty the next. She has at times revealed a side of her I never saw before. She's spoiled, demanding and selfish. And stubborn, too. I'm not saying I'm perfect, but I don't think I could take this girl's unpredictable moodiness for a lifetime.

What I am trying to ask, my Dear Abigail, is this: How does a gentleman break an engagement?

DISENCHANTED

DEAR DISENCHANTED: The same way a lady breaks one. He simply tells his intended in the kindest manner possible that he's decided to keep his bachelor button and forgo the orange blossoms. You may be in for a few unpleasant moments, but you'll both survive it. Better a broken engagement than a broken marriage.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a husband who would jump up and set fire to the newspaper his wife was reading because it partly blocked his view of the ball game he was watching on television?

I was completely unaware that I was in his way as he never said a word about it. Could he have been showing off for the others who were also watching the game, or what? I have always tried to be a good wife, and he is what other people would call a good husband.

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Of all the attention-getting devices, this is one of the most childish, and certainly one of the most dangerous. Watch him for other signs of impulsiveness. He could be off his rocker, or headed in that direction.

DEAR ABBY: I have a good friend who is a registered nurse. She is married to a medical doctor, so it's not as though she doesn't know better.

Well to get to the point, this foolish woman got out of a sickbed (flu) to attend my son's wedding, and she thought she was doing us all a big favor!

She looked so pale and feverish, but she stayed for the reception and kissed the bride and groom!

On their honeymoon, they both came down with the flu. Now I'm not saying this woman gave it to them, but it strikes me as being a possibility.

Am I an old fuddy-duddy for feeling that sick people belong at home? If you agree, please print this.

FURIOUS

CONFIDENTIAL TO W.H.: I think one of our biggest problems is that too many adults, and not enough children, believe in Santa Claus.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069 and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

When you come to furnishing the interior of your home

THERE'S NO SUBSTITUTE FOR EXPERIENCE

"If only I had let you help me in the beginning." This is a statement that Standard designers often hear. Beyond the basic elements of design, balance and colour, experience alone can teach a decorator what to do and what not to do. These years of experience coupled with constant research and study . . . and the eminent desire to avoid "nearly right" . . . makes the desirable difference between the designs at Standard Furniture and many others. When you are ready to plan and select the furnishings for your home or one room, or even the corner of a room, come in or call and discuss the project with one of our staff. This could possibly make the difference between "Just So-So" and an effect that is distinctive and gracious . . . ever to be enjoyed. There's no charge for this service if your selections are made at Standard.

Rowland deM Brown, I.D.I.
Graduate of the New York School of Interior Design, Mr. Brown in his 23 years of experience has designed the interiors of many of Victoria's finest homes.

Glenn W. Oliphant, I.D.I., N.S.I.D.
A graduate of the New York School of Interior Design, now in his 15th year. Mr. Oliphant is often called upon to lecture on Interior Design.

John K. Fry, I.D.I.
With more than 19 years' experience in the Home Furnishings field, Mr. Fry has trained in all phases of interior design and home furnishing.

Peter J. Gazeley, I.D.I., B,Sc.

Down Payment Made Easier

OTTAWA (CP)—Legislation passed by the Commons Friday does nothing to cut the cost of new housing but it makes it easier to scrape up a down-payment.

The Commons took about an hour to approve amendments to the National Housing Act easing restrictions in the ratio of down payment to loan.

The amendments now go to the Senate.

Under the new formula, a home buyer may borrow 95 per cent of the assessed lending value of a property to a loan limit of $18,000. On a $19,000 home he could borrow the full $18,000 leaving a down-payment of $1,000.

The government now insures mortgage loans by institutional lenders using a formula under which the home buyer may borrow 95 per cent of the first $13,000 of the assessed lending value of a property, and 70 per cent of the balance up to a loan limit of $18,000.

On a home with an assessed lending value of $19,000 the existing formula would provide a maximum loan of $16,550, leaving a down-payment requirement of at least $2,450.

ENDORSE LEGISLATION

Opposition members were almost unanimous in passing the legislation but most took a slap at the government for not going far enough to make housing available to more Canadians.

George Chatterton (PC—Esquimalt-Saanich) said the amendments do not help people most in need of help. Those earning less than $8,000 a year could not qualify for NHA loans, thus two-thirds of Canadian wage-earners could not benefit.

He suggested raising the ceiling on NHA new-housing loans to $24,000 from $18,000. This could be done by cabinet directive. It would not help those earning under $8,000 but others would benefit.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) said his party reluctantly supported the amendments. But they did not solve the problems of high cost and high interest rates in housing nor the housing shortage.

Buyers in urban centres where homes cost $25,000 or more must seek out secondary financing and pay exorbitant interest rates. Mr. Gilbert proposed a tenants' bill of rights to protect them against landlords.

REMOVE SALES TAX

Gerard Laprise (Creditiste—Chapleau) urged removal of the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials. Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo suggested the government follow British Columbia's example and pay $130 a year towards home taxes.

Treasury Board President Benson said housing starts this year will likely run about 175,000, compared with 164,000 in 1967.

The minister, who has held the housing responsibility only since January, said he has been informed "we will be able to reach the economic council's objective of 585,000 homes to be built over the next three years."

Mr. Benson said he is particularly concerned about "how we provide a house for the fellow earning between $5,000 and $7,000 a year."

He said the idea of establishing a federal-provincial council of housing and urban development has not been abandoned. He had been considering this proposal with his advisers."

6,000 Seeking Full-Time Work; Situation Normal

Nearly 6,000 persons were seeking full-time work at the end of February, Canada Manpower Victoria manager George Bevis said Friday.

The total of almost 5,800 was, however, less than the 6,053 at the same time 10 years ago and during this period the labor force has increased by about 17,000.

He said employment is following the normal seasonal pattern and "in view of the continuing slow but steady demand in most local industries, it is anticipated that the normal seasonal upsurge will develop shortly."

COURT ORDER was signed Friday demanding appearance of former CIA director Allen Dulles in New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison's investigation of the Kennedy assassination. Garrison says he will ask whether Lee Harvey Oswald, alleged killer of the president, was a CIA agent.

House to Have Last Word?

The Liberals gave notice of motion Friday they will propose an amendment to the controversial labor Bill 33 which would take the power of compulsory arbitration out of cabinet's hands and put it into the legislature's.

The government's proposal is to authorize the cabinet to refer any labor dispute to a mediation commission for compulsory arbitration.

Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Gray) will propose an amendment to this provision which would allow the cabinet to refer any dispute to the mediation commission but its decision could only be made binding on both parties "with the assent of the legislature."

A second amendment would give civil servants an equal chance to obtain arbitration of a dispute with the government.

The present bill empowers the cabinet alone to decide whether it will send any civil service dispute to the mediation commission for settlement and whether the government will be bound by the decision.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) will propose an amendment that this course will be taken "at the request of either (the cabinet) or the group of employees" involved.

If you think we make a fortune on prescriptions, let us give you our 2¢ worth.

Most people think we make a big profit on every prescription we fill. The truth is, we don't. Not even close to it.

All we make is 2¢ profit on each dollar of sales. And that isn't a fortune in anybody's book.

On the other hand, we're not complaining.

Because last year in B.C., we filled more prescriptions than anyone else in our profession. Nearly a million. And that's a lot of prescriptions. Probably yours was one of them.

But no matter how many prescriptions we fill, we haven't forgotten what you have to pay out of your own pocket. Sometimes you have to dig a little deeper than you think you should. And we couldn't agree more.

And we do something about it. We help you keep down the cost of prescription drugs.

Like stocking drugs by generic as well as brand names. This alone can save you a lot of money, especially when you have to have a prescription filled again and again.

We also use the cost-plus professional fee pricing method as recommended by the Federal Government Harley Committee.

What does it mean to you?

It means when you have a prescription filled at Cunninghams, you only pay for the cost of the drug, (which is the same price we pay the supplier), plus a modest professional fee that never changes, no matter how expensive the ingredients.

So you see, at Cunninghams we really care. A lot. And we'll do everything we can to keep you a happy customer.

That's our 2¢ worth.

School Too Costly

PORT ALBERNI — The E. J. Dunn school could have cost less, says a special report received by the school board.

Trustee Earle Foxcroft, who headed a committee looking into the matter, said most of the planning that went into the school was from an "instructional viewpoint." The architect apparently had a "free hand" in the design, he said.

"At this time it would only be conjecture on my part to say how much could have been saved if the board were to rebuild making certain changes," he said.

He suggest that major cost-saving could have been acheived by building the school on one level.

Mr. Foxcroft's report was mainly concerned with the possiblity the new junior secondary school required before September, 1969, might be built along similar lines.

Reports studies indicated the cluster type school had many advantages over more conventional designs.

The committee recommended that R. W. Lawson, appointed as a special advisor in preparation for the new school, should be given the broadest possible terms.

'Why Indians Are Different', Wins Talk Round

George Manuel of Duncan won the third round of the Golden Gavel speaking competition Friday night by explaining "Why Indians are different."

Himself an Indian, Mr. Manuel is a member of the Cowichan Toastmaster's club.

He and runner-up Graeme Hynd, will proceed to the contest finals March 20 in Room 158 of the Social Sciences Building at the University of Victoria, at 8 p.m.

Third place was awarded to Peter van der Jagt.

The fourth round, to be held Monday night, same place and time, has a slate of eight speakers:

James Coates, Douglas Sinclair, Ted Gressy, Graham German, Jack Clark, Mrs. Opal Campbell, Bert Waring and David Osborn.

All sessions are open to the public.

'Real Revolution' In Schools Coming

By DERYK THOMPSON

Rebel students have become prime ministers, Patrick Watson told a University of Victoria audience Friday.

"But I hope it never happens to you," he said.

The former co-host of the controversial CBC television program This Hour Has Seven Days was speaking on student power to 400 students at a noon-hour lecture. Watson, now a university professor, was in town to attend the Alma Mater Society annual academic symposium being held at Parksville.

He cited the example of William Lyon Mackenzie King who led a student strike at University of Toronto prior to 1900.

Watson said what was happening on Canadian campuses today in terms of student power had very little to do with the real revolution that has to come in education.

"It must start in the kindergarten," he said.

"I can see the time coming when a child first arriving at school will be invited to help make decisions about what he wants to do.

"The idea that teachers should tell you what to learn is not valid any more," he said.

He said most students had been so well trained through high school that it became difficult for them to participate in the decisions that affected them.

Watson said in response to a question that he'd like to see students and faculty running the university together.

"If students have the capability to run it (university) more efficiently, then of course they have the right.

"But the attention shifts too much to this factor and the student grows far beyond the level of where he should be.

"Right now students must work for some creative relationship in the classroom," he said.

Happy marriages depend on compatible people

The internationally-known Vanier Centre employs a scientific method and IBM computers to discover and introduce compatible Canadian men and women...

The F. H. Vanier Centre of Canada Limited was formed to build happy marriages, thereby reducing the number of separations and divorces in Canada. It is the Centre you have heard discussed on national radio and network television in the United States and Canada.

The Centre's goal is achieved by applying a professional, scientific method, administered by IBM computers, to record and analyze detailed characteristics that suggest the compatibility of men and women registered with the Centre. Compatible registrants are then introduced.

The Vanier Centre is definitely not a typical "matrimonial agency." Those registered with the Vanier Centre are serious-minded, sincere men and women. Insincere applicants are rejected.

If you are a single man or woman, or a divorced or separated person, between the age of 18 and 75, you are invited to enquire if you qualify to register with the Centre. All correspondence is sent in unmarked envelopes and is completely confidential.

'Waiting Fer the Ferry'

ALERT BAY — Controversy is raging over the latest publicity stunt by the Alert Bay Board of Trade to gain attention to the need of an inter-island ferry in this north Island area.

Board of trade president A. G. Clelland has erected a make-shift ferry slip and parked an old, beat up panel truck on it. Large signs reading "We're waiting fer the ferry," are plastered on both sides. It is conspicious to all the cruise ships that call at Alert Bay during the summer.

Some inhabitants say Clelland's gimmick is a dangerous eye-sore. Others say it is a great idea and "about time we got publicity for the need of a ferry."

"Everyone is ready to criticize or compliment but no one helped me erect this one," said Clelland. "They want the ferry but won't work for it."

He said an Alert Bay to Port McNeill automobile race may be held this summer. The only catch is that Port McNeill and Alert Bay are on separate islands, nine mile apart.

"The old truck will sit there as a reminder, 'Waiting fer the ferry' until the government wakes up to our needs and acts on them," said Clelland.

Council Nursing $17,000 Hangover

CAMPBELL RIVER — When Campbell River municipal councillors heard that the provincial government was increasing its per capita grant they were jubilant—they felt like throwing a party.

Now they're sitting around nursing a $17,000 hangover.

Finance chairman Isobel Sandberg rapidly calculated they were $24,175 ahead with the increase until she looked at the other side of the ledger. The government doubled wilfare costs to municipalities which meant council would have to find another $29,676 this year. The government also plans on taking the estimated $10,525 in motor vehicle act fines.

The result?

They're $17,000 in the hole.

District administrator Larry Evans said the new $25 per capita grant looks good for the larger centres such as Vancouver but is of no assistance to the smaller areas.

"Some of the small towns get as little a $1 per capita more assistance and for this reason the government is asked to make an increase of $10 across the board," said Mr. Evans.

Firm Upheld On Suspending Two Drivers

PORT ALBERNI — A labor arbitration board has upheld MacMillan Bloedel in the suspension of two carrier drivers at the Somass sawmill. But the length of suspension was cut in half.

Suspension of the men, for failing to obey supervisory instructions, was the main issue in a walkout at the mill which ended earlier this week.

The arbitration board, composed of company and IWA nominees and a neutral chairman, handed down a unanimous decision that the two carrier drivers were suspended for proper cause.

But the board said the suspension term was too harsh and reduced it to 10 working days from 20.

WCB Studies Inquest Findings

Several courses of action are open to the Workmen's Compensation Board in the death of a Victoria man in a sawdust truck.

A board spokesman said today it could take no action, it could launch a prosecution or it could levy a penalty under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Arthur Cathers was found dead in a sawdust truck at Crofton early Jan. 30 after the truck had taken on a load late Jan. 29 at the Point Ellice sawmill of British Columbia Forest Products.

A coroner's jury ruled the company negligent in the application of safety regulations. Factors in the man's death included unsafe working conditions, laxity of WCB regulations and operation of company machinery by other than qualified personnel.

The WCB spokesman said in cases like this a copy of the coroner's jury recommendation and transcript of the hearing is obtained and considered by the director of accident prevention along with the board's inspectors' reports.

He indicated it would be some time before all this could be fully considered and a decision made on what course of action to follow.

'OVER-DEVELOPED BRAINS; UNDER-DEVELOPED GUTS'

Students Challenged to Act

By PAUL WILLIAMSON,
Staff Reporter

PARKSVILLE — Veteran television interviewer and commentator Patrick Watson was almost upstaged by an unemployed young man with only five years' schooling at a Uvic-sponsored seminar here.

Mr. Watson, keynote speaker at the three-day meeting which opened Friday night, challenged the students to do something about "your over-developed brains and under-developed guts."

And, when he finished, Jim McBirney put forth his own challenge: "I have an eight-month-old daughter. What are you doing for her world?"

Speaking to the 100 students, professors and guests, Mr. Watson, now a university professor, said that in his few hours with them he "felt a rightness of potential revolution."

"By revolution I mean change which has within it truly radical components."

He referred to the deteriorating student-professor relationship as "under-developed guts" and said universities have become "agree mills."

"Universities do not question much within or without and will not as long as a PhD is a test in effective footnoting and students go there to fit neatly into middle-class money-making structure.

"There is a great deal of questioning in pockets in the universities, but only when it is dominant will they be saved from the hypnosis of environment."

Mr. Watson said universities must move to a thorough study of man's media.

"One terrible thing mass media does is make us look on a world of billboards instructing us how to feel and how to respond. We are trained not to experience ourselves.

"We teach people to read critically; why can't we teach them to watch critically?" he asked.

He said if the necessary change is to occur "taking into account all the terrible things we have learned, a university must become an institution of higher un-learning."

After Mr. Watson's talk, Mr. McBirney stepped forward and bitterly attacked universities.

He said he left school after Grade 5 and looked to more educated people for leadership. "What are you doing for my daughter's world?" he asked.

Fielding the jeers and jibes of the gathering, he accused them of talking about change but returning to their classes and doing nothing.

His scolding split the group between those who objected to his uninvited interjection and those who felt he had jolted them into reality.

After a heated hour-long debate, Mr. Watson came to Mr. McBirney's defence.

"He injected something real into what was becoming too much of an intellectual game—and that's an immense thing."

The seminar continues today and Sunday.

Speakers to be heard include Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Charles Gregory, lawyer Lloyd McKenzie and Vancouver's town fool, Joachim Foikis.

Dorothy Hayden's book entitled "Bid Better, Play Better" has just appeared in a paperback edition. Like all bridge books, we can't endorse everything in it, but we can state that there is a great deal of good bridge common sense in it.

Today's hand, taken from it, shows how to bid a grand slam by locating specific cards in partner's hand by cue bids.

Some players would-not oppen the South hand with a forcing bid. The Jacobys aren't included in that group. True, you can set up a North hand that won't let South make game somewhere, but bridge players should not wait for absolute certainties.

Once South does open with two spades, North is interested in a slam but should not make any really aggressive move. Instead he should raise to three spades to show strength and spade support.

At this point South assumes that there will be no losers in trumps and wants to locate two key cards—the ace of diamonds and the king of clubs. Blackwood will let him find out how many aces and kings North holds, but he doesn't care about how many. He needs to know about those two special cards.

He bids four clubs and North should go to four diamonds. This bid clearly shows the ace. North has already set spades as the suit. South follows with four hearts to show first-round heart control. It makes no difference to North whether South is showing the ace or a void. North should bid five clubs. Once more, North isn't trying to get into clubs. He is showing second-round control.

This is enough for South. He goes to the grand slam and spreads his hand as soon as East follows to the first trick.

TO ADVISE ON SENTENCES

Youth Juries Tried

Attorney-General Robert Bonner Friday announced an experimental program of using "youth juries" in juvenile delinquency cases will be tried soon in Langley.

He said Langley Magistrate L. M. MacDonald has been authorized to empanel the teen-aged juries as "advisory boards on the question of sentence but not on the question of guilt or innocence."

He made the announcement in the legislature while commenting on a suggestion by Hunter Vogel (SC—Langley) that Grade 11 and 12 students be used as juries in juvenile cases to build a bridge "across the generation gap."

Mr. Bonner said he has "no hesitation towards experimentation" although he could not predict the program's results.

He added his department now also is studying the experience of "weekend jail" systems in other areas and feasibility of trying it in B.C.

Such a system involves a sentence which permits the prisoner to work at his job during the week and requires his detention in jail over the weekends, usually for rehabilitation programs.

Breathalyser Draws Sniffs From MLAs

Serious doubts were raised in the legislature Friday about proposed amendments to the federal criminal code which would set a reading on a breath-testing device as a means of convicting drunken drivers.

Tom Berger (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said he disagreed fundamentally with use of the "breathalyser" which would make a reading of .10 milligrams of alcohol an automatic conviction on an impaired driving charge.

His objections:

- It is a mistake to leave decisions on guilt to chemists in the laboratory when the task properly belongs in the courtroom;
- The procedure reverses the traditional "innocent until proved guilty" principle;
- The machine itself has been found less than 100 per cent accurate and human beings differ in their reactions to alcohol.

Attorney-General Bonner said the proposed legislation which the provinces must administer would involve serious enforcement complications and urged the federal government to give the bill "extensive" committee study.

NO PARALLEL

He said the need to take technicians, apparatus and other formalities as proof into court would have no parallel except perhaps in cases where sanity of the defendant is at issue.

A strong case could be made for taking impaired driving out of the federal Criminal Code and turning it over to the provinces to handle on the basis of sanctions, he said.

Mr. Bonner defended the accuracy and validity of the breathalyser test and suggested it could be used as a gauge of establishing the "utter private irresponsibility" of drivers.

"Shocking sanctions" could be applied by statute for such behavior, he said.

"We legislate too closely on a great number of matters which more properly ought to be handled under sanctions," he said.

SUSPENSION

Mr. Berger said the attorney-general had suggested in a letter to Justice Minister Trudeau that an automatic suspension of driver's licence for 30 days might follow a breath test reading of .10 or higher.

He said the 24-hour roadside suspension serves the useful purpose of protecting the public safety without submitting the driver to prosecution but the 30-day suspension would simply serve to deny many drivers their livelihood.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby Edmonds) said breathalysers should be made available to the public so people could test themselves before getting behind the wheel.

Mr. Berger pressed the attorney-general for assurance that the province would set up a compensation scheme for victims of crime, describing last session's bill passing the responsibility to municipalities as "wretchedly inadequate."

FORENSIC SERVICE

NDP members kept up the grilling of Mr. Bonner on the provincial corrections branch, asking for a commitment for a forensic service in the branch and for either a replacement for aging Oakalla Prison Farm or substantial changes in its use.

Mr. Bonner declined to give specific assurances of changes but said his department was concerned about the problems raised.

LCB REFORM HIPPIE TALK —BENNETT

Premier Bennett dismissed Thursday legislative liquor law reform debate in one sentence Friday.

"That's all hippie talk," he said.

MLAs from both sides of the house joined in a spirited debate calling for reform of antiquated liquor laws while the premier was in Vancouver.

He made his comment as he entered the legislature for Friday's sitting.

B.C. Gas Line Profits Hit

"A good friend of the government" made $8,000,000 in tax-free capital gains through shares of West Coast Transmission Ltd., an opposition MLA charged in the legislature Friday.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the government should insist on a reduction in natural gas prices and cited West Coast chairman Frank McMahon's capital gains as an example of profits in the industry.

Mr. Macdonald said West Coast sells gas to B.C. Hydro at too high a price and Hydro marks it up 35 per cent before reselling it to consumers.

He said B.C. Hydro made a profit of $6,500,000 last year on gas sales of $17,400,000.

"There is an area where the government is entitled to ask for a price reduction from Hydro," he said.

A 72-per-cent increase last year in net earnings of West Coast Transmission shows the need for reductions in its prices, he said.

Mr. Macdonald said Mr. McMahon in the early 1950s bought $700 worth of gas shares now worth $3,725,000 and later bought 200,000 shares at $6, now selling at $24, for a net gain of $3,600,000.

"This is about $8,000,000 made by one man in tax-free capital gains out of the natural resources of this province," said Mr. Macdonald, describing Mr. McMahon as a "good friend of the government."

CHICAGO WEST

Bonner Eyes U.S. Superport Business

Roberts Bank superport could serve the U.S. market—as well as Canada—as far east as the Chicago area, Attorney-General Bonner said Friday.

Mr. Bonner spoke during consideration of commercial transport department estimates Friday evening.

He said the superport would give Canadian railways "an immense opportunity" to expand their operation and said CPR president Ian Sinclair had approved of plans to ensure equal road and rail access to the port to avoid the monopoly situation at Burrard Inlet.

Mr. Bonner's estimates as minister of commercial transport were approved by the house in a rare 90-minute Friday night sitting.

The sitting followed a three-day, 13½-hour debate on Mr. Bonner's estimates as attorney-general.

BLOCK BENNETT

Liberal Leader Ray Perrault congratulated Mr. Bonner on his reasonable tone on the superport and said, "I hope the minister will keep the premier out of negotiations with Ottawa."

Mr. Perrault said the only "political" statements on the port question had come from the premier, not Ottawa, suggesting that the NDP had been wrong in criticizing "bickering" by both governments.

He termed "astounding" a statement by Mr. Bonner that he had not seen a letter from Transport Minister Hellyer setting out Ottawa's position on the superport issue.

"You mean he (Premier Bennett) hasn't shown it to you? Goodness sakes!" said Mr. Perrault.

William C. Mearns, B.C. Hydro executive director who was appointed to the B.C. Harbors Board along with Mr. Bonner and Industrial Development Minister Loffmark, was in the public gallery during the debate.

Mr. Bonner said the first official meeting of the board would be held this weekend.

The province would be responsible for development of a superport railway and a highway network leading to the port site, Mr. Bonner said.

Perrault to Speaker about Premier Bennett: "Would you please control that unruly member."

Commercial Transport Minister: "Will the honorable member (Perrault) please continue his personal attack on me."

Williams: "It's hard to tell whether the Liberal party is a branch line of the CPR or vice versa."

Attorney-General Bonner, after Perrault asked if he would be in touch with Transport Minister Hellyer on the superport question: "I don't know which rally he's attending tonight."

Bill Would Clear Junk From B.C. Roadsides

A bill to empower authorities to clean junk from the province's roadsides was introduced, as forecast by the throne speech, in the legislature Friday.

The bill authorizes municipal councils or, in unorganized territory, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell to order the removal of "rubbish, garbage, ashes, filth, discarded materials, or the bodies or parts of vehicles or machinery" which are considered "unsightly or offensive to any part of the public travelling on a designated highway."

The junk can be ordered removed if it is within 500 feet on either side of the highway centre line.

If the owner refuses to remove it within 30 days, the authorities can have it done and bill him for the cost. Anyone obstructing such removal is liable to a $500 fine on conviction.

Another section makes it a $500 maximum offence to abandon a vehicle along a public road, highway or on Crown land.

If a vehicle is left unattended for more than 72 hours in such a situation, the "burden of proof that the vehicle was not abandoned lies on the person who alleges it."

The bill also empowers authorities to remove abandoned vehicles and sell them to recover the expenses of removal or charge the last-registered owner the costs.

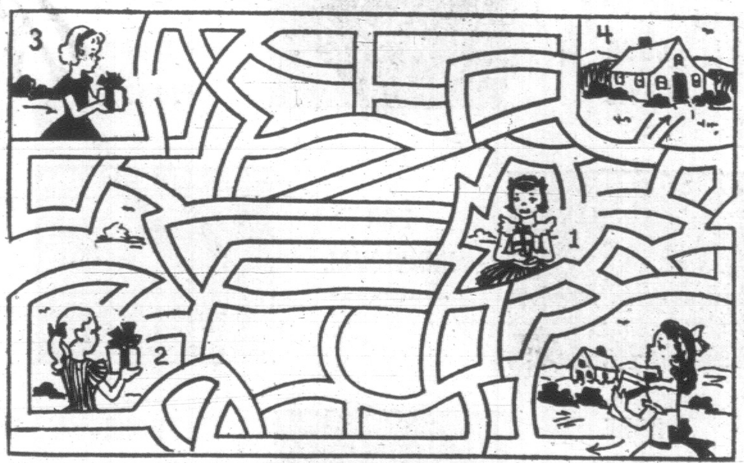
PARTY POOPER?



Though it's a long walk, Nancy, at bottom right, above, has consented to guide three of her friends to the scene of a classmate's birthday party. Can you find the route she'll take?

Nancy picks up her chums in 1, 2, 3 order and then proceeds to party site at upper right.

TABLE MOTION

You are playing billiards with a rather sharp character who wagers that he can make a billiard ball move in such a way that it will change its direction of travel and return to him without colliding with another ball or any other object.

He can, too. What's his secret?

ANSWER: He tosses it in the air.

Remains of cuttle fish believed to be 100,000,000 years old were found in eastern Bohemia.

SEE ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT?

How many states of the United States have populations of less than a million: 0, 2, 6, 15, 25? If you don't know, guess.

ANSWER: Fifteen.

Canada's population was 20,630,000 as of Jan. 1 — an increase of 378,000 above Jan. 1, 1967.

HORSE SCOPE

Saddle your wits for this test and see how far you can go. How many of the following horses can you identify by name?

1. The horse that "ain't what she used to be" is called ——.
2. Don Quixote's mount "all skin and bones" was ——.
3. Bellerophon had a winged horse: 8 ——.
4. The Lone Ranger rides to the rescue on ——.
5. Anna Sewell made —— immortal.
6. Sole survivor of Custer's Last Stand was the horse ——.
7. Robert E. Lee's horse was ——.
8. The celebrated charger ridden by Alexander the Great was ——.
9. Tom Mix's beloved animal was ——.
10. Which horse goes well with corned beef?

Answers: The Old Grey Mare. 2. Rosinante. 3. Pegasus. 4. Silver. 5. Black Beauty. 6. Comanche. 7. Traveler. 8. Bucephalus. 9. Tony. 10. Horse radish.

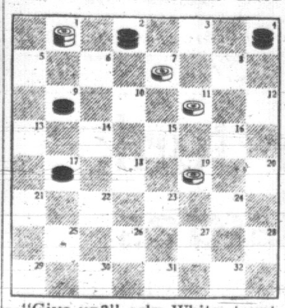
PICK 'EM IN 3-HORSE RACE

Three horses were in a race: Tally-ho, Lulu Belle and Sonny Boy. They were owned by Lewis, Bailey and Smith, but not respectively. Tally-ho was left at the post. Smith's horse was brown and white. Sonny Boy's previous winnings totalled $35,000. Bailey's horse almost won. Lewis' horse had never raced before. The winning horse was black. Who owned and what was the name of the horse that won?

No fair peeking at answer below.

SOLUTION: Smith's horse could not have won because the winner was black. Bailey's horse did not win. Therefore, Lewis' horse must have won. Tally-ho could not have won. Sonny Boy could not have won because he had previously won. Therefore, the winner was Lulu Belle.

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



"Give up?" asks White, taunting his opponent. "Ridiculous," replies Black, "I've got two kings to your one."

But White goes on to prove his point. White side, moving up the board, to move first and win in four moves is the challenge. How's it done?

Long-time champ Millard Hopper gives the winning moves below, if needed.

Solution: White 11-8, Black 2-11 (or 4-11), White 19-15, Black 11-18, White 1-6, [illegible], White 6-13-22-15-8.

Victoria West 'Neither Fire, Health Hazard'

Worried Parents Question Trustee

The ancient Victoria West elementary school is neither a fire nor a health hazard, school board chairman Peter Bunn said Friday.

He gave the assurance in the wake of a meeting of about 100 militant parents Thursday night worried about the condition of the three-storey school which is 70 years old.

Mr. Bunn fielded questions for about 90 minutes at the meeting. Three other trustees were there with him—Dr. C. B. Jameson, Les Karagianis and Ted Wood.

The board chairman said today he has instructed his building and grounds superintendent, R. H. Smith, to huddle with Fire Chief Eric Simmons right away to see if any additional fire precautions are considered necessary.

This is because the school "will be occupied for longer than we planned," he said.

PROGRAM SHELVED

Eight days ago when the provincial government announced a cost ceiling on classrooms it also shelved a $674,000 building program which would turn Victoria West into virtually a new school.

Mr. Bunn said the old school was "wretched" but not a fire hazard. It was a case of possibly supplementing the existing precautions.

He added that he has a letter from Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior metro health officer, saying the school is not a health hazard.

Fire Chief Simmons said this morning every school in the city is checked twice during the academic year and a report with recommendations sent to the school board. He would not say what, if any, recommendations his department had made on the Victoria West School.

Parents have indicated concern about a Grade 3 classroom with an oil heater standing in front of the only exit. Trustee Wood said Thursday night that if the heater blew up, the children would be trapped.

Vic West parents got support from several visiting PTAs at the meeting who said they would pester the provincial government until the replacement school was built.

Esquimalt MLA Herbert Bruch joined the meeting for a short time but had to leave early to take his place in the legislature as deputy speaker before parents got a chance to question him.

Before his departure he explained that available money had to be divided among several priorities.

Six Months Under Bond For Assault

Magistrate William Ostler Friday told a city youth he could get in serious trouble "running in packs" and put him on a good behavior bond for six months for assaulting a man.

David Masson, 18, of 1346 Merritt, had pleaded not guilty to assaulting Thomas Cuff, 1525 Arrow, the night of Jan. 14.

Court was told two groups of youths had been arguing outside a Douglas St. drive-in restaurant and a fight ensued.

At one point in the altercation, Masson had an iron bar in his hand.

During the fight, Cuff was held and kicked in the face by one of the group. Magistrate Ostler told Masson he must share in the blame for being part of the gang.

Thief Given Six Months Free Board

A man was sentenced Friday in central court to six months in prison on each of three charges.

Edwin Beggs, 26, of 1018 McClure, pleaded guilty to stealing two purses from Victoria store lunchrooms and defrauding the public by collecting welfare in two cities.

Court was told Beggs collected $147 for the month of February from welfare officials in North Vancouver.

On Feb. 9, he received a $15 food voucher by officials in Victoria and subsequently collected a cheque for $110 from the city.

Beggs pleaded guilty to the fraud charge Tuesday, after being convicted March 1 on the two theft charges.

He had taken the purses, both containing money, from employees' rest rooms.

The sentences were to be served concurrently.

Fun Ride Ends With $150 Fine

James Ross, 20, of 467 Fraser was fined $150 in central court Thursday for dangerous driving.

Saanich police reported Ross was driver of a car driven in an erratic manner on the Town and Country parking lot early Jan. 27, with another youth riding on the hood.

They said the car eventually collided with a parked truck.

PROTECTED BY LAW, but not protected well enough was this baldheaded eagle being cared for today by local naturalist Dave Hancock. Someone shot it up-Island last week and a reward has been posted for the gunman. The bullet pierced the left wing. Now, despite penicillin, the six-year-old bird whose seven-foot wingspread should be soaring over mountains, is thought to be dying. Mr. Hancock, left, and Al Oeming, Alberta Game Farm director, are as mad as the eagle looks. (Bill Halkett photo)

Blast Sends Gas Over U.S. Troops

N. Viet Shells Rock Khe Sanh

Times News Services

KHE SANH—A heavy North Vietnamese artillery barrage rocked the U.S. fortress here today, blowing up a depot containing tear gas bombs and sending fumes through bunkers filled with U.S. Marines. The death toll was not announced.

The gas cannisters were to have been used by the U.S. against North Vietnamese troops tunneling under barbed wire fence surrounding the fort.

The explosion today sent the gas over Marines holed up in bunkers of sandbags and concrete, forcing them to don gas masks.

More than 300 shells and rockets were fired from North Vietnamese gun positions on the surrounding hills in the heaviest attack in over two weeks of sporadic fighting.

Meanwhile Viet Cong troops continued to harass Saigon during the night, shelling a slum area and four military posts.

TET AFTERMATH

The shelling came in the wake of a government announcement today that the "last remnants" of a guerrilla force that infiltrated the South Vietnamese capital and its Chinese-populated twin city of Cholon for the Viet Cong Tet offensive in February have been "eliminated."

A government spokesman said the cities were "free" of Viet Cong after a month-long search-and-destroy operation which ended Friday.

During the operations, government troops killed 713 guerrillas, captured 41 and held 1,585 suspects for questioning, he said. Government casualties were put at 67 men killed, 216 wounded and three missing.

SHELL HOUSING AREA

In renewed attacks during the night, the Viet Cong slammed three mortar rounds into a police dependents' housing area in the slums of southern Saigon. Four civilians were killed and 20 were wounded.

Viet Cong troops shelled four other South Vietnamese military posts on the outskirts of Saigon. Casualties at two of the installations were not reported. At the third, spokesmen said there were none, but a quantity of ammunition went up in flames. At the fourth post, casualties were said to be light.

Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky today urged the Vietnamese people to "fight to the last man" to prevent the country from falling into Communist hands.

He was addressing a Saigon ceremony to decorate soldiers.

U.S. troops in armored personnel carriers battled the Viet Cong in heavy fighting along the coastal lowlands below Da Nang today.

First reports said 85 Viet Cong were killed, with the fighting continuing nine miles northwest of the provincial capital of Tam Ky.

Heavy fighting also was reported for the second day in a row along the eastern section of the demilitarized zone near Dong Ha, a supply centre for other bases along the frontier.

South Vietnamese headquarters said government infantry killed 50 guerrillas Friday. Nine South Vietnamese soldiers were killed.

GUN-PACKING ELEPHANTS U.S. TARGET

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. planes today bombed an elephant carrying ammunition on the Ho Chi-minh supply trail in the central highlands of South Vietnam.

Pilots reported four large elephants loaded with guns were moving toward the American base at Dak To.

Rockets were fired and bombs were dropped but three elephants escaped into the bush.

'Campaign Of Slander'

STUTTGART (AP) — Chancellor Kurt George Kiesinger said today internal critics are waging a campaign of "permanent slander" against the West German state.

Kiesinger said it has become more necessary than ever before to counter the attacks, and he warned of what he said are attempts by utopians of the "new left" to make a "pseudo-religion" of democracy.

President Heinrich Luebke and Kieseinger have been under fire for his former membership in the Nazi party.

IN RHODESIA MONDAY

Six Negroes To Be Hanged

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Lawyers today worked on last-minute appeals for the lives of six Negroes, scheduled to be hanged Monday, as Rhodesian leaders prepared for new fury abroad at the prospect of more executions.

Reliable sources said the six men will mount the gallows, three at a time, shortly after 8 a.m. in the small execution room at the Salisbury central prison.

Two of the condemned men, Francisc Chimsoro Chiresa and Takauyare Heremiah, have lodged appeals for clemency against their sentences, imposed for the shotgun killing of an African tribal chief.

Appeals for the other four also are expected to be lodged during the weekend.

Observers said Prime Minister Ian Smith and his cabinet were clearly determined to press ahead with the executions—barring successful appeals—despite the new wave of condemnation they can expect from abroad.

All six men have been imprisoned for three years or more.

Three of them were sentenced for gasoline bomb attacks on houses, a charge which carries a mandatory death sentence.

In London, Bernard Sheridan, the lawyer who petitioned the Queen to reprieve three men hanged Wednesday, said he did not think a similar petition would be made to her for the six.

'HUMANITY IGNORED' SAYS POPE

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul today deplored the hanging of three Negroes in Rhodesia and voiced his "deepest hope" that Prime Minister Ian Smith's regime would avoid future executions.

The spiritual leader of the Roman Catholic Church expressed this sentiment in a letter to the Archbishop of Salisbury, Most Rev. Francis William Markall.

The Pope said he had received with "deep pain" the news of the three hangings Wednesday.

He contended "the reasons of humanity" were ignored.

The letter was released at the Vatican after the pontiff celebrated mass in his private chapel with seminary students from South African countries.

The Vatican said the purpose of the mass was "to pray to God for Christian peace, civil concord and prosperity for those peoples troubled by racial questions and afflicted by the sad events of recent days."

Tibet Torn By Fighting

DHARMASALA, India (Reuters) — The exiled Dalai Lama of Tibet today told of new reports that "fierce fighting" between two factions in Tibet was causing heavy casualties and cutting communications.

He said the fighting was between the "cultural revolutionary rebels," supported by militant Chinese Red Guards, and the "great alliance" supported by the military.

Tanker Towed Into Sound For Surveys

The battered Liberian tanker Mandoil II was towed into Nootka Sound on the west coast of Vancouver Island today by three Victoria tugs.

"She is being towed to a sheltered part of the sound, and should reach there before dark," said an official of Island Tug and Barge in Victoria.

"A survey will then be made to determine what repairs are necessary, and these will ultimately be done in Victoria or Vancouver."

The 23,500-ton tanker was met at the mouth of Nootka Sound by a barge from Victoria loaded with salvage and repair equipment.

Officials of Island Tug and Barge flew to the scene this morning and inspectors of the federal transport department checked the tanker for oil seepage.

SEEPAGE STOPPED

They reported the seepage had stopped and gave permission for the tanker to be towed into the sound.

More than 500,000 gallons of oil have seeped from the tanker since she collided with the Japanese freighter Suwahara Maru in dense fog 350 miles off the Oregon coast Feb. 28.

The four ruptured oil tanks have now been washed clean and other tanks are showing no sign of leakage.

The Victoria tugs Sudbury II and Island Sovereign fought a desperate battle in boiling seas to get tow lines attached to the floundering vessel and were assisted by the tug Island Monarch.

They towed the tanker to Nootka Sound on instructions from the owners because it was the most accessible and offers shelter while surveys are carried out. It was shorter than coming to Victoria.

Fires which have flared intermittently in the tanker's

TIDE OF OIL BLOTS BEACHES IN BAHAMAS

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — A tide of thick, black oil washed onto the pink beaches of Eleuthera Island today from the hold of a tanker battered by seas up to 20 feet and grounded on a reef near Point James.

A tug stood by half a mile from the 555-foot Gen. Colocotronis, waiting for seas to diminish. The U.S. Coast Guard in Miami said there seemed little hope of saving the grounded vessel.

Detergents to emulsify the oil were being flown from Florida and New York in an effort to keep the slick from spreading to all of the 100-mile seaward beaches on one of the most scenic islands of the Bahamas chain.

The Greek tanker washed onto the rocks Thursday night with a dead engine when the ship's fuel line broke and the engine room flooded.

Tax Approved In First Round

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The Liberal government appears to be secure in office, at least until after a new leader is chosen to succeed Prime Minister Pearson.

That assumption, of course, is valid only if Liberal members and cabinet ministers remain close to their Commons seats and avoid the error of relying naively on the limited goodwill of the opposition.

Friday Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's new tax measures cleared their first hurdle ae the resolution was passed 124 to 101, quickly followed by first reading of the bill.

On Monday the Commons will carry on with second reading of the tax bill and the optimistic view is that third and final reading may come within a couple of days.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas have indicated they do not intend to prevent an early decision on the bill.

Few opposition speakers are scheduled and the government obviously is planning to keep its troops in Ottawa for the votes which inevitably will be called.

Three weeks ago Mr. Sharp's original income tax bill was defeated in the Commons, throwing Parliament Hill into near-chaos.

The new bill spreads tax increases between individuals and corporations and Mr. Sharp has added such inducements as a further cut in government spending and a wage-price review board as evidence of his desire to promote financial and economic stability.

OPPOSED

His bill is not satisfactory to the Conservatives, New Democrats or Creditistes, who all reject increased taxes as the answer to current economic problems.

They will all probably vote against it, but in the minority House the Liberals need only one additional body to tie a vote plus Liberal Speaker Lucien Lamoureux to ensure a bare victory.

Such tight conditions will

STUDENTS TRAP U.K. DEFENCE MINISTER IN CAB

Egg, Tomato Barrage for Healey

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Violence erupted Friday night when 1,000 students battled 200 police fighting to protect Defence Minister Denis Healey.

Healey was trapped in his cab as it was kicked, and pelted with eggs and tomatoes by a screaming mob of left-wing demonstrators.

Police and students clashed as demonstrators tore into the cab, battering the roof, sides and hood and ripping off wing mirrors. A window was shattered.

Bicycles were hurled in front of the cab and several parked autos were lifted off the roadway and dumped on the sidewalk.

Healey, who sat grim-faced in the cab during the seven-minute siege, had addressed the university's Democratic Labor Club.

When he left he was confronted by students waving placards denouncing the Vietnam war and the Greek military regime.

The protest was organized by the University Labor Club, the Radical Students' Alliance and the University United Nations Association.

PRINCIPAL URGES ACTION FOR SURVIVAL

Teachers 'Too Fear-Ridden' to Speak

By DON VIPOND

A Victoria high school principal says it's time to stop worrying about freedom for students and consider survival for teachers.

"Now is the time for all teachers who see gross problems in the school situation to say so," says Horace Dawson, principal of S. J. Willis junior secondary school.

He suggests that if enough teachers speak out, Education Week can be stretched into a "memorable" Education Month.

A veteran of 37 years in teaching, Mr. Dawson is a former executive member of the principals' association and has served on committees of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

HAMSTRUNG

He sees the local school system hamstrung by fearful teachers, by committees of trustees and teachers which are doomed to failure and by a provincial government which won't do the job.

"What the Victoria school system needs is a guts program by teachers," says Mr. Dawson. "We are failing in our professional duty by remaining individually silent.

"It's time for teachers individually to come out of the bleachers to form a team in the arena."

Teachers, he says, are fear-ridden.

They suffer from the pressures of over-sized classes, the most overcrowded of any in B.C. secondary schools.

They suffer from the uncertainty generated by a swiftly-moving revolution in social values.

"But worst of all from their own fear of condemnation from society if they speak out."

The profession will only gain the significant respect of the parents when its members stand up for what they believe is needed to make the system work, he suggests.

And he predicts that if mass resignations were the weapon used by teachers to gain their ends, many hundreds of them would "stick by their guns to the bitter end."

Trustees and teachers working together in committees seem tied too closely to the public purse to speak plainly.

"But individual teachers can voice their concern—and if enough do they'll be listened to."

While school construction drops millions of dollars behind requirements, the Bennett government can produce $25 million "in three minutes" for a superport.

"It's time that we decided the provincial government is not going to do enough in the next year or two. The local authorities will have to come to grips with the problem or cause children to suffer the dire consequences."

The school system is headed for a "nervous breakdown" unless parents of Greater Victoria become much more concerned, says Mr. Dawson.

"What is needed is concern for those who make any educational organization possible—the teachers."

SAANICH POLICEMEN GET PARITY

Saanich and its policemen agreed to a new one-year contract Friday which will provide parity with the city.

Police commission chairman Hugh Curtis said the settlement represents a wage increase of just over 6 per cent for a first-class constable, who now will make $620 a month.

He said he subscribes "to the principle of parity between Saanich and city policemen" when the settlement is a reasonable one. He described the negotiations as good, without recourse to arbitration.

The police contract is the first one settled in Saanich municipality. Negotiations are in progress covering firefighters and inside and outside municipal employees.

Need for Burns Unit 'Brought Home to Us'

Boy Loses Fight After 87 Days

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The tragic death of a 14-year-old boy has given new impetus to a joint labor-industry campaign for a special burns treatment unit in St. Joseph's Hospital.

David Doyle died Friday, 87 days after suffering burns to 85 per cent of his body after a one-gallon can he was holding exploded behind his home at 2780 Millstream.

A hospital spokesman said this morning that with such extensive burns, any person would have to be "extremely lucky" to survive.

The family has declined flowers and asked that donations be made to the A. W. Toone Memorial Fund for the burns unit at St. Joseph's.

The chairman of the unit's fund-raising committee, John Nicol, said this morning the sympathy of all fund committee members is extended to the family "in a real and meaningful manner."

"Can this bring to all Vancouver Island residents the need for such a burns unit in St. Joseph's? The medical profession is well aware of the danger of infection at times when burns occur and such treatment and equipment and isolation is imperative.

"Co-operation is the key which brought industry and labor together to start this burns unit. Today we have one more case of the need for this unit brought home to each of us."

Sands Mortuary announced this morning that the funeral service Monday, at 11 a.m. in the Memorial Chapel of Chimes, will be without charge to the family.

"We want to see this burns unit put on its feet," the funeral company said.

$70,000 Needed to Start

Contributions can be made directly to the memorial fund at St. Joseph's, or left with Sands' at Sidney and Colwood and they will be forwarded.

The burns unit needs $70,000 to be built. Full cost is $168,000 with federal grants covering $77,000, a city of Victoria pledge of $20,000 and donations to date of $1,450.

Trade unions, through the Victoria Labour Council, made the burns unit their Centennial project. They were joined by contractors, through the Victoria branch of the Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C.

The fund-raising committee is made up of representatives of both labor and management.

The unit will be named after the late A. W. Toone, who was secretary of the Victoria Labour Council and mayor of Victoria.

Nine days ago, the fund raising committee started a Beds for Burns campaign and industries throughout Vancouver Island will be canvassed.

A survey has shown that in the Victoria area alone, 200 persons were treated for burns in the two major hospitals during a one-year period.

A bulletin from St. Joseph's Hospital earlier this week said the real danger involved in treating burns is that of infection.

Round Clock Nursing Care

"In Victoria hospitals at present, ideal facilities are not available to give the burns patient the greatest chance for recovery.

"Different beds throughout the hospitals are utilized for burns treatment, each requiring round-the-clock nursing care.

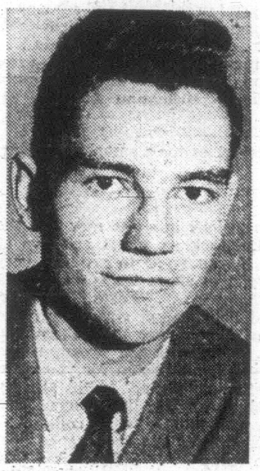
"While the patient is placed in the only adequate environment available for his care, it is a potentially dangerous environment regarding infection. Thus he is usually hospitalized for a longer period than would be required under ideal conditions."

The bulletin said a burns unit, with specialized equipment including asceptic air system to provide germ-free ventilation, lifting equipment and immersion tanks for hydrotherapy, "will give the patient an excellent chance for full recovery."

A burns unit would shorten the length of hospital stay, reduce deformities, lessen the number of repeat graftings and utilize staff to the best advantage.

The hospital said the proposed burns unit will be the most up-to-date west of Toronto and unique on Vancouver Island.

ARTHUR MAYSE ON VACATION



APPOINTMENT of lawyer Robert Hutchison as general chairman of the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal this fall was announced today. Mr. Hutchison's deputy will be Peter Darling. Mr. Hutchison is prominent in athletic circles and community endeavors. He has been a director of the Community Welfare Council, the Queen Alexandra Solarium and the YM-YWCA. No newcomer to the united appeal, Mr. Hutchison has served as group and division chairman and last year was deputy general chairman.

AMBULANCE DRIVER FINED $75

David Larsen, 1134 Pandora, was fined $75 Friday in central court when he was convicted of driving an ambulance without regard for the safety of others.

Court was told Larsen was carrying a patient into the city by the Patricia Bay Highway, with siren and red light on.

As he neared the Royal Oak intersection, he straddled the centre line to get by a car turning off to Royal Oak. An oncoming car passing a truck was forced to cut back in, and collided with the truck.

Larsen also carried the driver of the car to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

ALSO YEAR-ROUND

Future Schools Should Handle Shift Classes

The structure of future schools should change so they can handle classes in shifts.

Schools must run year-round to produce a better return for the investment in education.

These were among suggestions in a community conference today on ways to bring the education system closer to the needs of modern society.

More than 100 representatives from every facet of society met in discussion groups at the Red Lion Inn to take part in Education '68, billed as a community meeting on today's and tomorrow's schools. (See earlier story Page 23.)

Delegates will join together later today to try and thrash out some conclusions before dispersing.

One of their main aims will be to find ways educators and the rest of the community can keep in closer touch.

The conference is the second of its type, a sequel to last year's Centennial conference. It is jointly organized by the teachers and school trustees in Greater Victoria.

One group discussion on finance this morning emphasized the need for a higher budget priority for education.

Ask The Times

Q. Do United States bombers carrying hydrogen bombs patrol over Canada and if so under what authority? W.E.

A. U.S. planes regularly patrol Canadian, as well as their own, air space under the authority of the North American Air Defence (NORAD) pact. However, in news stories carried in the Times since the recent crash of a hydrogen bomb-carrying plane in Greenland, the U.S. has officially said its planes do not carry nuclear warheads over Canadian territory.

Has Speaker Stuck Out His Neck on 'Turtles'?

By PETE LOUDON

More than 2,000 years ago, when the Greeks were introducing democracy, they deliberated in "chitons."

More than 1,500 years ago, when the Roman senators were creating the bases of modern law, they sat about in "tunicas" and "togas."

But in the legislative chamber of modern British Columbia the rig of the day is business suits, buttoned-up shirts and ties.

This is progress?

Granted, the ancients looked as if they were still in their night shirts, but you can bet they weren't squirming in discomfort.

●

Undismayed by collars that constrict blood vessels and breath, not distracted by collar buttons nor the noose-like necktie which serves no purpose except to keep soup off your shirt, they were able to give their all to the problems of the day. The breeze got in where it counts.

But in the B.C. house, when Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) appeared in a turtleneck sweater and a natty sports jacket, Speaker William Murray Friday lowered the boom.

In a letter to all MLAs, Mr. Murray advised that conventional dress was in order unless the member could make a good case for deviation.

Mr. Murray was flying in the face of the fashion experts.

"Turtlenecks are in vogue in the States," said city clothier John Devlin today.

Eventually they'll take over, he thinks, "although I don't think I'd wear one formally in Victoria for some time to come."

Tom Price, often billed as the happy haberdasher of Yates Street, says, "Anything that creates a bit of interest, I'm all for it."

Douglas Street merchant Dal Horne says in mod centres they're being worn with tuxedos. It's part of the changing scene.

"A few years ago men wore tails that weighed as much as 40 pounds, to appear formal."

He said the turtlenecks are hard to keep in stock.

"They're a dynamic item suited to a dynamic government."

●

The new turtlenecks come in silk acetate, whites, blacks and colors, some with French cuffs, the popular styles ranging from $15.95 to $19.95—so pricewise they're a dressy item.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis sported one at the opening of "Spring Thaw" but he admits he'd hesitate to wear one in council or in the legislature.

Asked why, he's uncertain, but, "Adults can't quickly adapt to new fashions."

He admits the necktie is the most useless thing since buttons on coat cuffs.

Mr. Speaker—instead of asking the members to justify wearing turtlenecks—asked them to justify the necktie.

It's no wonder the women MLAs are always smiling.

They're probably the only ones in the House who are comfortable.

Road Safety Group to Meet Here in May

The 14th annual conference of the Canadian Highway Safety Council will be held in the Empress Hotel May 6, 7 and 8.

The conference will be opened by Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes.

More than 18 topics, ranging from the role of medical advisory boards in licensing to seat belts will be covered.

In general session, workshops, debates and other meetings, more effective means will be sought to lessen the death toll on highways—more than 5,300 in 1967.

Special emphasis will be placed on the problems of drinking drivers, the need for improved vehicle inspection and the re-education of licensed drivers through special training courses and the education of young drivers through high school courses.

FUTURE MUSEUM WORKERS GET PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE

These Gals Put 'Life' in Dead Glass Cases

By KATHRINE THOMAS

Burrowing in provincial archives, cataloguing old ships at the Maritime Museum, learning about the restoration of Indain art and dusting an old dollhouse at the Art Gallery.

It's all practical experience for seven students who are part of an unusual course at the Vancouver City College called Museum Function and Philosophy.

The sutudents paid a five-day visit to Victoria as part of a program intended to introduce them to actual museum settings.

They also attend lectures by the experts: curator Peter McNair of the provincial anthropology department; Carolyn Case, curator of the histroy department; cuator Will Hoare of the Art Gallery; archivist Willard Ireland; botanist Dr. Chris Brayshaw and restorer John Smyley.

It's the second year that the eight-month course has been offered. Students with Grade 12 as a prerequisite receive a certificate, those with first year university, a diploma.

Student Mavis McLeod has always been interested in display work and past cultures. And for Louise Hazel museums have always been "a pet thing."

Both girls are enthusiastic about the course.

"You get the professional man at the top with anthropology and history degrees, and the man who takes care of the displays at the bottom.'," says Louise. "We'll fulfil the necessary funcition of acting as an interpreter between the two."

★ ★ ★

They forsee no difficulty in getting jobs when the course ends in April.

"This course is designed for work in small outlying areas," Louise explained.

"Not many people have had special training and because of centennial year many places have built museums and now need people to run them."

Besides courses in academic work and museum theory, the students study restoration and conservation of artifacts, art techniques and display presentations.

But both Mavis and Louise are unhappy about the lack of opportunity for practical experience. "We have manuals on restoring damaged objects, tarnished metals, leathers and laces," says Mavis," but we have to gather our own stuff at home or from friends.

But they are hopeful that the course will be adjusted when the new Vancouver Museum, which will have workshop facilities, opens in September.

Display work is changing Louise says. "No more dead glass cases; we're trying to get across the feeling of walking into a complete setting by using every kind of media as they do in psychedelic discotheques."

★ ★ ★

"We're trying to make displays as realistic as possible," says Mavis," through sound effects and perhaps even smells."

"The emphasis is more on interpretation—relating the objects to people; making a story out of it," Louise added.
